Wheeling, W. Va.—It becomes expedient for Lincoln county, West Virginia, to tell of one of her few natural curiosities. As the accompanying picture shows, this rock is called "Maul Rock," because of its similarity to a maul. The base of the rock is about 1,000 feet above sea level and is made up of large boulders. The stem of the rock is 20 feet high and will average about seven feet in diameter. The cap, or maul part, is about six feet thick and is 38 feet in circumference. The stem is of a soft formation and is fast crumbling away, since the timber has died that was a great protection from the force of strong winds. By mounting the rock, by means of a ladder that is kept there, a magnificent view of the West Virginia hills can be obtained.

"MUMMY" WHEAT SWINDLE

Western Farmers Who Paid $5 a Pint Find They Bought a Common Variety.

Kansas City, Mo.—Numerous farmers in Western Missouri and Eastern Kansas have been swindled by men who last spring sold them small quantities of what they called "mummy" wheat, taken from old Egyptian tombs and said to be vastly superior in quality and yield to the Turkey red wheat usually grown.

The swindlers purported that there was only a small quantity of the wheat and they sold it for as much as $5 a pint. This quantity, they said, would produce enough the second year to seed a quarter section, which would yield from 50 to 75 bushels to the acre and would grade higher than the common hard wheat.

Farmers who planted the wheat found that it was a common variety, not as good as the Turkey red, and did not yield any better. It is supposed the wheat had been stored in a dry place for several years, which gave it the "mummy" appearance.

JAMESON L. FINNEY VICTIM OF BLAZE WHICH DESTROYS PART OF THE CARLTON.

PROMINENT AMERICANS

Narrow Escapes Numerous and Many Guests Lose Their Baggage.—Arizonan Rescues Three Persons.

London, Eng. — Jameson Lee Finney, the American actor, perished in a fire which destroyed a portion of the Carlton hotel, where he was a guest. He has not been seen since the fire and a roll call of the hotel staff shows that none of its members is missing.

The body was found in the bathroom adjoining Mr. Finney's room on the fifth floor of the annex. The face was so badly charred that the features were unrecognizable. Apparently Mr. Finney had gone into the bathroom to bathe before dressing and was asphyxiated. The body was taken to the morgue later in the evening. A large number of American guests escaped from the hotel, but lost their baggage.

The alarm caught them in every condition of undress. Al Pratt of New York, with his wife, occupied a room on the top floor. They saved nothing.

Mrs. C. Shippy and son and Miss Jessie Gardner of Chicago had just arrived at the hotel from Oxford. They had just time to leave their rooms in the scantiest of attire and leave their luggage which the porters had only a moment before deposited in their rooms.

Keene One of Coolest.

James R. Keene, the New York financier and horseman, was one of the coolest victims of the fire. He was sitting in his room when the alarm rang and calmly walked downstairs, lighting a cigar, and then stood on the sidewalk and watched the progress of the flames. James Purroy Mitchell, president of the board of aldermen of New York, was asleep in his room but Mrs. Mitchell, who was in an adjoining room, awakened him and they quickly made their exit from the building.

Among other Americans in the hotel when the fire broke out, who lost all or most of their baggage and some of whom only had time to don a few clothes, are F. W. and C. C. Woolworth, of New York, R. W. Baniel of Philadelphia, J. P. Scott of Chicago, George Parpany of Pittsburg, P. D. Harvey of Baltimore, H. E. Guerbin and E. W. Brother of Mexico, Barton French of Baltimore, ex-Governor Brown and son of Maryland, John Greenaway and party of Bisbee, Ariz.

One of the features of the fire was the bravery of the Americans. What little panic and excitement existed was among the employes of the hotel, chiefly the continental women in the servants' quarters, who were screaming at the top of their voices.

John Greenaway of Arizona took two women and a boy down a fire escape, while R. W. Daniels slid down a rope to the street from the third floor with an English friend who was visiting him. Thomas A. Edison was staying at the Carlton, but was out when the fire occurred.

The Carlton is one of London's most fashionable resorts and many Americans are among its guests.

The fire burned for two and a half hours but was confined mainly to that end of the hotel adjoining His Majesty's theater, and the fifth and sixth floors, which were gutted. Part of the roof also was destroyed. Only the hardest work by firemen saved the hotel and theater.

Actor Finney's Career.

New York, N. Y. — Jameson Lee Finney was a widely known character actor, who had appeared in many of the recent successful plays on the metropolitan stage and in cities throughout the country. He was born 47 years ago in St Louis and made his first stage appearance in Syracuse, N. Y., in 1881. He appeared for a time in various parts with the Booth-Barrett Company. In 1894 he joined the Empire Stock Company and appeared in conspicuous parts for four years. During 1901 he toured with Daniel Frohman's company and for the next two years appeared steadily in New York theaters.

HORTICULTURE

MAKING GOOD CIDER VINEGAR

Process Is Simple and Involves Very Little Work—Cleanliness Is First Important Factor.

(By S. M. MILLER.)

There are many apple orchards, especially those that have never been sprayed or cultivated, in which large quantities of apples are allowed to go to waste every year.

Such fruit makes a good grade of cider vinegar, and a handsome profit can be made in utilizing it in this way.

Even if one sprays and cultivates the orchard regularly each season and does everything possible to prevent having anything but marketable fruit there will always be a good many culls.

However, do not allow these unmerchantable apples to go to waste. Make cider vinegar from them and get a good price for the product right here at home.

Making cider vinegar is very simple. There is practically no labor attached to it other than extracting the juice from the apples.

Perfect cleanliness first, last and all the time is a matter of vital importance. Apples that are picked up from the ground are usually dirty and should be thoroughly washed before being placed in the cider mill.

The mill and all utensils used in the making must be kept well cleaned if a good product is to be made. To use unclean fruit or unclean vessels simply invites bad fermentation.

If all sorts of germs which are found on dirty and decayed fruit are put in the cider a good quality of vinegar must not be expected.

Where one has no mill the fruit can be pulped by hand with wooden mauls in a wooden trough, and where only a sufficient quantity of vinegar is wanted for home use it is not a difficult matter to secure it in this way.

The best receptacles in which to put the cider are molasses kegs or barrels, preferably those which have held vinegar previously, since fermentation commences sooner when the fermenting organism is present than when it must find its way into the liquid from outside mediums.

To made a good grade of vinegar two factors are essential during the process of fermentation. First, the air must have free access to the liquid to support the organism. Second, the temperature must be favorable for the growth of the fermenting agent.

The barrels or kegs should be placed in a room where the temperature will be fairly constant at 70 to 75 degrees, placed on their sides in order to give more surface to the atmosphere, and filled with the juice to within six inches to eight inches of the bunghole.

HANDY LITTLE GRAPE PICKER

The thimble device shown in the illustration is in reality an artificial thumb nail with which to pinch bunches of grapes from the vine. It is secured to the thumb by means of a plate and strap, and makes picking simple and quick.

KEEP THE LAWN BEAUTIFUL

Rake All Moss Out and Cut Dandelions and Plantain Well Below Crowns—Plant Borders.

Go over the lawn and if you find moss rake it out. Cut well below the crowns of dandelions and plantain. If possible top dress the lawn with leaf mold or thoroughly rotten straw or manure.

The continuous flowering border recommends itself to the busy housewife who wants a lot of flowers and who has but little time to give to them. Prepare a border two or two and one-half feet wide and spade it two feet deep, enriching it with well-rotted manure. Into this border plant all sorts of annuals, perennials and bulbs, placing the tall growing ones in the back row, and the short ones along the edge of the border. As the years pass the border will grow in beauty [illegible]

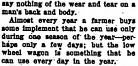
USEFUL LOW-WHEEL WAGON

Has Been Found Practically Indispensable for Various Jobs Around Farm Every Day in Year.

Every farmer knows that there are numberless small jobs about the place that require the use of a wagon where the bed will be close to the ground so as to make the lift as short as possible.

That need has been met with the low-wheel wagon and has made it practically indispensable for gathering apples, and hauling basket fruit, fodder, manure, hay and grain, clearing the fields of stones and stumps and carrying tools and timber for fixing up fences, or any odd job, say, like hauling away a fallen tree.

Then there is nothing that fills the bill better for all kinds of work in the corn fields. There is no earthly reason why a man should lift the corn as high as his shoulder when the low wagon will permit him to perform the labor in the same amount of time, to say nothing of the wear and tear on a man's back and body.



Low Broad-Tired Wagon.

Almost every year a farmer buys some implement that he can use only during one season of the year—perhaps only a few days; but the low wheel wagon is something that he can use every day in the year.

The broad tires make the draft lighter, and that means saving the team. Of course for certain kinds of road use there will always be a demand for the narrow tire wheels, but on a smooth surface and particularly where the ground is soft the pull on the team is decreased 25 per cent to 50 per cent for the simple reason that the broad tires do not sink into the ground; the wider bearing surface of the tire distributes the load in such a manner as to buoy the wagon up and keep it on top of the ground.

Especially on plowed ground or very muddy roads these wheels do not mire like the ordinary wheels, which of course makes the saving on the horses even greater.

FRUIT TURNED INTO METAL

Scientist Has Secret Process by Which Flowers and Fruit Are Converted Into Solid Mass.

By means of a secret process, Prof. L. G. Delamothe, a European scientist, is said to convert flowers, fruit and even animal tissue into metal, says Popular Mechanics. He does not deposit a thin layer of metal upon the surface, as in electroplating, but is said actually to transmute the life-grown material into dead metal.

Grapes Turned Into Metal.

The bunch of grapes shown in the illustration was so converted, the grapes and leaves having all their natural tints in the metal. The treatment is accomplished by an electrical agency.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES

It is good practice to graft plums on peach stock.

A spraying of the currant and other small fruit bushes will help.

Fruit should never be offered for sale that is exposed to flies.

An orchard neglected for one year virtually puts it back three years.

If the rabbits have gnawed only the outer bark, wrap the wound with cloth.

If your orchard produces poor fruit you may be sure there is a reason and you ought to find it.

Grape vines make a beautiful arbor, and if properly taken care of will pay their way every year in fruit.

Do not be stingy of water for the plants. Soak them plenty once or twice a week, and don't dribble once a day.

It is a great mistake to pick out the poorest soil on the place on which to plant the orchard. The best is none too good.

If a man sells fruit of which he is ashamed then he should throw away his stencil and conceal all evidence of his ownership.

The flowers will require close attention now to keep them tidy. Pick off all the seed pods and dead leaves and keep after the weeds.

Lemon and orange growers have learned that it is best to wash and wipe them before packing to prevent the spread of rot fungi.

Tie Game

The St. Hilaire Gophers journeyed to Terrebonne last Sunday and crossed bats with the team representing that place. After several hours of waiting out on the ball ground among the gopher holes and manure piles, the St. Hilaire boys sighted the collection gathered from the four corners of the earth to represent Terrebonne. They came slowly but surely, and advancing cautiously in columns of one, they finally appeared in all their glory; also, they had on their ball suits. Rain began to fall and continued to descend until four innings of the game had been finished. The ball soaked through and through, and the cellar hole (known at Terrebonne as the pitchers' box) partly filled with loose dirt and mud.

After the rain stopped and the surface of the ball dried, our guess would be that said ball weighed exactly one and one-half pounds avoirdupois.

The game progressed—progressed I say; otherwise how in the world do you suppose it could have gone eleven innings in a half day and be finished before the players were starved to death. At the end of the eleventh inning the score was 4 to 4 favor of the 4, and the "umps" called a man on the Terrebonne team "safe on home plate," whereupon the St. Hilaire players congregated back of second base, gave three lusty cheers for the umpire, and departed for their home. For further particulars call on the Terrebonne correspondent to the Red Lake Falls Gazette, who is woefully well qualified to spout on most any subject, base ball in all its phases.

Fair Damsel's Questions That Revealed Callow Lover in His True Light.

"Do you really and truly think I am beautiful?" she asked.

"You are simply divine," he replied.

"But there are other girls whom you think more beautiful than I."

"No, I don't think there is a more beautiful girl in the world than you."

"There are other girls you think are just as beautiful, though."

"You are more beautiful than any other girl I ever saw."

"I suppose there are plenty of girls whom you consider almost as beautiful as I am."

"I think you are far more beautiful than any other girl that ever breathed."

"Well, why didn't you say that in the first place?"

"That was what I meant, if I didn't exactly say so."

"O, well, go on. My goodness! Must I suggest everything nice that you say to me?"

"What more can I say?"

"Heavens! I'm not going to sit here giving you lessons. I thought the way you started out that you had made love before."

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies have done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctors said I had tumors, and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. Your Liver Pills have no equal as a cathartic. Any one wishing proof of what your medicines have done for me can get it from any druggist or by writing to me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Another Operation Avoided.

New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial first, and was saved from an operation."—Mrs. LILY PEYROUX, 1111 Kerlerec St., New Orleans, La.

The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

KANSAS LOSES POET

Recent Death of "Ironquill" Removes State's Laureate.

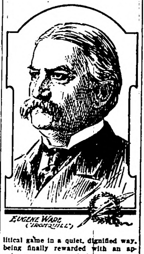
Modest Verse Writer Who Assumed Pen Name for Fear People Would Not Hire "Fool Poet" as Attorney.

Fort Scott, Kan.—Kansas lost her poet laureate when Eugene F. Ware died at his summer home in Colorado and western literature lost one of its brightest geniuses.

Ware, known as "Ironquill," was a harness maker, lawyer, politician and poet. In the minds of his friends the last should come first, but personally he always belittled his ability as a poet, and instead of being proud of his success he spoke disparagingly of his verses. In this he was alone.

He came to this city in 1867 and began to work at his trade as a harness maker. A competitor was advertising, so Ware had to do the same. He went his competitor several better by writing his advertisements in verse. This attracted attention and he went to Topeka, where he wrote poetry and studied law, keeping his identity as a poet under cover. His explanation for this was: "I was afraid people wouldn't hire a fool poet for a lawyer."

There were plenty of harness makers, but very few lawyers in Fort Scott and that was the reason Ware deserted the stitching horse of his shop and took up the study of law. In his profession he was successful. As he practiced law he played the political game in a quiet, dignified way, being finally rewarded with an appointment as commissioner of pensions.



After two years in Washington he returned to Kansas and took up his residence in Kansas City, Kan. Tiring of city life, he retired shortly before his death to Sungold Section, a fine farm he acquired when he first came to Kansas, and there he told his friends he hoped "to die in the open." His plans to die on the farm failed, for he passed away soon after reaching Colorado, where he had been in the habit of spending the summers at a place he owned on the Cascade.

He was well entitled to the appointment of pension commissioner, for during the Civil war he had a brilliant career covering four years and ending as captain of a troop in the Seventh Iowa cavalry.

For one brief period Captain Ware was in the newspaper business. This was in Burlington, Ia., where for a time, he was assistant editor of the Hawkeye and started that paper on its road to celebrity as a funny paper.

When Captain Ware retired "Bob" Burdette succeeded him and the paper became much quoted for its funny sayings.

Ware was born in 1841 in Hartford, Conn., and was married in 1874 to Miss Jeanette B. Huntington. For many years he was a familiar figure in Topeka during session of the Kansas legislature and his wit and humor made him much beloved, both by political friends and opponents. He was a member of the legislature in the early '80s.

When he left the office of pension commissioner he wanted to show his appreciation of 12 heads of departments under him. He bought 12 handsome pieces of silver, exactly alike, called the 12 men into his office where the souvenirs were lined up on a table and said: "Gentlemen. You have been good to me. Help yourselves."

The appointment of Ware to be commissioner of pensions was due to Roosevelt's admiration for his poems.

In 1900, when Roosevelt was on his way to the southwest to attend a reunion of Rough Riders, he expressed a desire to meet "Ironquill" and a message was sent to Ware asking him to meet the train and travel with the president. He did so and the friendship between the Rough Rider colonel and the frontier poet was promptly evident and sincere. Three years later Ware was appointed commissioner of pensions.

He leaves a widow, one son, Eugene F. Ware, Jr., and three daughters, Mrs. Abbie Neiss of New York, Mrs. S. R. Nelson and Miss Amelia Ware.

White Skin Put on Negro.

Holdrege, Neb.—Fifty square inches of white skin has been grafted on the face and hands of L. D. Thomas, a coal black negro, confined in a local hospital. The operation was an entire success and the negro's face is about half white. Thomas was burned in a railroad wreck. The white skin was taken from the body of Oscar Bragg, who was paid by the railroad for his cuticle.

Sun Hatches an Egg.

Junction City, Kan.—Ed Houston, a Geary county farmer, says that while walking in a his pasture he heard something chirp. He investigated and found a young chick just coming out of a shell, having been hatched out by the heat of the sun. The chick was placed with a brood and is thriv-

PREROGATIVE OF HER SEX

Bride Had But Exercised Recognized Privilege That Is Universally Granted.

A young couple had been courting for several years and the young man seemed to be in no hurry to marry. Finally, one day, he said:

"Sal, I canna marry thee."

"How's that?" asked she.

"I've changed my mind," said he.

"Well, I'll tell thee what we'll do," said she. "If folks know that it's thee as has given me up I shanna be able to get another chap; but if they think I've given thee up I can get all I want. So we'll have banns published and when the wedding day comes the parson will say to thee: 'Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?' and thou must say: 'I will.' And when he says to me: 'Wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?' I shall say: 'I winna.'"

The day came, and when the minister asked the important question the man answered: "I will."

Then the parson said to the woman: "Wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" and she said: "I will."

"Why," said the young man furiously, "you said you would say 'I winna.'"

"I know that," said the young woman, "but I've changed my mind since."—Mack's National Monthly.

She—Who are those young men with books under their arms?

She—What's that old man in the big chair back of the desk doing?

He—He's laying it down.

In the Church Militant.

Henry N. Cary, the secretary of the Chicago Publishers' association, has a negro cook he took with him to Chicago from St. Louis. The cook is very religious and immediately joined a church in Chicago.

Cary saw the cook going out of the house one evening with a large carving knife in her hand.

"Where are you going, Mary?" he asked.

"I'se gwine t' church."

"Well, what are you doing with that knife?"

"They's a religious dispute goin' on down there," said Mary, "an' I wanter see my side gits de best of it."—Saturday Evening Post.

An Undefinable Definition.

A few days after school opened in the spring a teacher in a Brooklyn school was testing the members of one of her old classes on what they had remembered of the definitions she had taught them during the preceding term. Finally she asked the bright boy of the class this question:

"Now, Robert, tell me what a hypocrite is?"

"A hypocrite," replied Robert without hesitation, "is a kid w'at comes to school wit' a smile on his mug."

Tit for Tat.

A young man, who had not been married long, remarked at the dinner table the other day:

"My dear, I wish you could make bread such as mother used to make."

The bride smiled and answered in a voice that did not tremble:

"Well, dear, I wish you could make the dough that father used to make."

Truthfully Said.

"My friend, you should join the church. As the prophet says 'Come thou with us and we will do thee good.'"

"You have already, parson. I was at your church fair last night."—Smart Set Magazine.

George H. Hayes, comptroller of the University of Minnesota, has submitted to Attorney General Simpson notice to the effect that the Babcock & Wilcox Company of New Jersey had violated the Minnesota laws by working men on state work more than eight hours a day. The charges were brought by C. S. Albright, deputy labor commissioner. As disbursing officer for the University of Minnesota, it will be necessary for Mr. Hayes, under the statutes, to deduct $400 from the amount due the contractors unless the attorney general rules otherwise. It is said eight men were employed for 10 hours each day.

Buy Illegal Insurance.

Newspaper men, laundry employes and brewers in Winona and vicinity have been doing business with an insurance agent who pretended to represent a Kansas City, Mo., company, according to information received by Insurance Commissioner Preus in a telegram from Scott Laird, manager of the Winona Republican Herald. The message asks Mr. Preus whether the Kansas City company has a license to operate in this state. Mr. Preus said it has no license. He is making efforts to locate the "agent."

Overcome in Tub by Gas.

Winona. — The unusual length of time required by James Gleason, a roomer at the home of Mrs. Young, in taking his morning bath after receiving instructions as to the operation of the instantaneous gas heater, caused an investigation to be made. He failed to respond to knocks upon the door and entrance was effected through a window. The man was found in a partially filled bathtub with only his nostrils out of the water and [illegible]

EVIDENTLY SHE WAS ANNOYED

Good Wife's Punishment, Intended for Husband, Poor Compensation to Revivalist.

A popular revivalist had been holding services at a town in Mississippi when a heavy rain came on, and he accepted an invitation to pass the night at the house of one of the townsmen. Observing the preacher's drenched clothing, the host brought out a suit of his own and sent his guest upstairs to don it.

The good man had made the change and was on his way back to the sitting room, when the woman of the house came out of another room, holding in her hands the big family Bible, out of which the minister was to be invited to read a chapter before the family went to bed.

She was not, however, in a very amiable frame of mind, for careful housewives are likely to be put out of sorts by the advent of unexpected company. Seeing the revivalist in his borrowed garments, she mistook him for her husband, and as he passed in front of her she lifted the book and brought it down sharply on his head.

"There!" she exclaimed. "Take that for asking him to stay all night!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

PIMPLES COVERED HIS BACK

"My troubles began along in the summer in the hottest weather and took the form of small eruptions and itching and a kind of smarting pain. It took me mostly all over my back and kept getting worse until finally my back was covered with a mass of pimples which would burn and itch at night so that I could hardly stand it. This condition kept getting worse and worse until my back was a solid mass of big sores which would break open and run. My underclothing would be a clot of blood.

"I tried various remedies and salves for nearly three years and I was not getting any benefit. It seemed I was in eternal misery and could not sleep on my back or lean on a chair. I was finally given a set of the Cuticura Remedies and inside of two weeks I could see and feel a great relief. I kept on using Cuticura Soap, Ointment and also the Resolvent, and in about three or four months' time my back was nearly cured and I felt like a new being. Now I am in good health and no sign of any skin diseases and I am fully satisfied that Cuticura Remedies are the best ever made for skin diseases. I would not be without them." (Signed) W. A. Armstrong, Corbin, Kan., May 26, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 27 K, Boston.

Sharpe—No; he's a— well, I wouldn't like to say.

Sufficient Evidence.

Having vouched for the honesty of the woman who wished a situation as scrub-woman the good-natured man was subjected to a severe examination by the superintendent of the building.

"There are degrees of honesty," said the superintendent. "How honest is she?"

The good-natured man reflected.

"Well," said he, "I'll tell you. She is so honest that if you throw anything that looks to be worth a copper into the waste basket you have to tag it 'Destroy this,' or she will fish it out and put it back on your desk night after night, no matter how badly you want to get rid of it. I don't know that I can say anything more."

"No more is necessary," said the superintendent, and he proceeded to hire the woman.

STRONGER THAN MEAT

A Judge's Opinion of Grape-Nuts.

A gentleman who has acquired a judicial turn of mind from experience on the bench out in the Sunflower State writes a carefully considered opinion as to the value of Grape-Nuts as food. He says:

"For the past 5 years Grape-Nuts has been a prominent feature in our bill of fare.

"The crisp food with the delicious, nutty flavor has become an indispensable necessity in my family's everyday life.

"It has proved to be most healthful and beneficial, and has enabled us to practically abolish pastry and pies from our table, for the children prefer Grape-Nuts, and do not crave rich and unwholesome food.

"Grape-Nuts keeps us all in perfect physical condition—as a preventive of disease it is beyond value. I have been particularly impressed by the beneficial effects of Grape-Nuts when used by ladies who are troubled with face blemishes, skin eruptions, etc. It clears up the complexion wonderfully.

"As to its nutritive qualities, my experience is that one small dish of Grape-Nuts is superior to a pound of meat for breakfast, which is an important consideration for anyone. It satisfies the appetite and strengthens the power of resisting fatigue, while its use involves none of the disagreeable consequences that sometimes follow a meat breakfast." Washington.

President Taft signed the reapportionment bill, under which the house of representatives is increased from 391 to 433 members, with two more if Arizona and New Mexico are admitted to the union.

After concluding the testimony of Former State Senator Holstlaw, accused bribe-taker in the Lorimer election, the senate Lorimer committee took a month's recess. The committee will convene in Chicago October 10, instead of in Washington.

Representative Humphrey of Washington presented to the house a resolution asking to have the house committee of interior department expenditures discharged from further consideration of the Controller bay investigation and have the matter put in the hands of a select committee of five members of the house.

APPRAISE LAND WELL.

Reports on 15,000 Acres of State Tracts in Beltrami County.

Bemidji.—That the state lands of Beltrami county are being thoroughly appraised by B. F. Case of Little Falls, representing the state auditor's office; J. J. Opsahl of Bemidji, acting for Governor Eberhart, and Nels Otterstad of Turtle River, representing Beltrami county commissioners, is acclaimed by persons who know of the painstaking manner in which the three appraisers have been performing their duties; and a complete record of every piece and parcel of land will be filed with the state auditor, easy of access to intending purchasers of state lands in this county.

There are, according to Mr. Case, who is in charge of the appraising in this county, approximately 30,000 acres of state land in Beltrami county, which will be appraised. Fifteen thousand acres already have been appraised and the reports thereon sent in to the state auditor's office, since the work of appraising was commenced, June 7. Mr. Case gives it as his opinion that the appraising of the balance of 15,000 acres will be completed October 1.

"All of the land is being thoroughly appraised," says Mr. Case, who was in Bemidji today. "In making reports to State Auditor Iverson, we are submitting topographical maps, which show high and low land, lakes, swamps, creeks, timber (kind and quantity), character of soil (whether sandy, black loam, etc.) In fact, the reports, which are now being sent in, cover practically everything which it would be possible to tell from an appraisement. In addition to this, there is a column on the report blanks for 'remarks,' where can be shown anything else of interest regarding the land, such as whether any of the timber has been cut, the land burned over, and whether or not improvements have been made.

"The information is complete in every detail."

BRUIN HALTS PARADE.

Climbs Tree and Defies Those Who Would Bring Him Down.

Bemidji.—Because Teddy, a tame 400-pound bear, pulled up his picket stake and climbed to the topmost branches of a pine tree, the Bobby Fountain circus parade had to be given up, while circus hands tried in vain to make Bruin come down.

Nor was their work without danger, for an eight-pound stake dangling from the bear's chain threatened to fall at any moment, and finally did fall, narrowly missing a group of girls who had gathered with several hundred other persons to watch the animal's antics.

After a time Teddy decided he would come down, but by this time his chain had become entangled in the branches, holding the brute a captive more than fifty feet from the ground.

Bobby Fountain called for volunteers to go and extricate the bear, which continually growled and snapped, and wore no muzzle. Finally a circus hand, known only as "Red," offered to undertake the dangerous task. He got a set of climbers used for climbing telephone poles and mounted the tree, avoided the bear's thrusts as he came in close proximity to Bruin and soon had won his battle with the beast in the air.

TWIN CITY "VETS" SPECIAL.

Minnesotans and North Dakotans to Travel to Rochester Together.

Final arrangements for the departure of the delegates to the national encampment of the G. A. R. at Rochester, N. Y., August 21, have been made. The delegates from Minnesota and North Dakota have decided to travel together on a special train, both going to and returning from the encampment. There has been considerable correspondence over the joint expedition of the Minnesotans and North Dakotans and after much delay it was thought best to have the two states unite.

The G. A. R. special will leave the Twin Cities next Saturday night over the St. Paul road to Chicago. From Chicago to Rochester the delegation will go over the Nickel Plate route. It is expected that the train will be a large one, as it is estimated that about 200 veterans from Minnesota and a large number from North Dakota will be aboard the special when it pulls out of the Twin City. Besides this the Ladies of the G. A. R. and the Women's Relief corps from Minnesota and the North Dakota auxiliaries will send delegates to the convention.

LAND INDICTMENTS HELD.

Alleged Conspirators at White Earth to Be Tried.

Fergus Falls. — Judge Willard, at conclusion of an all-day argument in the United States court here, overruled demurrers in the White Earth land fraud cases and held that the indictments were valid. The indictments charge Gus H. Beaulieu, editor of the Tomahawk, and a number of other prominent citizens of White Earth and vicinity, with conspiracy to defraud the United States government by inducing government officers to issue patents to full-blood Indians and mixed-blood minors by securing affidavits to the effect that they were mixed-bloods. Charges of conspiracy was the only method by which the government was able to reach the accused parties criminally.

The indictments were attacked all along the line, allegation being made that they were not sufficiently definite and direct, and that if the deeds secured were secured illegally, they were void, and the title still rested with the government, which had therefore not been defrauded, and that the parties had not knowingly committed any offense. A mass of technical objections were urged, but Judge Willard overruled this and held that the indictments were, in every way valid.

Judge Willard held that any conspiracy to induce government officers to do what they should not do was a fraudulent conspiracy against the government itself, and that the charge that officials had been induced to issue patents which should not have been issued constituted an indictable offense.

No appeal from the decision will be taken and the cases will come to trial at the next term of court.

BANK CASHIER IS ACCUSED.

Employe of Sleepy Eye Institution Arrested.

Sleepy Eye. — Charging Rollin M. West, cashier of [illegible] bank, with embezzlement of the sum of $9,787.04 from the said bank, State Bank Examiner Kelsey N. Chase had him arrested. This course was due to findings of Deputy Examiners Brandvold and Snyder who made an examination of the bank's condition.

The bank was closed for business and in the hands of Deputy Brandvold. From investigation it was found that funds were systematically taken from the bank for over a year. Mr. West's downfall is due to the fact that he was a big dealer in automobiles, requiring a large amount of money to conduct his business. With a large stock on hand, together with holding equities in real and personal property obtained in trades and deals, and expecting to turn his property into cash, in the capacity of cashier he took the money from the bank.

STATE MAY RECOVER $14,000.

Sum Claimed Due Minnesota for Excess Car Fare for Guard.

According to Attorney General Simpson, who returned from Chicago, the state of Minesota, will probably recover from the several railroads in the state which have during the past two years transported state troops to the annual encampment at an excess of one cent a mile, approximately $14,00).

The attorney general went to Chicago early in the week to confer with the officials of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, who promised that the matter would be taken up with President A. J. Earling and an agreement would probably be reached by which the road would return approximately $7,000, which is its share of the total amount. The other $7,000 will be returned by the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Omaha and Minneapolis & St. Louis railroads.

START WITH BUFF LEGHORNS

Much Easier and More Satisfactory Than Few Years Ago—Get Quality Rather Than Quantity.

Starting with Buff Leghorns now is much easier and more satisfactory than it was a few years ago. Now prominent breeders are getting as large a proportion of exhibition specimens from their matings as are the breeders of any variety and customers who are buying eggs get good value for the money they invest. Of course, one must be careful to buy from breeders who are producing fine birds, for breeders who are not breeding the quality that is winning at our prominent shows cannot supply it to their customers. After getting the eggs and hatching the chicks be sure to mark them all according to the breeding pen in which the eggs were laid; then when the chicks mature you will know their breeding.

When you pick out those which you are going to keep for your foundation stock, if you have only one male and one female that suit you, you had better use only those for the first year's breeding. It is not quantity that the beginner wants—it is quality. Next season select your best pullet and mate back to the old male and mate the yearling hen and the choicest one of the season's cockrels. These matings are reasonably sure to produce plenty of quality, if you buy the eggs from a breeder who has line bred his stock properly.

FOLDING COOP FOR CHICKENS

Ends and Sides Turn Down When Not Being Used—Of Great Convenience in Shipping to Market.

Now comes the collapsible chicken coop, designed by a Wisconsin man, and in view of the present mania for raising chickens it will probably interest a great many people. The sides and ends of the coop are hinged beneath the ends. When the receptacle is extended the sides form a support to the ends, and all are held firmly in the extended position by clips at the four corners. When the coop is collapsed, pins lock the folding parts and keeps them down. As will be readily understood, a coop of this kind will be a great convenience to the poultry farmer who ships his chickens to market or to a poultry store. After the live fowls have been disposed of a dozen of these improved receptacles can be folded up, tied in one bundle and shipped back to the place where they came from at small expense and no trouble. They are equally handy on the chicken farm.

DUMPING NESTS ARE HANDY

Bottom Arranged with Hinges So That It Will Drop and Contents Fall to the Floor.

A good way to build hens' nests is to have the bottom attached with hinges and fastened at the front with small hooks and staples. When the nests are to be cleaned the bottom can be dropped and all the contents will fall out. The nests should be at least twelve inches square, and for the large-sized breeds fifteen inches will be better.

Turkey Raising.

Because of their natural roaming disposition a great many persons think that turkeys are hard to raise, but to those who understand their habits they are the easiest to raise of all domestic fowls, says a writer in an exchange. I think I say "domestic" advisedly, although I know there are some who consider it a misfit when applied to turkeys, but surely no one could call a flock of turkeys as tame as mine anything but domestic. This quality of tameness can be bred in turkeys and should be considered by all careful breeders, as well as size shape [illegible]

USEFUL INSECTICIDE APPLIER

Apparatus Arranged to Make Application Automatic as Chicken Helps Itself to Water.

One of the most ingenious of the many sanitary appliances for use on poultry farms is the insecticide applying device shown in the illustration. It was designed by an Ohio man. On a large farm it is practically impossible to apply insect-destroying preparations for every fowl. The apparatus here makes this application automatically as the chicken drinks. A central support is placed in the water pan and two tubes are suspended from the sides. A strip of flexible percolating material hangs down from each tube to a point close to the water. The tube is filled with liquid insecticide, which keeps this strip continually saturated. When a chicken wants a drink it has to push its head under the flap and both in this motion and by the action of withdrawing its head, the feathers on head and neck become soaked with the solution. As every fowl has to drink, none is missed in this treatment.

TO FORCE EARLY MOULTING

Fowls Should Be Confined for About Ten Days and Given About One-Quarter of Usual Ration.

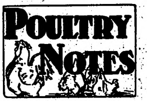
To bring about early moulting, confine the fowls in their various quarters about August 1, and for ten days only allow them one-fourth of their usual rations. During this time they lose flesh and stop laying.

Then liberate and feed them all the corn, oats, peas, sunflower seed and wheat they will eat. This causes a rapid moult and the new feathers start at once. The hens soon recover from the process and begin to lay regularly about October 1.

The ration for laying hens should not be too heavy, but should be varied at frequent intervals. With your grain ration animal food such as ground flesh meat and bones, is essential. Some green food too must be given. Experiments at the New York station showed that the product of eggs from hens fed on corn meal was from 28 to 57 per cent. greater than from hens kept on a more nitrogenous ration.

Summer Gains Are Rapid.

The gains made by chickens during the summer are rapid, and poultrymen are fast beginning to realize that if they have large healthy birds they must have abundant range during the period when they are growing and developing.



Let the chicks have plenty of free range.

The young chicks should be kept growing.

The first requisite in fattening fowls is a good coop.

To make chicks grow first give plenty of good fresh air; don't allow them to crowd.

Keep plenty of water fresh and clean for your poultry, and fight for lice and mites.

Much loss is suffered by poulterers from a failure to properly fatten their stock for market.

Fowls, to fatten well, should be confined in a small space in perfect darkness, and kept perfectly quiet.

Fine gravel is not the proper grit for poultry. They want a sharp material with which to grind their feed.

Charcoal pounded fine and kept in the drinking pans will keep the young and old birds in good condition.

Swelling of the head is frequently caused by a sharp draft on the fowl, from some small knothole or crack.

Grit must be provided for fowls, but the substance should be sharp and of size for poultry as for man or animals.

To keep a hen in good health she needs nearly seven times more fresh air in proportion to her size than does the horse.

If the hens are expected to lay heavily during the winter, they must be cared for every month of the year, and fed more heavily as the fall months come on.

If you are in the thoroughbred poultry business, do not sell your cull stock alive. Dress it and see that the culls are not worked onto the markets [illegible]

President Taft has vetoed the "wool bill," as he was expected to do; and now the question is, will congress pass it over his veto, as the people expect them to do?

A bill requiring that decisions by the supreme court of the United States on questions affecting the "constitutionality of any provision of a federal or state law must de unanimous," has been introduced in the United States senate.

Henry Hendrickson of Abercrombie, N. D., in a spirit of playfulness, waylaid his friend, Arthur Boutiette, on a dark night, and stopped him with a command of "hands up!" Boutiette entered into the spirit of the lark, whipped out a gun, and shot the embryo highwayman down in his tracks. Great joke.

The federal reapportionment bill passed by congress grants Minnesota an additional congressman. Until the state is redistricted the person who aspires to fill this position will have to be a candidate at large. This will necessitate a state wide campaign for the one who will seek the office, which together with the expense such a canvass involves may deter many from seeking he honor.

Postmaster General Hitchcock proposes an annual saving to the government of $9,000,000 by paying the railroads on the basis of cost with 6 per cent profit. The plan drovides that all railways shall report annually to the postmaster general the expenses incurred in carrying the mails in order that the department may determine the cost to the railway and a fair rate of profit.

Some papers are are advocating a special session of the legislature for the purpose of increasing the gross earnings tax on the railroads. But what is the use of increasing that tax when the railways can come back with another raise in freight and passenger rates, and the people have to pay the tax after all. Besides, we have had enough of this legislature. Rather let us have a special election for a new legislature and we will consider the desirability of proroguing it at once.—Warren Sheaf.

Two eggs out of every dozen laid by Minnesota hens may be said to drop through holes in the farmer's basket before they reach a market. In other words, while the hen sees to it that every egg she lays is worth taking care of, the farmer takes proper care of only ten. The aggregate loss from this cause reaches aver a million dollars annually. Nearly all these eggs may be saved by a better arrangement of poultry houses, a better system in collecting eggs, and by cooperation in quick marketing. Several egg associations are showing us how to and some day nearly all that million dollion dollars will nestle in the farmer's pocket instead of going to waste.—University Farm Press News.

Killed in a Runaway!

A. Welo, a prominent farmer of Pennington county living four miles south of Thief River Falls, met a tragic death late Monday afternoon when his team ran away just outside of that city, he being on his way home after a day's business in town. No one witnessed the accident, but it is thought that he had been dragged some distance before the team was stopped. Death resulted from a fracture of the skull, though his head, chest, and arms were also badly bruised.

Coroner Swanson was called and viewed the remains, and found an inquest unnecessary. Funeral services were held Thursday from the Swedish Mission church at Thief River Falls.

Mr. Welo was a well-to-do farmer and had been recognized for the last twenty years as a valuable and influential citizen. He was over 60 years of age. He leaves a wife and six children —two boys and four girls.

Commissioner Wold's Wife Dies

Mrs. Peter Wold, wife of County Commissioner Wold of Kuehnel, died at her home Tuesday of consumption. The deceased formerly lived in Kuehnel, where Mr. Wold was postmaster, and is well known and respected in the county. Mrs. Wold was about 50 years of age and is survived by her husband and seven children. The funeral will be held this afternoon at the Mission church.—Thief River Falls News.

Occupy the Court House

The remodeling of the Thief River Falls city hall to make it suitable for occupancy as the Pennington county court house has been completed and the county offices are being moved in. The changes in the building cost the county the neat little sum of $6,500.

Paid Ad

Terrebonne correspondent to Red Lake Falls Gazette please take notice: Dr. Owens of St. Hilaire says that he means every word of what he has written and has fifty ($50.00) dollars of real money to back his words. If your team is game, why did you back out on the agreement of your manager to play the final game in Red Lake Falls on Aug. 20. Show us, "old kid," we're there, All of your excuses count for naught Show the goods.

Yours truly, DR. OWENS.

Warning to Hunters

"Some hunters seem somewhat confused as to just when the prairie chicken shooting season begins this year," said Game Warden Munch of Crookston.

"The fact that the law provides that from Aug. 16 to Sept. 1 dogs may be taken out hunting, but that guns cannot be used, and that from Sept. 1 to Sept. 7 guns may be used by shooting shooting blank cartridges, seems to be stumbling block for many of the hunters.

"The chicken shooting season does not open until Sept. 7, and as both chickens and partridges are plentiful this year they will be hunted more than usual.

"Another stumbling block, as far as the huntsman is concerned, is the law which provides that the partridge hunting season does not open until Oct. 1, nearly a month later than the chicken season opens."

GREATEST FAIR CROWDS.

All Indications Point to a Half Million Attendance and Comfort Will Be Provided for All.

Every preparation is being made for the care and entertainment next September of a greater crowd than ever before attended the Minnesota State Fair and Exposition. A large number of additional park seats, new drinking fountains, comfort stations, a rest hospital and nursery have already been provided for.

The sidewalks on the main avenues have been widened and a number of the streets and street corners have been so graded as to care for greater crowds. Additional ground has been given the street car company at their central terminals and this space will greatly increase the company's facilities for handling the immense crowds that are expected.

The Agricultural society has purchased nine lots adjoining their present railroad yards and unloading platform and these will be increased in number and convenience. Fences and buildings on the fair grounds are being repaired and painted. A new building is being erected that will connect the woman's building and annex. Several new structures for machinery exhibits are being built on Machinery hill.

Agricultural School

The Crookston state agricultural school opens Oct. 3, 1910. The school is better equipped than ever with an enlarged faculty, larger and better school and farm buildings, and better facilities for doing the best work. It offers a variety of courses to young men and women of the farm that few can afford to let pass by. The school catalog explains the courses, expenses, etc. Send to C. O. Selvig, Superintendent, State Farm, Crookston, Minn.

Curious Epitaphs.

Old New England graveyards are not the only ones which contain curious epitaphs. The old time dweller of Maine who "died of a falling tree," as his headstone asserts, had a fellow in misfortune in faroff Austria, as is shown by W. A. Baillie-Grohman's "The Tyrol and the Tyrolese."

A wooden slab, painted with the representation of a prostrate tree under which lies a man in spread eagle attitude, bears testimony to the violent death of "Johann Lemberger, aged fifty-two and three-quarters years. This upright and virtuous youth was squashed by a falling tree."

The record of Michael Gerstner is even more succinct and convincing. He "climbed up, fell down and was dead."

AND now I see with eye serene
The very pulse of the machine,
A being breathing thoughtful breath,
A traveler between life and death;
The reason firm, the temperate will,
Endurance, foresight, strength and skill;
A perfect woman, nobly plann'd
To warn, to comfort and command,
And yet a spirit still and bright
With something of an angel light.
—William Wordsworth.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

The girl who doesn't know she is pretty isn't, and the man who doesn't know he is a fool is.

There are persons so thick skinned that no arrow aimed at their self conceit ever pierces their armor.

The individual who poses as the head of the family isn't always the one who keeps the works from going to smash.

Queer Justice.

It was the custom in England many years ago that when a person was hanged through a mistake and the authorities were satisfied he was innocent to appoint a commission, which would proceed to the grave in solemn procession and with due rites wave a white flag over the remains. Thus was justice done.

The Invincible Britons.

Smith—The British, I believe, rarely make mention of our Revolution.

Jones—No, but I understand they occasionally refer to it as a conflict in which some British colonists defeated a force of Hessians.—London Tatler.

Making Good.

"Is he making good in his new line of work?"

"Yes, indeed. He is already finding fault with the way his boss carries on the business."—Detroit Free Press.

The most essential feature of a man is his improvableness.—Fiske.

Pendulum Clocks.

Pendulum clocks were invented after Galilei stood observing the lamp in a church swinging to and fro.

Making Moving Pictures.

Carbons for lights used in taking moving pictures are grooved toward the condenser, so that in burning away faster on that side the arc will not cast a shadow, as frequently is the case with ordinary carbons.

A Wonder.

"They say Flubdub's youngest boy is quite a prodigy."

"Yes; he can name all the vice presidents of the United States."—Puck.

Same Old Advice.

The report of Dwight C. Morgan, on the value of the physical properties of the railways of the state of Minnesota, has been handed to the members of the legislature in a supplementary report of the railroad and warehouse commission. In brief it shows that the aggregate cost of reproduction of all the railways of the state is computed by the state to be $360,961,547, the report covering the period up to June 30, 1907.

FLAX STRAW

To Farmers and Whom It May Concern:

Having established at Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, a Flax Tow Mill, I hereby take pleasure in communicating this fact to the public. This mill will purchase all good, sound flax straw of 1911 crop only, offered and brought to the mill grounds by the farmers themselves or shipped to the mill in bales from near by stations located on the railroad, and immediate cash will be paid for it.

The longer the straw the more valuable for making tow, and I therefore respectfully request and advise the farming community to cut the straw as low down as possible, for it is the length of the fibre in the tow which makes it of a desirable quality.

I own four more flax tow mills in Dakota, and own mills or am financially interested in several others located in the states of Minnesota and Iowa.

Mr. Louis Kumpf, my general foreman, and Mr. George Thompson, both of whom are at the present time at Red Lake Falls, will give you all further information should you call on them personally or write to them, and I am sure you will find them both absolutely honest and fair gentlemen.

My great desire is to be fair myself with all mankind and the farmers especially, and those who treat me fair in their dealing will always find me honest and square in dealing with them.

Trusting that our relations may be at all times harmonious and to the interest of both of us, I remain,

Yours faithfully,

No Piano has ever been more enthusiastically endorsed. The Artistic Case, the Easy, Responsive Action, and above all the deep, sweet, rich Tone, captivates performer and listener. The united verdict is that

LOMBARD PIANOS ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD !!

Mrs. Helen M. Slaker, 244 Grand Ave., Aurora, Ill., says: "I cannot find words in the English language to express my appreciation to you for having sold me such a beautiful instrument. I really think it is the most beautiful case I ever saw, and the tone is simply grand. I shall be glad to give you any testimonial, as I think the Lombard should take the lead."

Rev. Geo. Doubleday, Pres. Corpus Christi College, Galesburg, Ill., says: "We are using the Lombard in our College work at Corpus Christi, and it is a pleasure to recommend it. It is a beautiful instrument with a deep, sweet, rich tone."

J. W. Purviance, Editor McNairy County Independent, Selmer, Tenn., says: "The instrument (Lombard Piano) fills our most sanguine expectations. It is not only a rare beauty in its outward finish, but the tone is round, full, rich and sweet. Your firm has proven to be prompt and reliable in its dealings with me."

J. Ernest Paxson, Editor Press, Parkersburg, Pa., says: "I must say that the Lombard sent me is a beautiful instrument, and a credit to a standard firm. We are more than satisfied."

R. G. Knapp, President Federal Charter Co., Washington, D. C., says: "We now realize after a careful and comprehensive trial of the Lombard by many musical artists of Washington, that it stands second to none, regardless of price or make. Every one who has tried this instrument is enthusiastic in its praise."

These are samples of hundreds of enthusiastic letters received in every mail.

NEW STRENGTH FOR BAD BACKS.

Those who suffer with backache, headache, dizziness and that constant, dull, tired feeling will find comfort in the advice of Mrs. C. S. Tylor, Cando, N. Dak., who says: "My back became terribly sore and lame. I was tired and restless and would arise so exhausted I could scarcely dress. The kidney secretions were terribly annoying and my feet became so swollen I could not wear my shoes. Nothing helped me until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They gave me prompt relief and in a short time I was entirely cured."

"You must have studied political economy pretty thoroughly to be so impressed with the iniquity of the trusts."

A New Ailment.

A short time later Janet was heard confiding to one of her playmates:

ARRIVES TOLEDO

LANDS AFTER THRILLING FLIGHT 2,000 FEET ABOVE CITY IN VIEW OF THOUSANDS.

ATWOOD MAKING RECORD

Aviator Forced to Stop Five Hours for Gasoline.—Has a Narrow Escape When Machine Hits Treetops.

Toledo, Ohio. — Exactly 520 miles from his starting point, Harry N. Atwood, Boston aviator, who is attempting to break the world's long distance aeroplane record by flying from St. Louis to New York, alighted in Toledo after completing the third day of his trip, with a spectacular flight 2,000 feet above the city.

He covered the 133 miles from Elkhart, Ind., to Toledo with only one stop and in actual flying time of 2 hours and 56 minutes. He started from Elkhart at 8:06 a. m., and was compelled to stop at Pettisville, Ohio, for more than five hours because he ran out of gasoline, and, continuing his journey, guided by the tracks of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad, he alighted in Toledo at 4:02 p. m.

Between some of the stations Atwood beat the scheduled time for ordinary trains. In the last lap of the day's run he whipped up such a speed as hardly to be visible for longer than a minute at any one angle. The 33 miles from Pettisville into Toledo was run in 50 minutes, including a delay for starting and time lost in circling around the city in search of a landing place.

The Boston man's arrival here was as exciting as was his trip over northern Indiana and Ohio. Steam whistles and thousands of people on top of office buildings greeted him as he came in from the west. All the way he had been gliding "uphill" to get a good view of the town, he said. Instead of alighting in the west end he shot over the city and landed near the mouth of the Maumee river in the eastern section.

Aviator's Arrival Exciting.

Intense interest marked his progress. When swooping low to read the names of the railroad stations great crowds, including farmers who had come in from miles around, frantically yelled for him to come down. Some brought bouquets and lunches for the aviator, while policemen and municipal officials abandoned their posts to join in the ovation.

Atwood is now 745 miles from New York. With 520 miles already traveled he will, on arriving in New York, have to his credit, 1,265 miles as computed by railroad mileage, including 286 miles from St. Louis to Chicago, 540 miles from Chicago to Buffalo, N. Y., and 439 miles from Buffalo to New York City. But Atwood asserts he will be entitled to considerably more than this, as he covered 50 or more miles in circling over St. Louis and Chicago and made detours en route.

He said he would not definitely decide until after his arrival in New York whether he would continue on to Boston.

Suspected Anarchists at Panama.

New Orleans, Aug. 17.—According to information received here from Panama it is believed that an organized body of anarchists has been discovered among the Spanish laborers on the Isthmian canal. The man said to be Lopez and several others who admitted they were anarchists have been detained.

QUEER DISEASE IS IN UNITED STATES

Many Here Afflicted With Odd Ailment, Says Prof. Munyon.

GREWSOME CREATURES VERY COMMON, FINDS EXPERT.

Many people in the United States are afflicted with a queer disease, according to a statement yesterday by Professor James M. Munyon. He made the following remarkable and rather grewsome statement:

"Many persons who come and write to my headquarters at 53d and Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia, Pa., think they are suffering from a simple stomach trouble, when in reality they are the victims of an entirely different disease—that of tape worm. These tape worms are huge internal parasites, which locate in the upper bowel and consume a large percentage of the nutriment in undigested food. They sometimes grow to a length of forty to sixty feet. One may have a tape worm for years and never know the cause of his or her ill health.

"Persons who are suffering from one of these creatures become nervous, weak and irritable, and tire at the least exertion. The tape worms rob one of ambition and vitality and strength, but they are rarely fatal.

"The victim of this disease is apt to believe that he is suffering from chronic stomach trouble, and doctors for years without relief. This is not the fault of the physicians he consults, for there is no absolute diagnosis that will tell positively that one is not a victim of tape worm.

"The most common symptom of this trouble is an abnormal appetite. At times the person is ravenously hungry and cannot get enough to eat. At other times the very sight of food is loathsome. There is a gnawing, faint sensation at the pit of the stomach, and the victim has headaches, fits of dizziness and nausea. He cannot sleep at night and often thinks he is suffering from nervous prostration.

"I have a treatment which has had wonderful success in eliminating these great creatures from the system. In the course of its regular action in aiding digestion, and ridding the blood, kidneys and liver of impurities it has proven fatal to these great worms. If one has a tape worm, this treatment will, in nine cases out of ten, stupefy and pass it away, but if not, the treatment will rebuild the run-down person, who is probably suffering from stomach trouble and a general anaemic condition. My doctors report marvelous success here with this treatment. Fully a dozen persons have passed these worms, but they are naturally reticent about discussing them, and of course we cannot violate their confidence by giving their names to the public."

Letters addressed to Professor James M. Munyon, 53d and Jefferson Streets, Philadelphia, Pa., will receive as careful attention as though the patient called in person. Medical advice and consultation absolutely free. Not a penny to pay.

THAT AWFUL BACKACHE

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have the backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

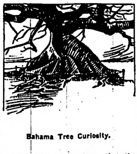
MARVELOUS TREE CURIOSITY

Back of British Post Office at Nassau, Bahama Islands, a Sight for Tourists.

Nassau, B. I.—A tree which in its very conformation seems to show a struggle between two monsters—one of the land against one of the sea—is the ceiba or silk cotton tree of Nassau, a splendid example of the peculiar form which trees of this family are inclined to take. In the Nassau tree the illusion of a battle royal has brought thousands of travelers to see the strange tree but more are also interested in its great length of history. In 1802 a traveler sketched the tree while sojourning here in the Bahamas. It was a good sketch and on comparison now shows that the great ceiba tree has not changed, save in podding each year, in all that length of time. Scientists deduce that the tree is nearly one thousand years old.



Bahama Tree Curiosity.

It stands just at the back of the British post office in Nassau—its great top outspreading like a huge umbrella with branches soaring as far as 100 feet from the main stem. The trunk is of huge girth and it is this with the interwinding of branches above that gives the idea of a combat.

But the giant roots of the ceiba are its most distinctive feature. Diverging from the main stem long before they strike into the ground, they form such buttresses as to make the ceiba seem a regular citadel of almost unassailable strength.

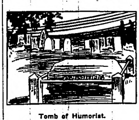
From the pods on the tree a sticky, silk-like substance is obtained once a year and used for the stuffing of cushions. Natives of the islands say the same tree had served their ancestors with clothing from its pods since the earliest legends of the island.

THE GRAVE OF JOSH BILLINGS

Remains of the Quaint Humorous Writer and Lecturer Rest Near Ganesborough, Mass.

Ganesborough, Mass.—Henry Wheeler Shaw, whose pen name was "Josh Billings," was born at Ganesborough, Mass., and died at Monterey, Cal., 1885.

Starting at the age of fifteen in search of fortune, he led an unsettled life for several years. He tried farming, running a steamboat on the Ohio, store keeping and teaching, but was unsuccessful in all of them. He drifted back east and settled in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., 1858, as an auctioneer. His contributions to the newspapers, under the pen name "Josh Billings," brought him liberal returns. His writings are characterized by a quaint shrewdness, and a humorous element intensified by the crude phonetic spelling which he adopted. He lectured throughout the country, and in addition to his sketches, issued in four volumes, published an annual almanac.



Tomb of Humorist.

After his death his remains were brought to Ganesborough, the town of his nativity. Close to the highway in the little old graveyard he awaits the last roll call. One of his quaint sayings was: "Riz arly, work hard an' late, sell what yu kant use, giv nothing awa, an' if yu don't die ritch an' go tu the devil, yu kan sue me for damages."

TOURIST GAVE AWAY HIS AUTO

Became Angry When His Car Ran Into a Ditch and Gave It to a Small Boy.

Hammond, Ind.—"Take the blamed machine and welcome," snapped a New York tourist as he crawled from under his automobile in front of the home of Cecil Hancock, near here. The man was on his way to Chicago, Ill., from New York city when the knuckle in the steering gear broke and sent the car up-side-down into the ditch. In addition to paying the boy who hauled him to the nearest railroad station he gave the lad the car, valued at $2,000 and in good condition save for some scratches and twisted irons as the result of the accident.

The tourist refused to give his name but the car bears the tag No. 8605, New York. When the lad's father learned of his son's good fortune he sold the car to a dealer and will apply the money toward giving his son a college education.

Canned Hymns at Funeral.

Carver, Mass.—Singing by phonograph at a funeral is the latest here. At the funeral of Ralph U. Graffam a record containing one of the old-fashioned church hymns was started on the machine. After prayers others were given, the record reproducing other favorite hymns sung at services over the dead. It was favorably commented on as a practical substitute for the usual [illegible]

HE HAD THEM IN A CORNER

Clergyman's Rebuke to Thoughtless Youths at Once Neat and Disconcerting.

A well-known clergyman was one day in a barber's shop, when four or five young men walked in whom he knew by their voices, but who did not recognize the man in the chair, with lather all over his face. They proceeded to spend the time by telling stories and using expressions which, to say the least, were rather strong. When the barber pulled away the towel the clergyman, cleanly shaved, stood before them. So nonplussed were they that no one tried to take the vacant chair, and the barber called several times: "Next gentleman!"

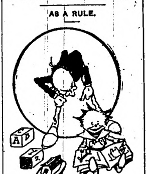
The clergyman smiled somewhat grimly as he said:

"It isn't a bit of use, John. There's not a man here who has the effrontery to answer to that name."

TO KEEP THE SKIN CLEAR

For more than a generation, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have done more for pimples, blackheads and other unsightly conditions of the complexion, red, rough, chapped hands, dandruff, itching, scaly scalps, and dry, thin and falling hair than any other method. They do even more for skin-tortured and disfigured infants and children. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-page book on the care of the skin and hair will be sent post-free, on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 22 L, Boston.

AS A RULE.



"What is an income tax, pa?"

"A wife, my son."

The Wreck.

Mrs. Ronald H. Barlow, the eastern golf champion, was talking at the Cape May Golf club about the benefits of sea air. "To look at the cottagers and natives of Cape May," she said, "speaks of these benefits more eloquently than I could do. How pale and wan seem city people beside these brown, supple, vigorous men and women! An excursionist from the city said to a fisherman on the beach the other morning:

"'Do you have many wrecks here?'

"The fisherman looked contemptuously at the city man, who was in bathing dress. He looked contemptuously at his hollow chest and white, thin legs and arms, and then he replied: 'You're the fust I've saw this season.'"

The Fly.

"Where on earth do those flies come from?" is a frequent and despairing question.

They may come down the chimneys, if the fireplaces have tipping dampers. These should be tightly closed in fly-time. An appreciable falling-off in their number will result.

If the chimneys have not the tipping damper, a screen such as is used for a window can be fitted into the fireplace; or, easier still, a bundle of paper may be stuffed up the chimney.

Either method is successful, and no trouble is too great to get rid of these summer pests.

Cruel Disappointment.

Jugend tells this story: "In the lower court of a small town in Saxony William had served faithfully and well as attendant to the presiding judge for many years without ever having received any reward aside from his legal stipend. On the day of adjournment for the season, when visitors had retired, the judge, who was also about to leave, asked: "William, do you smoke?" Seeing a square box under the judge's arm, he answered respectfully: 'Yes, your honor.' 'I knew it by the smell of your coat,' said the judge, as he walked out."

AT THE PARSONAGE.

Coffee Runs Riot No Longer.

"Wife and I had a serious time of it while we were coffee drinkers.

"She had gastritis, headaches, belching and would have periods of sickness, while I secured a daily headache that became chronic.

"We naturally sought relief by drugs without avail, for it is now plain enough that no drug will cure the diseases another drug (coffee) sets up, particularly, so long as the drug which causes the trouble is continued.

"Finally we thought we would try leaving off coffee and using Postum. I noticed that my headaches disappeared like magic, and my old 'trembly' nervousness left. One day wife said, 'Do you know my gastritis has gone?'

"One can hardly realize what Postum has done for us.

"Then we began to talk to others. Wife's father and mother were both coffee drinkers and sufferers. Their headaches left entirely a short time after they changed from coffee to Postum.

"I began to enquire among my parishioners and found to my astonishment that numbers of them use Postum in place of coffee. Many of the ministers who have visited our parsonage have become enthusiastic champions of Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Family Enough.

Horace, five years old, has a brother nine, and a sister three, and with his father and mother, he deemed this family large enough. When, therefore, he was told by his aunt that a little baby was to be added to the family, he protested:

"I think papa and mamma might better spend their money for more strawberries and powdered sugar for me," he observed, indignantly.

On a certain day a doctor came to the house and Horace thought he knew what that meant. His spirit of revolt nearly got the better of him, however, when a second doctor came.

A few hours later, after the doctors had departed, his Aunt Ella told him he had a new little brother. Horace brightened, and tiptoed to his mother's room. "It's all right, mamma," he assured her. "There's only one."

COUNTIES ARE HELPING.

Highway Engineer Says New Roads Law Has Aroused Enthusiasm.

Under the new good roads laws county commissioners are taking more interest in the construction and maintenace of roads than heretofore, and are willing to work with the state commission. So says George W. Cooley, state highway engineer, who returned from Litchfield, where he conferred with fifty-two assistant engineers.

"It was the best meeting of engineers I ever attended," Mr. Cooley said. "We held six sessions, had one stereopticon exhibit, and discussed the new road laws. Road and bridge construction, maintenance and superintendence were our chief topics. The meeting acted as a sort of school of instruction. We did not plan for any certain line of work, but discussed them all."

Frank W. Gilbert, vice president of the Spokane, Wash., Good Roads association, has written L. W. Hill, a member of the state highway commission, asking that the model roads exhibit prepared for use at the state fair be loaned to the association for its annual convention. Mr. Hill forwarded the request to Mr. Cooley, who decided he would refuse it because it is needed here. Oregon, Wyoming and Idaho also asked for the exhibit, and all have been refused. The exhibit is made chiefly of cement and sawdust, and illustrates the construction of various model roads and bridges. It was prepared by J. H. Mullen, the assistant state highway engineer.

In commenting on the exhibit, Mr. Hill said it had received more favorable attention than any other exhibit of any other state at any fair. It was loaned to Omaha last year, but probably will not be let out again.

SHERIFF HAZEN'S BILL HELD UP.

Beltrami County Sheriff Accused of Making Illegal Charges.

Bemidji.—A. B. Hazen, sheriff of Beltrami county, against whom charges were made some weeks ago by Viggo Peterson, chairman of the Beltrami Board of County Commissioners, which Attorney General Simpson refused to act upon until after the Dr. Dumas trial, is again in the limelight.

On the allegation that a bill against the county amounting to $752.70 contained illegal items, Peterson and County Auditor George refused to approve the bill. Sheriff Hazen secured a writ of mandamus to compel the county to pay him the money and arguments on this writ were heard yesterday. County Attorney Graham H. Torrance appeared for Peterson. Auditor George declared that in the Hazen bill more than $150 was an illegal charge. Mr. Torrance cited that the sheriff sought to collect $66 for bringing persons into court, despite the fact that he was paid a regular fee of $3 a day for this work.

It was also urged by the county attorney that the sheriff has charged the county for fifty miles of mileage for papers served on one day to persons living in the city of Bemidji and that he was not entitled to more than six miles of mileage for this work.

Henry Kunkley, who appeared for the sheriff, requested that the mater go over to August 28 to permit him to look up the law. This request was granted.

CREAMERY MAKING GOOD.

Farmers Lend Their Support to New State Industry.

Albert Lea.—The Albert Lea state creamery is making excellent progress since it passed into the hands of the state, the receipts of milk having largely increased since the plant was taken over. A few farmers were disgruntled at the change, but now the work is getting their support. Particular efforts are being made regarding the testing of milk and cream for butter fat, and good results are being reported, while unfit milk and cream seldom is presented at the weighing window.

The buildings will be put in first-class condition and the grounds improved. The aim of the management is to make the institution in all respects a model creamery, and at the same time carry on the work in a practical manner.

PRICELESS CORONATION BOOK

Unique Twelfth-Century Bible on Which Many British Sovereigns Took the Oath.

London.—There is in the British Museum a volume known as the Coronation Book of Henry I. All the kings from his day to Henry VIII. swore the coronation oath on this volume. It consists of extracts from the Gospels written in Latin interlined with Saxon. The whole is written on vellum and enclosed within deerskin-covered boards. The most striking feature of the cover is the metal figure of Christ finely chased. The cornerpieces are of later date. As an example of English twelfth-century binding it is almost unique, and its value from a historical and archaeological point of view is quite priceless.

Coronation Book of Henry I.

Very interesting and beautiful is the Bible and the Communion Services which were prepared for use at Westminster Abbey for the recent coronation and were bound under the direction of the Oxford and Cambridge Presses at the Oxford binding house. All three volumes are bound uniformly in red-grained morocco, ornamented with hand-tooled work in gold from designs prepared under the advice of Mr. Cyril Davenport, superintendent of bookbinding in the British Museum. On the covers appear the Royal Coat-of-Arms of England, with Garter, Collar of the Order of the Garter, the Rose of England, the Thistle of Scotland, and small Tudor roses, buds and leaves.

WINS REPUTATION IN MUNICH

Work of Miss Kuehne Beveridge, Talented American Sculptress, Attracting Attention Abroad.

Munich, Bavaria. — Miss Kuehne Beveridge, the talented Illinois sculptress, who created a sensation at Leipzig some time ago with some passionate groups, has completed at Munich the bust of Prince Ludwig Ferdinand of Bavaria, for which the prince has been sitting for her.

In addition she has finished a statue of Amfortas, the keeper of the Holy Grail, which Munich critics declare to be her best work. The model for the statue was Clarence Whitehill of the Metropolitan Opera, New York, who created the role of Amfortas in Wagner's "Parsifal" in America and has also sung the part in Beyreuth.

Writing of the statue, a Munich critic says: "The conception is simple and yet powerful; it is dramatic and yet elegant—the hands alone would make this work remarkable; they are the hands of a strong man and a gentle man; they are wasted by suffering almost to emaciation, but their beauty of line and character remains." Miss Beveridge is a granddaughter of John L. Beveridge, former governor of Illinois.

Glencoe.—An automobile driven by A. B. Tucker, general merchant of this city, turned turtle off a four-foot grade into the mud at Lake Mary, seven miles west of this city. Miss Fannie Cramm of Jacksonville, Ill., was suffocated in the mud.

Bemidji. — Because he searched a prisoner in the Koochiching county jail at International Falls and found $30 which he kept, Charles Ingram, 27 years old, was committed to the reformatory at St. Cloud by Judge Stanton. The young man had been employed as a turnkey at the jail and part of his duties was to search prisoners when brought in to be locked up. After having searched the man who had $30 he resigned his position, but was later rearrested in International Falls and the money taken from the prisoner was found upon him.

Duluth.—Investigation by a committee of the Common Council into alleged graft in paving contracting in Duluth was resumed and another contractor, A. G. Osman, testified that P. McDonnell had offered him $1,000 not to bid on the West Fourth street paving. Hugh Steele, another Duluth contractor, started this investigation by declaring McDonnell offered him $1,000 not to bid on the same job. Steele declined and submitted a bid, but Osman did not, when the work was offered the second time, but testified that he did not get the $1,000 from McDonnell, the latter saying he could not afford to pay it since Steele put in a bid.

SUES RANGE ROAD.

Government Alleges D. M. & N. Has Broken Sixteen-Hour Law.

Duluth.—A suit has just been instituted in the United States circuit court by order of Attorney General Wickersham against the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railway, on a charge of breaking the federal law, which is described as "an act to promote the safety of employes and travelers on railways by limiting the service of employes to sixteen successive hours."

The government demands damages of $3,000, based upon the number of employes on the train. It is the first suit of the kind filed in the state.

The petition was filed by United States District Attorney Houpt and says the law was broken May 10, 1911, by the defendant company between the stations of Proctor and Coleraine.

MAY SOLVE RIVER MYSTERY.

Clothes Found at Little Falls to Establish Identity of Dead Man.

Little Falls.—What may prove the clearing up of a mystery came to light here when the sheriff was notified of wearing apparel on the river bank, eight miles south of Little Falls. Near the clothes was a small board on which was scratched: "This clears J. Henderson. R. K. Brown."

August 3, a body was found in the river at about this same point. The man had been seen in the neighborhood for some time, but no one had talked with him. When his body was found he had very little clothing. The articles found were a hat, pair of shoes, necktie, cooking utensils and a can of beans. No one by the name of Henderson is known here.

Beltrami State Fair Exhibit.

Bemidji.—"The effort which is being put forth to obtain a fine exhibit of Beltrami county products for the state fair is resulting in encouraging results," says A. P. Ritchie, secretary of the Beltrami County Agricultural association, chosen by the Board of County Commissioners to have charge of the local exhibit. "We are geting remarkably fine samples."

Funds with which to finance the seventh annual fair of the Beltrami County Agricultural association here September 13, 14, and 15, are being obtained in such amounts as to guarantee the success of this year's exposition. Reports received by Secretary A. P. Ritchie are indicative that there will be large exhibits in all classes.

LAUGHTER PLEASING TO GOD

Nowhere in Biblical Lore Can There Be Found Intimation of Any Other Idea.

We misjudge and distort the normally human nature of the Saviour when we picture him going through life, as Dante did after he had written his "Inferno," with the shadows of perdition on his brow. We may gravely question when it was that the cross began to darken our Lord's pathway; there is no hint of such a foreboding until we reach the middle of his ministry. From that on there are occasional tokens that he saw Calvary ahead of him, and was at times pressed down with a dreadful sense of the inevitable agony which awaited him at the end. But all this is very far from affording any reasonable ground for the conclusion that he smiled sometimes, but never laughed.

If God did not intend us to laugh, on occasion, why did he endow us with the capacity to laugh, with a sense of the humorous, with the faculty to see and enjoy wit, fun and the absurd side of life; and, furthermore, why did he produce so many things and people to laugh at?—Zion's Herald.

In Strict Obedience.

Master Gregory Graham, aged three, had been having an ocean bath, and breaking away from his older sister he ran all dripping wet to the door of the living room, where Mrs. Graham was entertaining a caller from the fashionable hotel.

"Why, Greg," his mother greeted him, "you mustn't come in here like that, dear. Go straight upstairs and take off your bathing suit first."

A few minutes later Mrs. Graham turned toward the door in curiosity as to what sight there had sent her visitor's eyebrows up so high, and in the same moment her son's cheerful voice rang out:

"I tooked it off, mother, like you told me to. I'm coming in now for some cake."

The Bridegroom's Portion.

Miss Elsie Gentsch, who teaches Sunday school, had been reading to her class from the gospel of Matthew, and was examining a promising boy, a newcomer, about the subject matter.

"There were ten virgins," said the young man, "five wise ones and five foolish ones, and the five wise ones filled their lamps and the five foolish ones wasn't in no hurry. And at midnight came the bridegroom. So the five foolish ones went across the street to buy oil and got locked out."

"Very good," said the teacher. "And what did the bridegroom do?"

"Why," said the good little student, "he married the five wise ones."—Cleveland Leader.

GET POWER.

The Supply Comes From Food.

If we get power from food why not strive to get all the power we can. That is only possible by use of skilfully selected food that exactly fits the requirements of the body.

Poor fuel makes a poor fire and a poor fire is not a good steam producer.

"From not knowing how to select the right food to fit my needs, I suffered grievously for a long time from stomach troubles," writes a lady from a little town in Missouri.

"It seemed as if I would never be able to find out the sort of food that was best for me hardly anything that I could eat would stay on my stomach. Every attempt gave me heartburn and filled my stomach with gas. I got thinner and thinner until I literally became a living skeleton, and in time was compelled to keep to my bed.

A few months ago I was persuaded to try Grape-Nuts food, and it had such good effect from the very beginning that I have kept up its use ever since. I was surprised at the ease with which I digested it. It proved to be just what I needed.

"All my unpleasant symptoms, the heartburn, the inflated feeling which gave me so much pain disappeared. My weight gradually increased from 98 to 116 pounds, my figure rounded out, my strength came back, and I am now able to do my housework and enjoy it. Grape-Nuts food did it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

A ten days' trial will show anyone some facts about food.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Every person who attends the fair will find something of interest in the bureau of labor booth.

A Contest Worth While

The Boys' Judging contest, to be held at the coming Minnesota State Fair will be of far greater value to all who participate than is indicated by the sum to be distributed in prizes, liberal as the amount is. For it will afford such training as the art of judging live stock, corn and wheat, as will count heavily in developing the boy's capacity in his future life on the farm. Earl Zeller, the 14-year-old Iowa boy, who has won $2,000 in competitions for prizes for the best single ear and best ten ears of corn in various county, state, and national contests, $1,000 of it in a single year, says that he took the two weeks' course in corn and stock judging at Ames, Iowa; and that he thinks "it is one of the finest things the state has ever done" for the boys and girls of Iowa. Preparation for and participation in the contest at our fair should be well nigh as advantageous as attendance at a "short course."

Taft's Statehood Veto

President Taft is not a statesman; he is a jurist, and views all questions through the reverse end of a telescope. President Taft vetoed the joint resolution of congress providing for the admission of Arizona and New Mexico to statehood, because of the recall judge clause in the Arizona constitution, which the president denounced as "perniciou in its effects so destructive of independence in the judiciary, so likely to the possible tyranny of a popular majority, and therefore to be injurious to the cause of free goverment."

President Taft in his denunciatory veto does not admit that there is a cause for the growing sentiment for the the recall of judges, nor does his political ear appear to be close enough to the people to learn that the decisions of the courts in many instances have provoked universal condemnation by the masses. It is better that the people "terrorize the judges than a few individuals or corporations, who secure their election or appointment, should dicate their opinions. It cannot be denied that not a few judges owe their appointment to an influence or election through machine politics controlled by great interests and that these judges stand before their masters hat in hand, ready to obey. President Taft forgets that this "government is instituted for the security and protection of the people, in whom all political power is inherent, together with the right to alter, modify or reform such government, whenever the public good require it."

The people have a right to reform the judiciary, revolutionize it, if necessary for the good of the public demand, and if it were possible, the supreme court of he United States would be Harlandized and every judge of that court, except Justice Harland, recalled by an overwhelming vote of the nation.

Who can trace the serpent path of the corrupt interested influence which has, from time to time, placed not a few men on the federal bench? This same interested influence has secured the election and appointment of judges in Minnesota as well as other states. There is a cause for the people to demand even to the recall of judges and eventually the inherent political power of the people will be heard and the government restored to the people who are the government. For nearly twenty-five years this has been a government by commission, with less than a half dozen self consituted commissioners directing all legislation in the interest of centralized wealth. Never in the history of the nation has a president promulgated a document which has belittled derided and condemned the judgment of the people of the United States as does the language used by President Taft in his veto message on the Arizona-New Mexico statehood resolution. In fact it remained for Taft alone to so damn the American people. The American people are patriotic, and love their country with as much reverence as President Taft and are as much interested in its perpetuity. They respect a just judge and will uphold righteous decisions, but they will not stand for a judiciary that deprives them of a single right guaranteed them under the constitution. President Taft has demonstrated that he is not of the people, he is a silk stocking jurist in all things and has no faith even in the majority of the people. In matters of affairs of state he is a bundle of contradictions and exceedingly short sighted. One thing he has accomplished a divided republican party.—Roseau Times.

Handling Cream

ESTEEMED PATRON:—With the incoming rush of August, September, and early October let us not forget that our dairy is a source of income the year around, and therefore, it should not be slighted because of harvest, threshing, or plowing.

It isn't enough to deliver cream twice a week during this hot season, it should be brought three times per week and it is absolutely necessary that we take the best possible care of it even then in order to insure its reaching the creamery in good condition.

Cream should be brought to the creamery early in the morning before the maximum heat of day, as being exposed to the heat of the direct rays of the noon sun for an hour or two while in a tin can is enough to turn the best kind of cream into a poor article. Cream should not be kept in old cans. By old cans we mean cans that from time and usage have gradually lost their coat of tin and have become black inside. To keep cream in such cans for even a short time will change it from a first grade article to an inferior article, highly metallic and unpleasant to the taste.

The separator bowl and all parts thereof, as well as all milk utensils, should occasionally be washed out with a mild solution of Wyandotte washing powder, for sale at the city at 25 cents per 5 lb. sack. Each sack contains full directions for using.

The demand for creamery butter in the markets of the world, over the demand for such subterfuges as oleomargarine and renovated butter is entirely dependent upon the superior quality of said creamery butter, and in order to keep up this superiority we must always remember that cleanliness and care make for quality. Quality makes demand and demand makes high prices.

Let's get together then and work and plan to produce the kind of cream that can be made into an article that will meet the most critical demands of the consumer.

Sincerely, A. J. HED.

Don't Carry Guns

The statement published in the last issue of the Spectator and taken from the Crookston Times that dogs might be run in the fields from Aug. 15 to to Sept. 1, and that from Sept. 1 to 7 guns might be used is incorrect.

No guns can be carried, empty or loaded, and no shells fired, blank or loaded, before the chicken season opens Sept. 7.

Dogs may be run from Aug. 15 to Sept. 7 for exercise or practice provid ing the person running the dogs carries no gun or that no one in the party has a gun that is available

"Going to send your son to art school?"

"I should say not. I want him to learn something."

An Oversight.

"Seen anything of a horse thief going by here?"

"I don't know. Several men have gone by, but I didn't think to ask any of them if they were horse thieves."

No Satisfaction.

"I am afraid I will have to give up smoking."

"The doctor order it?"

"No; my wife is beginning to like the odor of a good cigar."

The amount of egotism that some people manage to flourish with is a matter of constant astonishment to most modest mortals.

Some misinformation has such a convincing sound that it is so hard to resist it.

Guns.

The Germans were the inventors of the first gun. About 1378 Schwartz, a German machinist, manufactured numerous crude guns which were brought into use by the Venetians in 1392. It is a strange fact that cannon were made before small firearms. At Amberg there is still a piece of ordnance marked with the date 1303. Cannon were first used in war at the battle of Crecy, in 1346. It was not until 1544, however, that they were made in England.

An "Associated" School

K. O. Gigstad is in correspondence with Supt. Hay of Thief River Falls schools, in regard to "association" of our school with the latter under a law of the last legislature. This is no sense of the word a consolidation; the St. Hilaire school will not give up its organization nor independence but will be aided by the "central" school in a course of agriculture and industrial work. Our school will also receive $50.00 more from the state school fund than before.

How to Go and Forget.

I know how to hold
As the lovers of old—
How to cling to you, sing to you,
Let all the world know the song that I bring to you,
But I do not know yet
How to go and forget.

I know how to call
To the God over all—
How to sigh for you, cry for you,
Fight down the terrible dark till I die for you,
But I do not know yet
How to go and forget.
—Edwin Markham in Delineator.

FLAX STRAW

To Farmers and Whom It May Concern:

Having established at Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, a Flax Tow Mill, I hereby take pleasure in communicating this fact to the public. This mill will purchase all good, sound flax straw of 1911 crop only, offered and brought to the mill grounds by the farmers themselves or shipped to the mill in bales from near by stations located on the railroad, and immediate cash will be paid for it.

The longer the straw the more valuable for making tow, and I therefore respectfully request and advise the farming community to cut the straw as low down as possible, for it is the length of the fibre in the tow which makes it of a desirable quality.

I own four more flax tow mills in Dakota, and own mills or am financially interested in several others located in the states of Minnesota and Iowa.

Mr. Louis Kümpf, my general foreman, and Mr. George Thompson, both of whom are at the present time at Red Lake Falls, will give you all further information should you call on them personally or write to them, and I am sure you will find them both absolutely honest and fair gentlemen.

My great desire is to be fair myself with all mankind and the farmers especially, and those who treat me fair in their dealing will always find me honest and square in dealing with them.

Trusting that our relations may be at all times harmonious and to the interest of both of us, I remain,

Yours faithfully,

Cement Talk No. 2

Portland Cement does not come from Portland, Maine, or Portland, Oregon, and it was not first made at either of these places. It is called Portland because it was given this name by the Englishman who first made it. He called it Portland because he thought it resembled certain natural deposits on the Isle of Portland in England. Portland Cement is the fine powder produced by pulverizing the clinker resulting from the burning together of various materials of proper chemical composition. In the case of Universal Portland Cement, these raw materials are blast furnace slag and pure limestone. There are many brands of Portland Cement on the market, produced by different manufacturers. Universal is one of the best known and highest grade Portland Cements. You can always tell it by the name Universal and the blue trade mark printed on each sack. Forty million sacks of Universal are made and used yearly in this country. If you have any concrete work to do, you will make no mistake by using Universal Portland Cement. Universal is for sale by representative dealers everywhere.

LAWYER CURED OF ECZEMA

"While attending school at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1882, I became afflicted with boils, which lasted for about two years, when the affliction assumed the form of an eczema on my face, the lower part of my face being inflamed most of the time. There would be water-blisters rise up and open, and wherever the water would touch it would burn, and cause another one to rise. After the blister would open, the place would scab over, and would burn and itch so as to be almost unbearable at times. In this way the sores would spread from one place to another, back and forth over the whole of my upper lip and chin, and at times the whole lower part of my face would be a solid sore. This condition continued for four or five years, without getting any better, and in fact got worse all the time, so much so that my wife became alarmed lest it prove fatal.

"During all this time of boils and eczema, I doctored with the best physicians of this part of the country, but to no avail. Finally I decided to try Cuticura Remedies, which I did, taking the Cuticura Resolvent, applying the Cuticura Ointment to the sores, and using the Cuticura Soap for washing. In a very short time I began to notice improvement, and continued to use the Cuticura Remedies until I was well again, and have not had a recurrence of the trouble since, which is over twenty years. I have recommended Cuticura Remedies to others ever since, and have great faith in them as remedies for skin diseases." (Signed) A. C. Brandon, Attorney-at-Law, Greenville, O., Jan. 17, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 3 K, Boston.

3 CORNERED FIGHT

STANDPATTERS, DEMOCRATS, INSURGENTS EACH HAVE OWN PROGRAMS.

TWO FACTIONS MAY JOIN

Much Will Depend on Board's Report and Recommendations of Taft For Changing the Schedules.

Washington, D. C. — The Democrats, the progressive Republicans and the regular Republicans will have their own programs for tariff revision legislation when congress reconvenes in December.

All three elements in the senate will be engaged in a great battle on the general subject of revision, the most important feature of the contemplated work of the regular session. Much of the trend of the fight will depend upon the report of the tariff board and the recommendations of the president in connection with that report.

The regular Republicans do not anticipate much actual tariff revision at the coming session by reason of the wide divergence of opinion in the senate. They contend that failure is likely to follow attempts to bring together either the regular and progressive Republicans or the latter and the Democrats.

Won't Predict Renewed Alliance.

Neither the Democrats nor the progressive Republicans, whose alliance swept revision legislation through the senate until the combination was broken on the cotton bill, are willing to predict a renewal of that alliance in December.

Senator Martin, of Virginia, Democratic leader of the senate, declared, however, that if the president's recommendation should be for large reductions and many of the regular standpat Republicans failed to support the recommendations, the situation would tend to line up the Democrats and Republican insurgents.

The regular Republicans have expressed the fear that the tariff board's recommendations may be too radical for their acceptance. They contend that most of the measures resulting from a progressive Republican-Democratic alliance are likely to fail in conference on the ground that the Democrats desire to fight the next national campaign on the Payne-Aldrich tariff law.

The regulars also depend on the presidential veto to put a quietus on any measure that would be satisfactory to Democrats and insurgents.

Good Vacation Advice.

Bishop Spalding, on a hot summer morning, gave one of the congregations of Portland, Ore., a timely piece of advice.

"Don't," he said, "when you go off on your vacation, leave all your religion behind and take all your collection away with you."

Birds of a Feather

"What's the bill for fixing my motor car?" asked the strange patron.

"It figures up to $110, sir," replied the garage man.

"Whew! I'll have to give you a check. I left all my money in my drug store."

"Why, are you a druggist?"

"Yes."

"Oh, in that case the bill will be a dollar and a quarter. We fellows ought to stand together."

Avoid Disputation.

The disputatious person never makes a good friend. In friendship, men look for peace and concord and some measure of content. There are enough battles to fight outside, enough jarring and jostling in the street, enough disputing in the market place, enough discord in the workaday world, without having to look for contention in the realm of the inner life also. There, if anywhere, we ask for an end of strife. Friendship is the sanctuary of the heart, and the peace of the sanctuary should brood over it. Its chiefest glory is that the dust and noise of contest are excluded.—Hugh Black.

BAIT IS A HUMBUG

Queer Freaks in Lures That Tempt Finny Tribe.

Piscatorial Brood Eagerly Jump for Hobgoblin Monstrosities That Would Be Food only for Billy Goats.

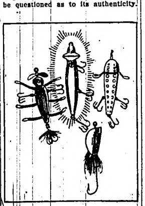
St. Paul, Minn.—Why does a fish bite? Of course there is the angler's dexterity, adroitness, luck, experience, personal magnetism and all that, and everyone can tell why a fish doesn't bite; there are as many jinx as there are fishermen. But why does a fish bite? What is the psychology of bait?

Doubtless angling originally consisted in offering something to tempt the appetite of the piscatorial brood. But that idea seems almost to have dropped out of the world-old business of fishing. For of all the hundreds of lures used by casters for fish few would satisfy hunger. If the game sought were billy goats or ostriches, the combinations of rubber, tin, glass, paint and feathers might be tempting. But why any sane fish will jump for a red and green hobgoblin that resembles nothing it ever has seen before, is a mystery to fishermen. And why it will grab it today and pass it by with cold disdain tomorrow is as deep a mystery.

They're inconsistent, too, and you've got to give them something new all the time. Now, the ibis fly is the hobble skirt of angling. Last year it was the bucktail, and the year before something else. You've got to keep up on the fashions in flies if you want to catch fish.

The ibis fly resembles nothing that the fish feed on. A vermillion feather hides a hook that may or may not have attached a "tab" of salt pork. Yet the fishermen who have caught the big bass this year say there is nothing so good as the ibis fly. The fish take it and the angler has no regret in being a nature faker.

There is a story of the buck tail's origin that, being a fish story, cannot be questioned as to its authenticity.



Some Freak Artificial Baits.

A hunter in the north, stalking deer, saw a herd in a lake and while getting range saw a large fish jump repeatedly at the tail of a buck. After bringing down the deer he fixed the tail on a hook; it proved the best bait he ever had used. The buck tail fly, a brown and white tuft of hair, is a good bait, though there is no insect listed that it could have been copied from.

But the buck tail and ibis fly are attractive morsels to human eyes, compared with the monstrosities that the fish have been invited to bite at in seasons past. Any self-respecting fish getting in early from a little crawdad supper of the night before might not be blamed for mistaking an ibis or a buck tail for something he had seen in pairs, or fours, at some other time. But the fish that strikes at a "coaxer," or a "yellow kid," two freak baits, probably has had domestic troubles.

The Paris of fish bait fashions is in the east, and it is a notable fact that none of the frivolous things have come from prohibition territory. The inventor of fish lures has a temperament that is not fostered in dry countries. Take the "coaxer." It resembles a miniature rooster in profile; a hunk of white wood is set off by a pert tail of red feathers and two cute little suggestions of wings of red felt. Natural histories show no freaks that could have been the inspiration for this. And the coaxer is some persuader, anglers will tell you.

From the impressionistic school comes the "roamer;" the motif of this is purely allegorical. In your worst nightmares you may have seen the roamer family in various colors. The roamer also is cigar-shaped; it has a round head with protruding eyes and a fan tail that is a beauty. Six wriggly red legs—guaranteed to wriggle—add to the grotesqueness and hide the hooks. The prevailing color is a mottled green with white underneath. Somehow the roamer makes a strong appeal to the fish.

And in all this catering to the whims of the haunters of deep pools, the designers have not forgotten the tender phase that has a part in the fish's existence—the season of sentiment. For this there is the moonlight minnow—they even gave it a poetic name. For night fishing this bait has succeeded, and typifies earthly love. Ungainly and of a dead white in the day time, it glows into a graceful shape as it is drawn along the surface of the water at night. Several hooks are hidden in its nebulousness, but the fish [illegible]

WILL NOT BE HELD IN TRUST

Most of His $38,000,000 Goes to Widow and Son, Who Is to Marry Miss Hopwood of Minneapolis.

Aurora, Illinois. — Mr. John W. Gates did not leave his millions to be held in trust. He did not fear, as reported, that his son, Charles Gates, who is engaged to wed Miss Florence Hopwood of Minneapolis, might imperil others who had invested on the elder Gates' advice. This was the information made public by relatives here. On the contrary, just before he died, the noted financier declared that he had every faith in his son.

"Charley is all right," he said in Paris. "I know him better than any one else; he can handle money all right. It won't go to his head."

Mr. Gates' will is to be probated in New York, Oct. 2, according to the relatives. By its terms his wealth, estimated at 38,000,000, except a number of minor legacies to friends and distant relatives, goes to his widow and to Charles Gates.

In St. Charles, Ill., just outside of Chicago, more than a half million dollars goes to relatives of Mr. Gates' wife. Mr. Gates' affection for his wife was deep and he loved to show favors to her relatives during his life time.

DISCUSS STATE ROADS.

Better Highway Committee of Development League Begins Work.

Brainerd.—Wadena, Cass, Aitkin, Becker, Clay, Todd, Otter Tail, Crow Wing and other counties were represent at the meeting of the good roads committee of the Northern Minnesota Development Association.

It was decided that the Duluth to Moorhead road should be taken up under one judicial proceeding. The route so far as outlined goes from Moorhead to Detroit thence to Frazee, Perham, Wadena, Staples, Motley, Brainerd, practically paralleling the Northern Pacific railway.

In Crow Wing county one faction wanted the road continued to Mille Lacs lake and the other wanted it run to Ironton, nearest the scene of mining operations on the Cuyuna range. The main trouble centers in having Crow Wing, Aitkin and Carleton counties mutually agree on the last leg of the route.

Chairman King of the good roads committee said the road so far as laid out joins many completed sections of roads and the expenditure for improvements will not be a great burden on the state.

The International Falls road will parallel practically the Minnesota & International railway and will have its terminus at Douglas Lodge in the Itasca State park.

Of outside delegations present Aitkin county made the best showing with the entire Board of County Commissioners, the county attorney and four members of the Commercial club present.

Of the good roads committee Charles M. King, chairman, Deer River; Chris. Burns, Cass Lake, and J. S. Pardee, secretary, Duluth, were present.

Crow Wing had the largest delegation, the county commissioners, county attorney and officials of the Commercial club and Automobile Association being present.

BID CUTS DITCH COST.

Sherwood of Alexandria Gets Biggest State Job for $167,654.

William Sherwood of Alexandria got the contract for the construction of state drainage ditch No. 96, traversing parts of Kittson and Roseau counties, and the largest work of its kind undertaken, at the opening of bids in the office of George A. Ralph, state drainage engineer, on a bid of 7.97 cents a cubic yard, making an aggregate cost of $167,645.

The contract calls for seven bridges, 105 culverts, 92 miles of road and 103 miles of ditch, which will require the excavation of 1,800,000 cubic yards of dirt.

This ditch is the one for which Representative Mattson obtained a special appropriation of $12,000 from the recent legislature to pay the benefits assessed against state land. It is expected the ditch will reclaim hundreds of acres that at present produce nothing. The contract calls for the completion of the ditch by December 1, 1913.

Mr. Ralph's estimate of the cost of digging the big ditch was $200,000. The bid acepted is 35 per cent less than average bids for similar county ditch work.

The next lowest bidder was John Brogan of Green Bay, Wis., at 8.87 cents a cubic yard, $184.462 for the job. E. D. Barr of Potterville, Mich., was next at 9.5 cents a cubic yard, $194,165 for the job. The Walcott Dredging Company of Lafayette, Ind., Forrestal & Feyen of St. Paul and John Kohler of St. Paul all bid more than $200,000.

CROP PAYS FOR LAND.

Barley From 100 Acres Is Sold for $3,120, More Than the Land Cost.

Crookston. — Reliable reports of grain yields are beginning to come in as farmers complete threshing entire fields of considerable size. Barley is running from 30 to 50 bushels per acre. The oats yield is heavier, rye is averaging about 30 bushels per acre and wheat yields are running from 16 to 28 bushels to the acre.

R. A. Elzy of Marshalltown, Iowa, today finished threshing 100 acres of barley which yielded 3,250 bushels, which sold this morning for 96 cents per bushel in Crookston, amounting to $3,120 from the 100 acres or $31.50 per acre, more than the land originally cost Mr. Elzy. W. H. Reber finished a field two miles from this city this morning which yielded 16 bushels of No. 1 Northern wheat.

Two of the accused, who live at Gilbert, have some land in the vicinity of Pelican lake, and a few weeks ago they took five other Austrians with them to cut hay. TO CURE A KICKING HORSE

Harness Arranged in Manner to Teach Animal Futility of Trying for Its Own Sweet Way.

Sooner or later domesticated animals learn that they cannot have their own way, but must bow to the law of humans. Every once in awhile, however, there is born a horse who thinks he is entitled to his own opinion, and his favorite way of asserting himself is kicking the dashboard to bits. Two Missouri men have devised a harness which is warranted to cure this habit. Straps cross the horse's back and breast and at their junctions are fastened the ends of ropes which engage the fetlocks of the animal's hind legs in running loops. The other end of the ropes are fastened to staples in the horse's stall or to some other stationary object in front of which he is tied. The result is that when a horse is trussed up in this manner, if he tries to kick he finds he cannot get his hind hoof beyond a certain point, and after making a number of ineffectual efforts he becomes discouraged. If he is a particularly bad kicker he can be goaded into making these attempts until his spirit is broken in that respect.

HORSESHOE FOR MARSH LAND

Directions Given and Illustration Shows How Device Can Be Made to Prevent Slipping.

Fit up the ordinary horseshoe with toe and heel, throwing the heels well out, says the Blacksmith and Wheelwright. Make the bottom of the marsh shoe of two thicknesses of one-half inch hard wood, crossing the grain of the boards to prevent splitting. Slots A and B are cut for the toe and heel calks to rest in. This will prevent the marsh shoe from slipping around on the horse's foot.

Make a staple of three-eighth inch round iron and thread each end about three inches long. The width of the staple will depend on the width of the shoe. The staple is fastened to the board by inserting the ends through holes bored at CC. Bend another piece of three-eighth inch round iron E in the shape shown to fit around the horse's foot about two inches below the hair. The ends DD are bent up to fasten into the staple. Forge an eye on a bolt to fit over the rod E and attach to the board at F.

KEEPING SHEEP AT PASTURE

Animals Should Have Free Access to Water at All Times—Pine Tar Is Excellent Fly Cure.

Sheep do not require as much water as cattle, but they should have access to water when they do want it. When the weather is dry and the nights cloudy, when no dew falls, they may suffer if not watered. If there is no stream of water in the pasture the flock should be driven to water once daily.

The fly will make its appearance in midsummer. The fly aims to deposit its eggs within or close to the nostrils of the sheep. This is accompanied by no pain to the sheep; the eggs hatch in a few weeks and the little worm ascends the nostrils making the poor animal almost wild with nervous distress.

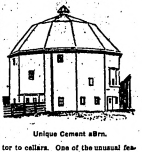
The best remedy is a little pine tar smeared on the nose. It should be frequently applied. By pouring a little tar in the feed troughs and sprinkling it over with fine salt and wheat bran the sheep will [illegible] their own [illegible]

CEMENT BARN QUITE UNIQUE

Indiana Farmer Builds Stable Polygon in Shape and Contains Not One Single Piece of Wood.

M. S. Yoder, a farmer living at Shipshewanna, Ind., is the designer and builder of a unique cement barn. Besides drawing up the plans and superintending the construction, Mr. Yoder invented a hay carrying device that conveys hay from the mow to any part of the barn by gasoline power, says the Popular Mechanics.

The barn itself is remarkable in shape; as it is a polygon with 12 equal sides and contains in its structure not a stick of wood from ventilator to cellars. One of the unusual features of its construction is that the reenforcement in the concrete is simply old Junk iron, mostly from an old bridge, but which served as well as the material made and sold for that purpose. This iron was wound with wire fencing to hold the cement to the beams and girders.



Unique Cement aBrn.

The roof in this barn is of concrete as well as the walls, and it conforms to the shape of the sides, giving the structure a pleasing appearance. The ground floor is arranged for cattle and houses 30 horses and cows. The second floor is a threshing floor and it approached by an old highway bridge used as re-enforcement with the cement.

The barn completed cost $1,700, besides the work of the farmer and his horses and hands.

STRONG TEAMS ARE NEEDED

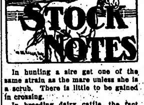
Crops Often Made or Saved by Proper Horse Power—Farmer Should Keep Brood Mares.

In these days there is much greater demand on the horse strength of a farm than there was in the premachinery days, and the possession of a sufficient number of workers to fully horse the various implements of the well-equipped farm often means the saving of a crop in the best possible condition, whereas hindrances through lack of horse power causes loss of good weather and damage forage or grain.

Of course it is possible to have too many horses, and especially those of the unsound or aged class, but of improving vigorous geldings under, say eight years old, it is hardly possible to have too many. The surplus may be reckoned as a salable asset at any time, and mares which are bringing a foal almost every year, besides helping in the collar for more than half of their time, cannot be described as useless drones.

It is the best policy, therefore, for every farmer to make his farm self-supporting in its horse supply by keeping as many good brood mares as there is need and convenience for, and use the best available sire so that each succeeding generation may be an improvement on the parent stock in value, in appearance and for work.

For tractability, together with activity, the sire of today is a long way in front of the coarse-legged, greasy-heeled specimens of by-gone days. He is flat limbed, smart, and free in his movements, and if haltered as a foal and put to light work at two years of age the breaking in is very simple process, and all kinds of work is readily taken to.



In hunting a sire get one of the same strain as the mare unless she is a scrub. There is little to be gained in crossing.

In breeding dairy cattle, the fact that they are destined for milk production must constantly be kept in mind.

The demand upon the foal's digestive system for nourishment is very great.

When ten days old dock your lambs and castrate those not kept for rams at about two weeks old.

The brood sow that is the best mother is never excessively fat.

If the dam becomes heated the milk is injurious to the colt.

If a colt is worth raising at all he is worth raising well.

In fattening hogs to the best advantage they should be graded; that is, the smaller ones should be in a pen by themselves.

In starting a lot of pigs it is easy to get in the habit of giving a certain quantity of feed and failing to increase as they grow.

It is bad policy to select the brood sows from the feed lot.

Do not forget that hogs are grazing animals and that pastures offer a mighty cheap place to keep them during the summer.

Senator La Follette is a living, breathing nightmare in action to the elder statesman of the Lorimer-Stevenson-Guggenheim stripe. Only the other day he rose in his seat and with more force than solemnity actually proposed a new senate rule to the effect that a senator should be barred from voting on any matter in which he was financially interested. This was a brutal attack at the very foundation of "privilege."

One great drawback to the advancement of this country is the knockers. This is not only true of the town people but the farmers as well, One principle cause is jealousy. If a farmer sees a piece of land in his vicinity being offered for sale his first thought is to discourage the prospective purchaser and break up the deal if possible. In taking this attitude he is acting against his own best interests. If he could but realize it, every sale to an actual settler and bona fide farmer of land in his neighborhood adds one dollar per acre to the value of his holdings. Lets try and look at this matter in a more liberal light and pull together for the best interests of all of us.

Did you ever meet a person who told he could not derive any benefit from the same source you could? Well we have. For instance he would advertise but fears that the people would not read his advertisements; he would belong to the commercial club but again he is seized with the fear lest the club should die out and he would be minus two months (unpaid) dues; he would give to the church but he can't give to them all: he would boost the town but you see the darn old thing never amounted to anything and it would not bring him sufficient returns. Next time you meet a person like this buy him a railroad ticket and wish him Godspeed.—Foley Tribune.

Since so many leaders have died or lost their seats in the U. S. Senate, it is a very different body from what it was a year ago. Senator La Follette of Wisconsin has now risen to the undisputed leadership of the U. S. senate and is carrying things with a high band. He has hitched the thirteen insurgent republican senators to the democratic chariot, thus uniting two minorities and forming a majority. This state of affairs recalls the first speech Senator La Follette made when he entered the senate in 1905. He was looked upon as an innovator when he entered the senate and during his first speech nearly all the senators left the senate chamber. He remarked that he could not be oblivious to the fact that the senators were absenting themselves from their seats as a direct insult to him. He remarked that those seats which were thus temporarily vacant, would in a few years be permanently vacated. That prophecy has been fulfilled and now instead of addressing empty seats Senator La Follette has a majority of the senators at his back.—Clay County Herald.

Observations

We no longer believe "what we can't see can't be." We've heard of too many men who walked straight over gold mines because they beheld only the rock and not the ore which it held.

You don't gain distinction through blind and bullying criticism, you merely distinguish yourself as a bumptious ass. Derision discloses ignorance oftener than it imposes it.

Bigotry can't live in the same atmosphere with mile-a-minute trains, river tunnels, and aeroplanes, and fifty acre stores, and Metropolitan towers, and over-sea telegraphy.

You can no more tell the ultimate product of an inspiration than you can decide the color of a rooster's tail by glancing at the egg from which he will hatch.—Herbert Kaufman in Minneapolis tribune.

Home Talent Play

Tonight some of the young people of St. Hilaire will present the very laughable comedy-farce entitled "A Perplexing Situation." The play will be preceded by a monologue by Miss Cleo Amble. Mrs. Post will render several piano selections for this program. The program is under the direction of Mrs. C. A. Pitkin, elocutionist and reader, and a fine entertainment is assured.

Come and bring your friends.

For M. E. church benefit. Refreshments, consisting of hot coffee and cake, will be served immediately after the program, and this is included in the price of admission, which is 25 cents.

Uncle Epitumas will be at Imperial hall tonight. He has come down from way up the country to look around a while, and he wants to see you there, sure. Everybody to the hall tonight!

You Are Welcome

The Minnesota state fair is ready for you. Months of preparation has culminated in big results. The gigantic exposition awaits your verdict. Your duty to yourself, your community and your state demands that you be one of the jury that determines the 1911 fair's place in history. Don't shirk this duty.

If you have helped to make this fair you certainly will be on hand. If you have not helped come and see what other people have done and make suggestions for improvements. The fair belongs to the people of Minnesota. It belongs to you. You should be proud of its greatness and help to make it all it should be. There can be no reason why you should not come and learn and enjoy.

Come on Monday, the first and probably the greatest day. Stay as long as you can. You can't begin to see it all in one day. Each day has many special attractions. See as many of them as you can. If you want to give your family and friends a treat bring them with you. But whatever you do come to the fair, Sept. 4 to 9.

Many changes have been made not only in the management, but in the plan and scope of the Minnesota state fair. If the ideas of the management are successfully carried out in September, Minnesota's exposition will be not only first among the fairs of United States in attendance and gate receipts, but it will be first as an exhibition of live stock, soil products and manufactured articles. It will be a mirror of the state's resources and a short course in agriculture and stock raising, a place where every one can learn something and at the same time be royally entertained.

During the last few years there has been some adverse criticism concerning what has been claimed was a preponderance of vaudeville attractions and amusements at the fair. The present management, under the efficient direction of Secretary J. C. Simpson, and a board of directors made up of successful business men, has endeavored to develop the fair along educational lines. They have proceeded on the theory that the first object of a state fair is to furnish an opportunity for seeing and stuyding the best products of every line of industry.

They have not, however, ignored the amusement side. They realize that the majority of the people are most easily attracted to instruction by amusement and they believe that an essential, although not the most important, function is to entertain. A large number of the best amusement features on the market have been secured for this year's fair and entertainment will go hand in hand with education to make the best balanced and the greatest fair of history.

The changes that will be apparent at Hamline in September seem to have been demanded by the people. They have been made because they seemed for the institution's best interest and were necessary to its permanency. The verdict of the people will have been given when the gates are closed on Sept. 9. Don't fail to be on the jury and have a voice in deciding this all important subject.

School Next Monday

As announced in the last issue of the Spectator, school will open Monday, Sept. 4. Registration and the giving out of books will be taken care of on this date. The regular class work will begin on Tuesday, and all who expect to attend should attempt to enroll not later than then.

In the high school work, a complete course of two years will be given. The [illegible] algebra, English I, physiology, physical geography, civics, English history, plane geometry, ancient history, senior arithmetic; and senior grammar, civics, and physical geography will be taught during the last half of the year only. Students from adjoining districts are welcome and should enroll at the begining of the year. No tuition will be charged from anyone; text books are furnished to all, but students from other districts will be charged a small fee for the use of same.

History teaches us, that in the earliest days, mankind had no knowledge of a supreme Deity or God, and therefore set about to establish a form of worship that should have as its head, the highest possible greatness or good, that should be a supreme ruler over the destinies of mankind and that mankind, through his mode of living in this world and as he followed the teachings of his God, should find eternal rest. The theologic processes of elimination were at work and through his method did mankind arrive at the religion that has been followed (with minor changes from time to time) to the present day. That question being settled the people busied themselves as to what method of organization was best adapted to society. As the population of the world increased and spread to every corner of the earth, many forms of government (organization of society) sprang up. The great question of the people of the earth, from time immemorial, has been "what form of organization is best." Great wars have been fought, great nations of the earth have been torn asunder, hundreds of thousands, yea, millions upon millions of lives have been lost and yet the question "what form of organization is best," for society. The great economic question has been slowly but surely, nearing its final solution. The people of the world have been gaining ground and are not so prone to war about differences of opinion. They are becoming more "civilized" but are ever determined to work out the great question of economic conditions. The lecture of T. E. Lattimer, A. M. of university of Illinois on the economic problems of the day was very instructive and those who were fortunate enough to be present were well repaid for their efforts and attention.

The lecture and discussion was held at the Imperial Hall last Saturday evening, literature being distributed at the close of the meeting. Many were kept away owing to the cold, rainy weather, and counter attractions at the show tent.

Will be Worth Seeing

An interesting contest to be pulled off at the Red Lake county fair is the ball game between the Terrebonne and St. Hilaire teams. These teams have played two close, snappy, scrappy games this season. They were fine exhibitions of the national game and each team has won a game by a close score. The "rubber" contest to be played at the fair will be worth going miles to see. It will be a ball game for nine innings and maybe longer, with plenty of strenuous rooting. The second game of the series went to eleven innings and with the teams so evenly matched the contest is lible to run over time. The game will be played the second day of the fair.—Gazette.

The fair will be held Wednesday Thursday, and Friday, Sept. 19, 20, and 21.

FLAX STRAW

To Farmers and Whom it May Concern:

Having established at Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, a Flax Tow Mill, I hereby take pleasure in communicating this fact to the public. This mill will purchase all good, sound flax straw of 1911 crop only, offered and brought to the mill grounds by the farmers themselves, or shipped to the mill in bales from nearby stations located on the railroad; and immediate cash will be paid for it.

The longer the straw the more valuable for making tow, and I therefore respectfully request and advise the farming comunity to cut the straw as low down as possible, for it is the length of the fibre in the tow which makes it of a desirable quality.

I own four more flax tow mills in Dakota, and own mills or am financially interested in several others located in the states of Minnesota and Iowa.

Mr. Louis Kumpf my general foreman, and Mr. George Thompson, both of whom are at the present time at Red Lake Falls, will give you further information should you call on them personally or write to them, and I am sure you will find them both absolutely honest and fair gentlemen.

My great desire is to be fair myself with all mankind, and the farmers especially, and those who treat me fair in their dealings will always find me honest and square in dealing with them.

Trusting that our relations may be at alll times harmonious and the interest of both of us, I remain,

V. R. BLEHDON,
Owner of Mill.

Important Happenings of the Week Briefly Told.

3,000 SUBPOENAS SERVED.

Great Number of Witnesses Called in Indian Land Cases.

St. Paul. — More than one thousand chancery case each involving from one to five subpenas have already been started in Minnesota in the big blanket equity suit in which the United States is seeking to recover the title to land in Becker, Clearwater and Mahnomen counties which was given to white people by Indians. The big equity suit is brought by the United States against the numerous people in Minnesota who acquired some title to land on the White Earth Indian reservation through people who are alleged to be full-blooded Indians.

Already some 3,000 subpœnas in the big case have been served by the United States marshal and a large number are still to be sent out. It is said that none of the owners of the property reside in St. Paul and that no subpœnas in the cases have yet been served locally.

A referee to take evidence in the case has not yet been appointed by the court and it is not thought that cases will close up for hearing at the November term of United States circuit court at Fergus Falls.

MUNYON'S WORK TALK OF CITY

Big Success Shown by Numbers of Callers at Philadelphia Headquarters.

LOCAL MAN TELLS OF REMARKABLE RELIEF FROM RHEUMATISM IN YEAR'S TIME.

The apparent success with which Professor James M. Munyon, the world-famous health authority, has been meeting has started much discussion. Every street car brings dozens of callers to his Laboratories at 53d and Jefferson Streets, Philadelphia, Pa., and every mail brings thousands of letters from people inquiring about Munyon's Famous Health Cult. Professor Munyon's corps of expert physicians is kept busy seeing callers and answering the mail. Peculiar to say, these physicians prescribe no medicine at all for 50 per cent. of the callers and mail inquiries; health hints, health advice and rules for right living are given absolutely free. Medical advice and consultation absolutely free.

Munyon's followers seem to be enormous. Those who believe in his theories seem to think he possesses the most marvelous powers for the healing of all sorts of diseases. Munyon, himself, laughs at this. He says: "The hundreds of cures which you are hearing about every day in Philadelphia are not in any way due to my personal skill. It is my remedies, which represent the combined brains of the greatest medical specialists science has ever known, that are doing the work. I have paid thousands of dollars for a single formula and the exclusive right to manufacture it. I have paid tens of thousands of dollars for others of my various forms of treatment. This is why I get such remarkable results. I have simply bought the best products of the best brains in the world and placed this knowledge within the reach of the general public."

Among Munyon's callers yesterday were many who were enthusiastic in their praise of the man. One of these said: "For six years I suffered with rheumatism. My arms and legs were afflicted so badly that I could hardly work, and I could not raise my arms to my head. The pain was most severe in the back, however, and I was in perfect torture. I tried in many ways to get cured, or even to secure temporary relief, but nothing seemed to help me until I was persuaded by a friend to try Dr. Munyon's Uric Acid Course. It was the most marvelously acting remedy I ever saw, within a week the pain had most gone and inside of a month I considered myself entirely cured. I can now go out in the worst weather—cold, wet or anything else, and I have not felt any suspicion of a return of the disease. I think that every person who has rheumatism and does not take the Uric Acid Course is making a great mistake."

The continuous stream of callers and mail that comes to Professor James M. Munyon at his laboratories at 53d and Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia, Pa., keeps Dr. Munyon and his enormous corps of expert physicians busy.

Write today to Professor James M. Munyon personally, Munyon's Laboratories, 53d and Jefferson Sts., Philadelphia, Pa. Give full particulars in reference to your case. Your inquiry will be held strictly confidential and answered in a plain envelope. You will be given the best medical advice, and asked more questions. Remember there is no charge of any kind for consultation, or medical advice. The only charge Munyon makes is, when his physicians prescribe his remedies you pay the retail selling price. It is immaterial whether you buy from him or from the nearest druggist.

Cement Talk No. 3

Concrete is the hardened rock-like product made by using some brand of Portland cement with sand, gravel or broken stone and water. The cement is the material which binds the sand, gravel or broken stone together; this binding action is produced by water. The terms "Cement" and "Concrete" thus have different meanings, although they are frequently used interchangeably. While cement is only one of the materials in concrete, it is perhaps the most important. To insure the best results in concrete work, the highest grade of Portland cement should be used. The concrete worker may rest assured that he has the best cement if he will make certain that the word UNIVERSAL is printed on each sack of cement that he buys. Representative dealers everywhere handle UNIVERSAL.

Greek Mythology Tells of First Aero Experiments.

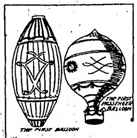
Flew With Legendary Wings of Wax to Escape Wrath of An Ancient King—Criminal Made the First Flight.

Washington, D. C.—The first aeronautical voyage history chronicles was that of the legendary Daedalus and his son. As mythology says, the father, Daedalus, had some kind of a tiff with Minos, his majesty the king of Crete. One sunny day when the kingly wrath had reached the boiling stage, Daedalus and his son, Icarus, decided a different climate would be good for them. So the wings were waxed on and they sailed away. But they rose so high that the heat from the sun melted the wax and Icarus dropped into the Icarian sea.

Archytas of Tarentum made a pigeon of wood that flew in the fourth century, B. C. Simon, the magician, in 66 A. D., endeavored to do a little air experimentation and broke his neck. In the reign of the Emperor Comnenus a Saracen met a similar fate in Constantinople, and flying was abandoned for a few centuries.

Joseph Montgolfier, a paper manufacturer of Annonay, France, discovered in 1782 that heat rarified air and made it occupy a much larger space than it did before being heated. He made a small parallelopiped of taffeta and filled it with heated air, it rose to the roof of his apartment and he was convinced. A larger balloon was made, and on June 5, 1783, the first public ascension was made. No one who rode in this Montgolfier, as it was called, but the flight lasted ten minutes. To commemorate it a yearly festival was established.

Hydrogen had been discovered by Cavendish six years before. It was found to have a specific gravity about one-sixteenth of that of air. Two months after Montgolfier's triumph Professor Charles of Paris sent up an inflated hydrogen balloon which, after traveling 15 miles, was torn to pieces by the superstitious peasantry. A month later another Montgolfier was sent up containing a sheep, a cock and a duck. Louis XVI., king of France, witnessed the flight, and he demanded that a human should make an ascension. He ordered that a criminal should be sent up. The famous Pilatre pleaded for the honor, and it was granted. On October 15, 1783, the first known ascent was made by Rozier in a hot air bag remaining up 4 minutes and 25 seconds.



Types of Early Balloons.

America caught the fever, and James Wilcox, a carpenter of Philadelphia, flew over the Schuylkill river in an aerostat made by the scientists, Rittenhouse and Hopkins. Two other flights, one of 27 miles in a Montgolfier from Paris, and a shorter one by Professor Charles in a hydrogen balloon, closed the first year of real flying known to the world.

In 1784 more than 50 ascents and voyages were made, the first trip in England being recorded in September of that year. A year later the English channel was crossed from Dover to Calais by Blanchard and Dr. Jeffries, an American. So it went. Flight after flight was made and the fad became more popular.

For almost a century the balloon scarcely altered in design, all of them were made with fantastic decorations and the willow basket was not used. However, many improvements were effected in the method of inflation, the construction of the valve, the ripping panel and the quality of the scientific instruments used. Before 1862 ballooning was looked upon much as an amusement, and in order to defray the balloonists' expenses the public had to pay to see their flights.

The sizes of the balloons increased, previous balloons of the early days had been 20,000 cubic feet capacity, but one was constructed in Paris of 215,000 cubic feet in 1853. In 1869 a captive balloon of 450,000 cubic feet was made. However, most modern balloons did not run more than 80,000 cubic feet. That is the largest balloon which is allowed to compete for the James Gordon Bennett cup race. In 1836 the record flight was 500 miles in 18 hours. In 1870 balloons made a thousand miles and last year Hawley and Post established a new world's record of about 1,200 miles, flying for the Bennett trophy from St. Louis.

Takes Pets Across Sea.

New York.—The first cabin passengers on the liner Pannonia, sailing from New York recently, included two dogs, a Persian cat, a monkey and two parrots. The little menagerie occupied a luxurious suite by itself. It is the property of Mrs. Clarke Fisher, whose husband is a wealthy steel man of Trenton, N. J. She occupied the adjoining cabin. Mrs. Fisher and her pets are on their way to Italy to spend five months at Lake Como.

Sparrow Club's Record.

Bellefontaine, Ohio.—James Hetzler has again won the sweepstakes prize of the Spring Creek Sparrow club. The annual meeting of the club has just been held. The report of Secretary George M. Sanders shows that during the year the members killed 659 sparrows, 1,159 rats, 32 moles, 181 crows, 30 owls, 32 [illegible], 26 weasels, 30 minks and 83 [illegible].

RENEWED INTEREST IN LIFE

Something Really Happened at Reception, and Old Attendant Is Encouraged.

The guests at Mrs. Arthur Mize's tea yesterday afternoon detected an odor of something burning. They looked at each other knowingly and said: "Poor Mrs. Mize, something is burning up in the kitchen." But the odor grew stronger, and at last one woman said: "It smells as though feathers are burning." Then suddenly one woman screamed: "Mrs. Challiss, look at your hat!" Sure enough, Mrs. Jim Challiss had been standing near a lighted candle, and the aigrette on her hat was on fire.

The guests had a great time putting out the fire. The aigrette was what the insurance men call a total loss. An Atchison woman who has gone to thousands of receptions says the burning of the aigrette yesterday is the first time she ever knew anything to really happen at a reception. She has given up going because nothing ever happened, but now will start in over again.—Atchison Globe.

CHILD'S HEAD A MASS OF HUMOR

"I think the Cuticura remedies are the best remedies for eczema I have ever heard of. My mother had a child who had a rash on its head when it was real young. Doctor called it baby rash. He gave us medicine, but it did no good. In a few days the head was a solid mass, a running sore. It was awful; the child cried continually. We had to hold him and watch him to keep him from scratching the sore. His suffering was dreadful. At last we remembered Cuticura Remedies. We got a dollar bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, a box of Cuticura Ointment, and a bar of Cuticura Soap. We gave the Resolvent as directed, washed the head with the Cuticura Soap, and applied the Cuticura Ointment. We had not used half before the child's head was clear and free from eczema, and it has never come back again. His head was healthy and he had a beautiful head of hair. I think the Cuticura Ointment very good for the hair. It makes the hair grow and prevents falling hair." (Signed) Mrs. Francis Lund, Plain City, Utah, Sept. 19, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 12 L, Boston.

A WONDERFUL CHANGE.

Mrs. R. Crouse, Manchester, Iowa, says: "For two years my back was weak. Rheumatic pains racked my lower limbs day and night. The passages of the kidney secretions were annoyingly irregular. When I started using Doan's Kidney Pills, these troubles soon lessened and the dull backache vanished. My kidneys now act normally and I give Doan's Kidney Pills credit for this wonderful change."

Emerson's Story of Gratitude.

There is a beautiful little story in Emerson's recently published "Journals," of which his son, the editor, Dr. Edward W. Emerson, said the poet was very fond.

A certain widow was so poor that she eked out the one thin bed covering by laying an old door over herself and her little children.

"Mamma," one of the children said one bitter night, "what do those poor little children do who haven't got a door to cover them?"—Youth's Companion.

To Cheer Her Up.

An old Scotswoman, who had put herself to considerable inconvenience, and gone a long way to see a sick friend, learned on arriving that the alarming symptoms had subsided.

"An' hoo are ye the day, Mrs. Crawford?" she inquired in breathless anxiety.

"Oh, I'm quite weel noo, thank ye, Mrs. McGregor," was the cheerful answer.

"Quite weel!" exclaimed the visitor, "an' after me haein' come sae far to see ye!"

The Brute.

"Men are such rude things," said the supercilious girl.

"Has any of them dared to address you without an introduction?"

"No; but in a crowd one got his face all mixed up with my hatpin and never even said 'excuse me.'"

THOUGHT MADE HIM HURRY

Recent Subject of Surgical Operation Victim of a Sudden and Horrible Thought.

"The late Dr. George W. Bailey of New York," said a Presbyterian divine, "was thoroughly modern in his methods, but he did think that some of our surgeons went too far.

"Dr. Bailey, apropos of certain reckless abusers of the knife, used to tell a story of an appendicitis club.

"At a meeting of this club a pallid member said:

"'Well, friends, I had to be reopened last week. My doctor had left a sponge inside me.'

"'I was reopened, too,' said a gaunt man. 'I was reopened just ten days ago. Prof. Cutler had forgotten to remove a pair of forceps.'

"At this a nervous-looking chap groaned, jumped up, and made for the door.

"'What's the matter?' they asked him. 'Where are you off to in such a rush?'

"'I'm off to my doctor's,' the man replied. 'I remember now that, just after I came to, he complained about mislaying his hat and stick.'"

Dangerous Bacilli in Dust.

A statement issued recently by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis speaks of the dangers from house dust, especially in rooms that are not well ventilated. The association warns against dry sweeping, and against the use of the feather duster, or other devices that scatter, but do not take up the dust. Since the ordinary dust blown about in the streets is impregnated with disease germs, the National Association urges the adoption of methods that will prevent the further dissemination of such bacilli. It also urges for the coming months of fall and winter, more open windows and more fresh air in house, shop, and schoolroom.

"Keep it still, so that I can look at it."

Undaunted by unfavorable atmospheric conditions, Representative Ben Johnson of Kentucky made his first flight in an aeroplane and gained the distinction of being the first person outside of army circles to be taken up as a passenger in any of the machines flown at the army aviation school at College Park, Md. The Kentucky statesman made the trip with Lieut. Harry H. Arnold, and remained in the air twenty minutes and attained a height of 600 feet.

Speaking in behalf of the negro industrial school at Hampton, Va., of which he is trustee, President Taft voiced his indignation at the necessity that such useful institutions must beg for money and at the failure of the nation's many millionaires to come to their rescue with contributions. In the graduation of Booker Washington, the president said, Hampton has done enough to entitle it to the gratitude of the country.

Minot. — Three-fourths of the population of Minot and several thousand land seekers gathered at the Auditorium to witness the drawing of the affidavits of those who had registered for a claim in the Berthold land opening. Part of the crowd stood shivering in the rain on the outside, as the capacity of the building was inadequate to accommodate the spectators.

The crowd soon filled the Auditorium and several thousand assembled on the outside where all could listen to the reading of the names of the winners.

Envelopes Are Mixed Up.

Promptly at 9 o'clock Judge Witten mounted the platform and announced the prelude. At this juncture four men began mixing the envelopes, scooping them over with large wooden shovels, and continued the work for an hour until even the most skeptical was convinced that the affidavits were thoroughly mixed. No one doubts that in the lottery in which all are in a measure participants the management is being conducted on lines of equal and exact justice. These envelopes without distinguishing mark so that no one could go in and select any particular one and identify it from the mass were stirred and mixed until what was before uncertain is now impossible in the way of identification. All this was merely the stage setting for the drama that is to follow when the curtain is raised.

At 10 o'clock according to the terms of the president's proclamation throwing open to settlement the Berthold reservation, James W. Witten blindfolded Albert Hanna and everything moved forward with the automatic action of clock work. Impassively and without any concern, the fact that his was the hand that opened the golden portals to some one in the multitude but unknown, he approached the great heap of envelopes lying upon a platform covering 40 feet of space.

Foxholm Man Is No. 1.

He picked one out and handed it to the judge, who was in the crowd waiting. He opened the envelope and announced the name of B. E. Glick, Foxholm, N. D., who had drawn the capital prize in Uncle Sam's lottery. Conservatives estimated the prize worth $25,000, and the announcement of the name broke the spell that had held the crowd in breathless silence.

At this juncture Judge Witten, in a few well chosen remarks, introduced Congressman L. B. Hanna, who made possible the scene by introducing the bill opposing the reservation, was given the center of the stage so elaborately set and graced the occasion with a speech brimful of hope for those who have hope. The absolute spotless integrity of Judge Witten, who is representing the government, was mentioned by Mr. Hanna and the multitude applauded as one man. Perhaps no trait of character of the American citizen is so distinguishing as the desire to acquire title to lands.

MINNEAP'LIS WINS FLIGHT

STARTING POINT OF ATTEMPT TO BREAK WORLD'S RECORD.

Aviator to Get Away on Voyage of 1,917 Miles to New Orleans, for $15,000.

Minneapolis.—Minneapolis will be the starting point of an aeroplane flight in which the aviator will strive to set a new world's distance record. This was determined when the public affairs committee of the Commercial club accepted the invitation of Spearman Lewis, special representative of the St. Louis Aero club that this city join with New Orleans and other cities of the Mississippi valley to promote a flight from this city to the Delta metropolis. This air voyage of 1,917 miles, if successful along the lines planned, would eclipse the wonderful air record of 1,255 miles recently established by Harry N. Atwood in his flight from St. Louis to New York.

The expenses of the project, including the city's contribution to the $15,000 prize fund which will be awarded to the aviator if he completes the flight, will be guaranteed by the Commercial club and the Publicity Club. The date tentatively chosen for the start of the aerial journey down the Mississippi valley is Wednesday, Sept. 20.

The day of the start will be made a holiday in Minneapolis. It is expected that thousands of persons will come from Minnesota and surrounding states to view the getaway, which will be from the Parade. The aviator will circle the downtown business section for the benefit of the multitude and will soar to a high altitude before turning southward, in order that all of Minneapolis may view the beginning of what it is hoped by the boosters will be an epoch-making aeroplane flight.

Big Ad for Minneapolis.

In accepting the invitation the Commercial club was influenced by the opportunity offered to test the value of "date line" advertising. It was reasoned because of the world-wide publicity given the voyage of Atwood that the name of Minneapolis would burst forth on the first pages of newspapers all over the globe if the flight were arranged.

H. A. Tuttle, president of the Commercial club, will head the organization that will have charge of the flight. Vice presidents will be chosen in cities along the Mississippi that have been chosen as stop-stations for the aviator. New Orleans and St. Louis also will have vice-presidents.

The aviator who will be relied upon to make the flight has not been chosen but Mr. Lewis promised that he would be a flyer of national fame.

DISPUTED BOUNDARY IS VISITED

Minnesota-Wisconsin Commissioners Discus St. Louis River Case.

Duluth. — The joint boundary commissioners of Minnesota and Wisconsin made an exhaustive examination of the St. Louis river from the gate at Rice's and Connor's points to near Fond du Lac. It is believed that the meeting of the joint commission will bring results, although the commissioners thus far are not agreed on some essential features.

The commissioners were tendered the use of the United States steamship Vidette to go over the disputed territory and they were accompanied by prominent citizens of both Wisconsin and Minnesota. The commissioners are working in harmony and the only thing to determine is whether the old government channel is the boundary or the new government channel, which in places has been shifted from the original course by dredging for harbor and channel improvement.

The presumption is that the new channel will be recognized, as the boundary, as originally established, was supposed to follow the channel wherever it might lead and the making of the improvements was of joint interest and importance of both states.

BROUGHT BACK FOR ROBBERY.

Express Driver Accused of Taking $1,000 Returned to Albert Lea.

Albert Lea.—Sheriff Subby has returned from New York with William Jackson, who, it is claimed, decamped with $1,000 of the Wells-Fargo Express Company's money when he was driver here about two years ago. Jackson had enlisted in the navy and was held at the Brooklyn navy yard. He gave the name of Burke when he enlisted.

He is 30 years of age and had been here but a month. His brother was and still is agent for the express company. Jackson says he spent the $1,000 he took from the express company in about a month and traveled extensively. He is in the county jail and may be sentenced before the next term of court, which convenes the last of September.

THREE BANKERS ARE ARRESTED.

Stephen, Henry and Herman Schwartz Taken in Custody.

Little Falls. — Stephen, Henry J. and Herman J. Schwartz, brothers, were arrested in connection with the State Bank of Royalton, which was recently closed. They gave bonds of $10,000. O. H. Havill, a former banker of St. Cloud, who is also involved in the bank's closing, telephoned the sheriff that he would go to Little Falls and surrender himself.

MANY BIRDS NEAR CROOKSTON.

Near Approach of Opening of Prairie Hen Shooting Season.

Crookston.—The Red river valley has a diversity of bumper crops this year, and the prairie chicken is one of them. This section will be a hunter's paradise this fall and no calamity to prevent the harvest is possible, barring wet powder.

While chickens were abundant a year ago, conditions for hunting were bad. The grain was short and was harvested so close to the ground that no good hunting was possible in threshed grain fields, as there was no cover for the birds, which were in plain view far beyond gun range. Thus a covey had to be raised once or twice and driven to the grass before the hunter had any chance of getting a shot.

This year conditions are the reverse. The stubble has been left long and the birds are more numerous than a year ago, as less than half of the average covey was cleaned up last year. Many coveys escaped practically unharmed, getting so wild before the season was well advanced that they could not be reached, because of the poor cover.

As usual bird dogs are at a premium, and fancy prices are being offered for the canines. Every rig in the city has been hired for September 7 and the liverymen have boosted prices for that day to $7 for a team, and some of them are getting even more.

While individual hunters have their favorite grounds, there is little real preference this year, as hunters who have had their dogs out have raised plenty of birds in every direction from the city. Most of the birds are of good size, but occasionally coveys are located which will be very small on the opening day.

MURDER THEORY HELD.

Polk County Coroner Says Man Was Hanged to Tree to Hide Crime.

Crookston.—While picking wild plums on the John Barehus farm, six miles west of Crookston, Mrs. Hardrath and Mrs. Wentzel found the body of a man hanging to a tree a few rods from the road.

After an investigation Coroner Stenshoel concluded the man had been killed and the body hanged to the tree to cover the crime and indicate suicide. An envelope was found in the pocket addressed to A. Osmundson, East Grand Forks, R. F. No. 1, mailed at International Falls, May 27, and an original and duplicate order from the Twin City labor agency, O. Syoneberg, proprietor, 13 First street north Minneapolis, with the name George Gustafson, issued July 19, for extra gang, Soo railroad, Hay River, Minn.

The man was about 34 years old, had brown hair and was medium-sized. Twenty dollars was found in his vest pocket. A strap formed a slip noose about the neck and was tied to a limb, the feet touching the ground.

BEMIDJI TO HUNT LOST WATER.

15,000,000 Gallons Unaccounted for and Committee Will Seek Leak.

Bemidji.—Lost, strayed or stolen, 15,000,000 gallons of water.

According to figures presented to the City Council, this small ocean has mysterously disappeared from the Bemidji waterworks system, and it was decided that a committee composed of the city engineer, city water clerk and the chairman of the water committee attempt to find it.

City Clerk George Stein has figures showing that meters at the pumping station registered for April 8,505,000 gallons; May, 9,855,700; June, 10,937,800, a total for these three months of 29,299,300 gallons.

It is known that the meter measures at the station overran the actual amount pumped about one-sixth, and allowing 5,000,000 for this discrepancy, then adding the amount registered in consumers' meters, there still remains 14,000,000 gallons to be accounted for.

It was the general opinion that there is a serious leak possibly through a broken water main.

MINNESOTA PIONEER DEAD.

Sylvester Statelar, Aged 94, Who Came to State in 1842.

Faribault.—Sylvester Statelar, aged 94 years, died at his farm home.

Mr. Statelar was one of the pioneers of Minnesota. He was born in Ohio, March 14, 1817. In 1842 he went to Stillwater and remained there until 1846, later removing to Lake Superior. In 1847 he was appointed government blacksmith for the Chippewa Indians, holding this position until 1862, when he came to Rice county and purchased a farm which has since been his home.

He was identified with the Territorial Association of 1849, organized in 1857. Up to the time of his death he had a vivid recollection of the early days with their privations. He is survived by one son and two daughters.

Duluth.—Charles Gonyea, an unemployed sailor, was beaten by Mitchell Phelps, in charge of a lighter. Phelps used a tack hammer with telling effect on Gonyea's head, but it is learned that the skull was not broken. Phelps ordered Gonyea off the lighter and he declined to go.

New Ulm.—Dan W. Lawler of St. Paul, arrived here yesterday in response to an invitation by a committee in charge of the Catholic harvest festival held in the Catholic park. His address, "The Romance of Early Minnesota," gave due credit to Radisson and Groseilliers, the French explorers and traders who preceded Father Hennepin to Minnesota, by about twenty-five years. He said this fact was recently established by original manucripts found in the library of the British museum in London and the Bodleau library in Oxford.

Hibbing. — An outrage of the first degree was perpetrated on George Woods and family of Alice, Minnesota, a small station near here. Mr. Woods is a prosperous farmer and his dwelling, valued at $5,000, with contents valued at $3,000, and a commodious barn, were burned by an incendiary, presumably for revenge for some real or imagined injury. The barn was first found to be on fire and Mr. Woods rushed out to get the stock out. He found the door was blocked by a dead horse, whose throat had been cut. To his dismay he then found that his dwelling was blazing. Somebody fired two shots into the house about the time it was discovered to be on fire. The police are looking for two men who live in the neighborhood. Woods recently caused some cows to be empounded.

Hutchinson.—The thirty-ninth annual fair of the McLeod County Agricultural society was held last week This year's fair eclipsed all previous records in all departments. The society had iicreased the premiums offered to a total of more than $2,000 and has made extensive improvements in the buildings and added other improvements of a substantial character, including a new Fine Arts building, and new live stock buildings. The speed program included six harness races with a total of fifty-three entries, the purses raging from $300 to $500.

Shoots His Rival in Love.

Duluth. — Frank Lunierich and Peter Wenarich, of Coleraine, have counted the same girl and the jealousy which each has felt for the other culminated in a shooting. Luneirich is in a hospital with one bullet wound in his neck and another in his back and Wenarich is in jail. The shooting occurred on the main street of Coleraine. The men met and engaged in a wordy controversy. Luneirich started to run, when Wenarich brought him down with two shots from a revolver.

Aero Flight from Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minnesota.—Minneapolis will be the starting point of a 1,917 mile aeroplane flight, by the proposition offered by H. Spearman Lewis of the St. Louis Aero Club, who was in Minneapolis, is accepted by some commercial organization of this city. The flight was practically assured Minneapolis when H. A. Tuttle, president of the Commercial Club, was elected president of the association and the public affairs committee of the club agreed to guarantee a con-

Young Western Girl Draws Up an Indictment of Chicago and Its People.

Chicago.—The restraints and conventionalities of the city and the freedom and naturalness of the country are as antipodean as the east and west of Kipling. Take the average healthy-minded person from the atmesphere of the mountains, the plains, the forests and lakes and place him in the rush and strife of a great city, with the noises of tumultous life in his ears and knowing that while there is much of virtue and goodness among the rushing thousands that go by there is also much of selfishness and duplicity and deception and hate and envy and maliciousness, and he will wish to be back again where man is more natural and living more of a joy.

SILVER DOLLAR TABOR

That is the experience that Silver Dollar Tabor recently had in Chicago. She grew up in the unconventional west and from childhood was accustomed to wearing men's clothes and handling a pistol. Much of her time was spent about the mining camps and she was known as "the queen of the miners.

When she visited Chicago she had had no personal knowledge of a big city and she now wishes to forget the knowledge she acquired. She found Chicago big and ugly. Its air compared with her own mountain air was impure. She hated the constant dodging of automobiles and street cars and believes she would be safer shooting grizzly bears than walking the streets. But she found other things disagreeable. She found, she says, that money is the god of Chicago and that manhood and womanhood and character are not appreciated at their true worth. There is too much artificiality in the men and women of the big city, and she is severe in her condemnation of the way women devote themselves to amusements. She says work in the west is fun—in Chicago it is purgatory; and it was with a light heart she returned to the west where people are natural and may be polite and courteous and complimentary without being hypocrites.

BULLET IN THE TREE'S CORE

Piece of Wood Bearing Missile From the Leaden-Swept Field of Gettysburg.

Gettysburg, Pa.—This piece of wood with a bullet imbedded in it is a piece of a tree that stood on the battlefield of Gettysburg in what was called the "slaughter pen." It is a faint reminder of the musketry fire which at times swept the region between Cemetery Ridge and Seminary Ridge; for many trees, bitten and gouged by bullets—the greater destruction caused by the artillery is not here referred to—show their scars to this day.

From Gettysburg's Battlefield.

Of course, with the passage of the years the effects of small-arms wounds on trees, if not too serious, were quickly healed and covered by kindly nature with new growth.

Take Care of the Farmer

Nation and state must ever keep in view the welfare of our basic industry —agriculture.

It is peculiarly important to do so at this time when the new competition from Canada threatens our farmers under what will be practically free trade in farm products from Canada.

England has decayed because she has not only neglected her agriculture, but has actually discriminated against it. Old age pensions, government labor bureaus, even a reformed house of lords, are but so much salve to England's shoes, that will become increasingly serious until she reforms her land laws, gives her agriculture a fair chance, and provides education that will fit her youth for life's work.

Germany has rapidly become the greatest power in Europe through intelligently directed organization, natural methods of education that train each generation for efficiency, and by having always insured agricultural prosperity. There are no deserted farms in Germany, no slums in her cities, no factories idle, few places placarded "For Sale or to Let"

Our United States is a glorious country, but how much we have yet to learn. And how our American northwest will develop and prosper if nation and states will cooperate along right lines to advance rather than retard progress.

Good Plowing

The are few occupations where good work shows as much as on the farm. Plowing is the first operation in the production of all common farm crops; and if not well done it is hardly logical to expect good results, even though the other operations are well performed. Good plowing means completely loosening, stirring and pulverizing the soil to the desired depth. Simply making the ground black by plowing a shallow furrow, and turning it over on a narrow strip that is unplowed, can hardly be called good plowing. The proper depth of plowing will depend greatly on the character of the soil, but it is a safe proposition to state that, as a rule, it would pay to plow Minnesota soils deeper than they are now plowed. In many heavier soils there is little opportunity for root growth, or the liberation of plant growth beneath the furrow slice, owing to the density of the soil. Deeper plowing would certainly increase the depth of the available soil, make the soil capable of holding more moisture, aerate it more completely, cause the liberation of more plant food, and certainly greatly increase the productive power of the farm, without the necessity of buying additional tracts. It is always pleasing to see straight, uniform, well turned furrows, with all vegetation turned completely over. It is pleasing not only to passers by, but to the man doing the work.—A. D. Wilson, Extension Division, Minn. Coll. of Agriculture.

HER TWO PARTNERS.

By SPENCER TROWBRIDGE.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

Several married women were discussing over their afternoon tea the matter of choosing a husband. Mrs. Brown advocated giving way to love, no matter how unpromising a match might be otherwise. Mrs. Tinker considered common sense the most desirable trait to look for in a life partner. Mrs. Evans declared that, after all that had been said against marriages for money, without it there could be no comfort and without comfort love is short lived. Mrs. Twitchell declared that no man could ever have won her who was not a fascinating conversationalist.

"Your remark, Mrs. Twitchell," said Mrs. Anderson, "reminds me of a story—a story in which I was the principal actor. When I was eighteen I went to visit a schoolmate whose father was very intimate with the superintendent of an insane asylum. During my visit a dance was given for the patients, and we were all invited. None of us relished going, but my host was much interested in the sufferers and insisted on our doing our part.

"My first partner was so queer looking and had such a restless, anxious look in his eye that I was afraid of him. Every now and again he would pause or stop short in the dance to look at some other mental wreck, and once I was dreadfully frightened for fear he was going to attack a demure little woman who of all those present looked the most tractable. My partner said very little to me, and when I addressed a remark to him he barely answered me. He seemed preoccupied. I fancied that he considered every one present his natural enemy and if I escaped being strangled by him before the dance was finished I would be fortunate. I was much relieved when the music stopped.

"My second partner was very different. He was about thirty-five years old and handsome as a picture. I shall never forget the quiet, well poised look in his eyes. The matron introduced him to me and as she did so whispered something to me which I understood to be that he was an invited guest. But if she had not so informed me I should have been sure that he was of perfectly sound mind. He made several remarks to me in the intermissions of the dance that caught my attention at once, and I longed to listen to his conversation. Such a man at such an age is just the person to impress a young girl who is naturally flattered by any notice he deigns to bestow upon her. As soon as the dance was finished I put my arm through his that I should not lose him.

"He talked delightfully. He was a graduate of an American, a German and an English university. He had traveled everywhere and had the faculty of imparting not only information on abstruse topics, but of making one seem to visit the places he had visited. His favorite topic was biology. I remember his telling me that scientists were getting every day nearer to a knowledge of the source of life, and he surprised me by telling me that the day would come when they would by chemical substances and forces produce protoplasm, the fundamental living substance.

"While we were chatting my first partner passed us and gave my companion a look which I flattered myself was due to jealousy. I had no mind to be interrupted in my tete-a-tete and showed by apparent rapt attention that I was absorbed in what was being said to me.

"My partner after this, continuing his remarks on the source of life, grew animated. He made me feel that he was a superior being sent down from heaven to demonstrate that our mortal part is nothing more than a chemical combination to hold the soul during its preparation for another existence. My enthusiasm waxed with his. But, though I was rapt in what he said, there was a dual current of thought in my mind, a feeling of how happy I could be with, how proud of, such a husband.

"Again my first partner came near us, and again I noticed that he was wrought upon by jealousy. True, he was a lunatic, but I was at an age to be pleased even at the jealousy of an unbalanced mind. His insanity need not necessarily interfere with his taste. At that moment my companion gave my arm a clutch that caused me to shriek with pain, shouting, 'I will force your soul from your body and put it back again!' And from the look in his eye I knew that were he free to do so he would murder me.

"I heard a sharp whistle. In a moment my first partner was holding my second, and in a few seconds more he was joined and assisted by several keepers. The man I admired was hustled off like a felon, and the man I did not admire superintended his removal.

"Well, to end the story, it turned out that my first partner was a brilliant young doctor who as medical director of the asylum was studying mental diseases. My second was a lunatic of no special education who had picked up a smattering of various sciences. Such was the judgment of a girl of marriageable age between two men as to which she would marry. I have two daughters, and I am determined that neither of them shall marry without my approval."

"Your husband, I believe," said one of the auditors, "is the eminent brain specialist. Was he your first partner?"

"Yes, and my partner for life."

"At your mother's suggestion?"

"No," replied the story teller. "I acted on my own judgment."

He Followed Directions.

Red tape leads one to curious lengths. A writer in the Columbus Dispatch tells of a street railway car that picked up a young heifer on its fender and carried it some distance through the street.

In making out the required report to the superintendent the employee wrote in answer to the query on the blank form, "What did the victim say?" "She was carried along on the fender and then rolled off and ran away without saying a word."

In answer to a question of Dr. Swanson, clerk of the village of St. Hilaire, County Attorney Stanton writes: "There can be no question as to the legality of your organization, and even if not organized, the fact that you have been exercising corporate powers and functions for more than thirty years would give a you a municipal organization by prescription. It is beyond the power of any person to question the validity of your organization, and if questioned at all, it cannot be done at the suit of a private individual but only by the attorney general of of the state."

LOVE BEYOND THE STARS.

WHEN that I loved a maiden
My heaven was in her eyes,
And when they bent above me
I knew no deeper skies;
But when her heart forsook me
My spirit broke its bars
For grief beyond the sunset
And love beyond the stars.

WHEN that I loved a maiden
She seemed the world to me;
Now is my soul the universe,
My dream—the sky and sea!
There bends no heaven above me,
No glory binds or bars
My grief beyond the sunset,
My love beyond the stars.

WHEN that I loved a maiden
I worshiped where she trod;
But when she clove my heart the cleft
Set free the imprisoned god.
Then was I king of the world;
My soul had burst its bars,
For grief beyond the sunset
And love beyond the stars.

SONG OF THE PLAINS.

NO harp have I for the singing, nor fingers fashioned for skill,
Nor ever shall words express it, the song that is in my heart,
A saga, swept from the distance, horizons beyond the hill,
Singing of life and endurance and bidding me bear my part.

For this is song, as I sing it, the song that I love the best,
The steady tramp in the furrow, the grind of the gleaming steel,
An anthem sung to the noonday, a chant of the open west,
Echoing deep in my spirit, to gladden and help and heal.

And this is life, as I read it, and life in its fairest form,
To breathe the wind on the ranges, the scent of the upturned sod,
To strive and strive and be thankful, to weather the shine and storm,
Penciling over the prairies the destiny planned by God.

And no reward do I ask for, save only to work and wait,
To praise the God of my fathers, to labor beneath His sky,
To dwell alone in his greatness, to strike and to follow straight,
Silent and strong and contented—the limitless plains and I.

WHY BE WEAK?

Why suffer backache, headache, dizziness, weariness, urinary irregularities and other troubles that arise from disordered kidneys? Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands. John O. Sedain, Modesto, Cal., says: "I was so weak I staggered like a drunken man. I ran down in weight from 176 to 137 pounds. I had practically no control over the kidney secretions and the pain in my back was terrible. I became a nervous wreck and was given up by our best physicians. Like a drowning man grasping at a straw I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and steadily improved. In a few months' time I was back at my old weight. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I give them the entire credit."

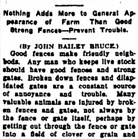
BENEFITS OF GOOD FENCES

Nothing Adds More to General Appearance of Farm Than Good Strong Fences—Prevent Trouble.

(By JOHN BAILEY BRUCE.)

Good fences make friendly neighbors. Any man who keeps live stock should have good fences and strong gates. Broken down fences and dilapidated gates are a constant source of annoyance and trouble. Many valuable animals are injured by broken fences and gates, not always by the fence or gate itself, perhaps by getting out through the fence or gate into a field of clover or grain and eating sufficient to cause bloat or by getting into an apple orchard and choking or by strolling onto the railroad track and being hit by the cars.



An Easily Opened Gate.

Perhaps the whole herd breaks through the neighbor's fields and destroys his crops. Such things are mighty unpleasant and cause bad feelings among the best of neighbors.

Good fences and strong gates are cheaper than good stock and damage suits. Good gates and fences add to the permanent value of the farm. If a man has not sufficient pride in his farm to keep up his fences and gates the matter of economy should compel him to give these matters attention.

It is poor economy to allow a purebred cow to break through a $2 gate and get with calf to some neighbor's scrub bull. The poor gate is the weakest link in the fence. There is nothing that adds more to the general appearance of the farm than good, strong fences. Such appearances amount to hundreds of dollars if we are selling our farms.

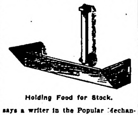
The gate shown in the illustration will be found to be of great convenience. A pin is set in the gate post and a pole at least as long as the gate is made to turn on it.

A box full of stones heavy enough to balance the gate is placed on one end of this pole, and to the other end is fastened a piece of strap iron that connects with the center of the gate. The hinges on this gate are pieces of round iron so set that a ring on the gate will slide up and down on them. This allows the gate to be raised or lowered.

HOLDING FODDER FOR STOCK

Device for Placing Cornstalks and Other Feeds That Would Be Thrown Out, Just Invented.

Fodder, such as cornstalks that are not shredded, is frequently tossed out of the manger and wasted. A device for holding this kind of feed against the wall in front of the manger is shown in the illustration, says a writer in the Popular Mechanics. It is made of 2 by 4 inch material, about 3 feet long, hinged at the lower end and clamped at the top. The stalks are placed behind the upright piece and securely clamped. Several of these devices placed at intervals along the manger will make it hard for the stock to pull the fodder out and waste it.



Holding Food for Stock.

Dairy Products.

The cow will produce about seven times as much human food per unit of feed consumed as will the steer. In fact, the cornstalks, leaves and cobs produced on one acre of corn, if fed to a steer, will provide material for about 50 per cent. edible dry matter in the form of flesh, while if fed to a dairy cow about 330 per cent. edible dry matter will be produced. National economy, then, would demand that our hill pastures and lowland meadows as well as the coarse fodders of cultivated fields be employed in the production of milk.

Souring Cream.

The development of lactic acid, or the souring of cream, does not increase the butter fat content. As a rule, when cream becomes sour it is more difficult to test than when it is sweet. The difficulty in obtaining an accurate test of sour milk or cream lies in the fact that it is not easy to obtain an accurate sample.

The Working Ration.

The working ration does not mean crowding the cow beyond her normal capacity, making her short lived and the cost of production extremely high, but rather a ration that will maintain her in good physical condition, produce a strong, well developed calf, and give us an economical milk yield.

Cheese Making Room.

A concrete floor is the only kind that will insure perfect drainage for the cheese-making room. It will also help to keep the curing room cool in hot weather and warm in cold weather.

REST FOR COW IS ESSENTIAL

Animal, Like Other Machines, Must Be Given Sufficient Time for Making Needed Repairs.

(By WALTER B. LEUTZ.)

Too many farmers milk their cows from "calf to calf." In some states the law forbids the selling of milk of cows within two weeks of calving or five days after. This rest is none too long and in fact young heifers would do better if they were given a longer rest before calving.

We once heard a farmer at county institute defend his practice of milking his cow up to the last moment on the ground that he worked every day and wanted his cows to do the same.

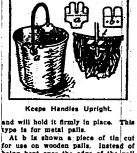
A woman asked him if he did not rest on Sundays and he rather shamefacedly replied that he worked every day in the week, particularly during the summer months. Not much use arguing with a man like that, but experience shows that it is much better for the health and usefulness of the cow, especially heifers, to give her at least a month's rest during the year.

A cow is a milk machine, it is true, and we want to get all we can out of her, but like machines made of steel and wood she must be given time for repairs or she will wear out all to quickly.

TO KEEP HANDLES UPRIGHT

Pail Arranged in This Manner Will Often Be Found of Great Convenience Around Dairy.

It often happens that one finds it convenient to have a pail on which the handle will remain upright at all times, says the Farm and Home. An ordinary pail can be fixed to produce the desired result. A piece of tin, a, is cut as shown, and attached to the side of the pail at the place where the handle comes by bending the slot over so that it engages the handle and will hold it firmly in place. This type is for metal pails.



Keeps Handles Upright.

At b is shown a piece of tin cut for use on wooden pails. Instead of being bent over the edge of the pail the piece is screwed to the wood.

CARE PREVIOUS TO CALVING

Cow Should Be Placed in Comfortable Stall, Well Littered, in Which There Is No Manger.

For ten days preceding the time for calving, the cow should be kept in a comfortable, well-littered box-stall or pen, in which there is no manger. The feed should be given in a box or basket, which should be removed after the feed is taken. The coarse feed may be put in the corner, and no more should be given than she will eat. This rule should, however, be observed, not only before calving, but at all times. Throwing large quantities of roughage before a cow leads her into the bad habit of eating only the most appetizing parts, and so wasting much feed. It is a good practice to take a lantern and go the rounds of the barn, before retiring for the night, to see that everything is as it should be.

Milk Fever.

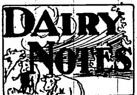
Milk fever can be prevented very easily by milking the cow regularly before she drops her calf. If she is usually a heavy milker, she should be as regularly milked for a few weeks before calving as she is after. Begin the milking at least two weeks before the time for the arrival of the calf. During the first week once each day is sufficient, but the last week she should be milked both night and morning.

Air-Tight Milk Can.

A new type of milk can has been invented which is air-tight, and is easily cleaned. Filled at the dairy and sealed with the owner's label, the can is so constructed that it delivers automatically and accurately any quantity that is desired, and runs out clean to the last drop.

Liberal Feeding Pays.

A poor cow may be made to pay her way at least by liberal feeding. It is equally true that a good cow may be made to lose by stingy treatment.



Scalding water is an essential in the dairy.

When butter prices are low there is absolutely no excuse for keeping poor cows.

An accessible supply of pure, cold water should always be available for the herd.

Tainted, musty or mouldy feeds should never be served in the dairy herd rations.

One of the best indications of a good milk cow is the large and tortuous milk veins.

Care should be taken that the cow does not have to wade through filth in the barnyard.

Pouring or dipping the milk several times from one can to another rapidly cools it.

To do good work the cream separator must be level and on a good solid foundation.

The separator means the greatest profit with the least cost in handling and marketing milk.

THING THAT PUZZLED BILLY

Was Sure Elevator Moved, but Progress Was Not Apparent to His Eyes.

Billy was a quaint old darkey who had come to the city for the first time. One day his employer sent him with a note to a man whose office was on an upper floor of a skyscraper, where every floor of the building was arranged and finished like the first one. Billy was directed by the elevator boy to enter the "lift," and he would then show him to the office he wanted. It was Billy's first experience in an elevator, and he did not rightly understand the nature or purpose of it. On his return he described some of his experiences to his employer.

"When I got ter de buildin' I axes er yaller boy wut wuz er standin' in de inside ob de front doah whar Mr. Brown's office wuz, an' he tol' me ter come wid him, an' he would show me. He tuk me inter er big cage an' shet de doah, an' den we begun ter move. An', Marse John, I'se tellin' you de gospel trufe, we got out right whar we started an' God knows we riz."—Lippincott's.

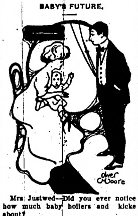
HANDS WOULD CRACK OPEN

"About two months ago my hands started to crack open and bleed, the skin would scale off, and the good flesh would burn and itch dreadfully. When my hands first started to get sore, there were small blisters like water blisters which formed. They itched dreadfully, it just seemed as though I could tear the skin all off. I would scratch them and the skin would peel off, and the flesh would be all red and crack open and bleed. It worried me very much, as I had never had anything the matter with my skin. I was so afraid I would have to give up my employment.

"My doctor said he didn't think it would amount to anything. But it kept getting worse. One day I saw a piece in one of the papers about a lady who had the same trouble with her hands. She had used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and was cured. I decided to try them, and my hands were all healed before I had used one cake of Cuticura Ointment. I am truly thankful for the good results from the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, for thanks to them I was cured, and did not have to lose a day from work. I have had no return of the skin trouble." (Signed) Mrs. Mary E. Breig, 2522 Brown Street, Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 12, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 6 K, Boston.

BABY'S FUTURE.



Mrs. Justwed—Did you ever notice how much baby boilers and kicks about?

Mr. Justwed—Yes; I think he'll be a baseball player when he grows up.

Childish Wisdom.

Now and then the seemingly casual remarks of the little ones plumb impressive spiritual and psychological depths. Little Jean, for instance, listened to the conversation of two adults with silent interest, until one of the ladies, speaking of an unsatisfactory photograph, remarked that few mothers were pleased with portraits of their children, for the reason that the children did not look to others as they did to the loving maternal eye.

Said Jean eagerly:

"No, and children don't look at other people as they look at their mothers, either!"

FOUND RIGHT PATH
After a False Start.

"In 1890 I began to drink coffee.

"At that time I was healthy and enjoyed life. At first I noticed no bad effects from the indulgence but in course of time found that various troubles were coming upon me.

"Palpitation of the heart took unto itself sick and nervous headaches, kidney troubles followed and eventually my stomach became so deranged that even a light meal caused me serious distress.

"Our physician's prescriptions failed to help me and then I dosed myself with patent medicines till I was thoroughly disgusted and hopeless.

"Finally I began to suspect that coffee was the cause of my troubles. I experimented by leaving it off, except for one small cup at breakfast. This helped some but did not altogether relieve my distress. It satisfied me, however, that I was on the right track.

"So I gave up coffee altogether and began to use Postum. In ten days I found myself greatly improved, my nerves steady, my head clear, my kidneys working better and better, my heart's action rapidly improving, my appetite improved and the ability to eat a hearty meal without subsequent suffering restored to me. And this condition remains.

"Leaving off coffee and using Postum did this, with no help from drugs, as I abandoned the use of medicines when I began to use the food drink." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

SPEED LURE KILLS

Two Unfortunate Victims at the Chicago Aero Meet.

St. Croix Johnstone and "Billy" Badger, Young Aviators Who Lost Their Lives, Were Skilled and Very Popular.

Chicago.—The two aviators who lost their lives while taking part in the fourth day's program of the international aero meet here had careers filled with thrills and comparatively short as bird-men. A desire to attain a record for speed in travel lured both young men into the aviation game.

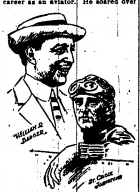
St. Croix Johnstone was a Chicago boy. He came here a few years after his birth in Toronto, Ont., and was the only son of Dr. Stuart Johnstone of this city. Having won honors in other parts of America and across the sea, the aviator, just twenty-four years old, had returned to his home city to distinguish himself further. It was his first appearance in Chicago as an air pilot since he had obtained his license.

Johnstone obtained his education in the Chicago public schools, later taking a course of instruction at Lewis Institute. While subsequently employed in the advertising business the young man became a motorcycle enthusiast and at eighteen was known as a "crack" rider.

Johnstone decided to enter aviation two years ago. He went to Pau, France, and became a student in the Bleriot school. Upon completion of this course he purchased two monoplanes from Count de Lesseps and gave several exhibitions on the continent. Last October Johnstone went to England to study aeroplanes. He became a licensed air pilot on December 30, 1910, the day before John B. Moisant lost his life at New Orleans.

The young aviator came to America last spring and before his return to Chicago had appeared at Long Island, Detroit, Havana and Toronto. He was for some time a teammate of Harry N. Atwood, the long distance flyer.

Johnstone's flight at Havana is considered the most daring feat of his career as an aviator. He soared over the narrow streets, where there was no possible landing place had an accident occurred.



Aviators Killed at Chicago.

Johnstone was married three years ago. His wife had been present at the meet here each day and was among the last ones to give up hope when word from the rescue party out in the lake was awaited.

"Billy" Badger, a native of Pittsburg, was only twenty-four years old. In his home city he was popular among his associates. He was unmarried and, following the death of both parents, became a resident at the Pittsburg Athletic club. He inherited $250,000 from the Badger estate when he became of age three years ago.

The Badger fortune is said to have been amassed by the young aviator's grandfather, Dr. Thomas Badger, as herb doctor. Badger's father conducted a cigar store in Pittsburg. He died several years ago and the aviator's mother, subsequently married to John Goettmann, a restaurant man, died last winter.

Badger was a graduate of Princeton. He had prepared for Princeton at the Lawrenceville academy, at Lawrenceville, N. Y. He seemed contented to get as much speed as possible out of automobiles, until last summer, when an aviation meet was held in Pittsburg. Then he determined to attempt flying.

The young man decided to buy an aeroplane and try for an aviator's license. He bought a machine and practiced for months. Finally he made several successful flights at Mineola, L. I., thus obtaining his license from the Aero Club of America. He had planned, upon the close of the Chicago air meet, to return to Pittsburg and make a flight in his home city.

FIRST TRACE OF LOST CHILD

Watch Found in the Stomach of an Alligator Indicates Girl Was Eaten.

Forsyth, Ga.—The finding of an initialed gold watch and chain in the stomach of a large alligator that died in a pond near here is believed to solve the mystery of the disappearance of 12-year-old Janet Thompson from the home of her parents at Island Grove, Fla., two years ago. The alligator was captured near Island Grove some weeks after the girl disappeared and was brought to this place.

The little girl has never been heard from since she disappeared. When last seen she was standing on the banks of the lake where the alligator was caught, and she was wearing at the time a gold watch with her initials engraved on the case.

It is believed that while the girl was playing on the bank of the lake the alligator devoured her. The parents have been notified, and the watch will be returned to them.

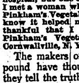
Woman's Danger Periods Made Safe

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The Change of Life is the most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Here is proof:



Natick, Mass.,—"I cannot express what I went through during the Change of Life before I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in such a nervous condition I could not keep still. My limbs were cold. I had creepy sensations and could not sleep nights. I was finally told by two physicians that I had a tumor.

"I read one day of the wonderful cures made by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it, and it has made me a well woman. My neighbors and friends declare it has worked a miracle for me. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold for women during this period of life. If it will help others you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Nathan B. Greaton, 51 No. Main St., Natick, Mass.

ANOTHER SIMILAR CASE.

Cornwallville, N. Y.—"I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time for Change of Life, nervousness, and a fibroid growth.

"Two doctors advised me to go to the hospital, but one day while I was away visiting, I met a woman who told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and I know it helped me wonderfully. I am very thankful that I was told to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Wm. Boughton, Cornwallville, N. Y., Greene Co.

The makers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have thousands of such letters as those above—they tell the truth, else they could not have been obtained for love or money. This medicine is no stranger—it has stood the test for years.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

All the universities and colleges in the United States will be classified in the order of their merit when the investigation being conducted by the United States bureau of education is completed. One of the most serious attacks ever made upon the treaty making power of the United States will mark the opening of the term of supreme court of the United States next month. The Italian government, through its consul general on the Pacific coast, will argue that the United States possesses broad enough treaty making power to deal with the settlement of estates of foreigners who die in this country without leaving wills. Public officials from California will contend that the federal government has no such power.

The Hobo convention, which opened here was a dismal failure. Instead of an army of 4,000 delegates to enter protest against present industrial conditions and voice demands to congress for legislation aimed to enable men to live without working, less than fifty knights of the pike were in evidence at the headquarters, which had been provided by James Eads How, the millionaire hobo, and grandson of the builder of the Eads bridge at St. workLouis. Employes of the Western Maryland railroad went among the seventy-two hobo delegates and offered all of them work, resulting in a mad stampede, leaving but sixteen in line. The stampede was to get away from the suggestion.

CHILD MURDERED

"DOGSKIN" JOHNSON, FORMER CONVICT, IS SENTENCED TO PRISON FOR LIFE.

DEED DONE BY NEIGHBOR

Rushed Secretly to Waupun to Avoid Possible Lynching—Says Crime Was Result of Sudden Impulse.

Madison, Wisconsin. — John, otherwise known as "Dogskin" Johnson, confessed to the murder of little Annie Lemberger, the 7-year-old child whose body was found in Lake Monona, and was immediately sentenced by Judge Anthony Donovan to life imprisonment.

A few minutes after his confession and sentence, Johnson was taken in an automobile by Sheriff Andrew Brown and a deputy, whisked away through side streets and across the country at a rapid clip to the state prison at Waupun.

Although officers suspected Johnson of knowing something about the crime they could not fasten the guilt upon him absolutely.

On the strength of suspicion lodged against him, he was taken into court, pleaded not guilty and placed under a $10,000 bond, the preliminary hearing being set for Sept. 25.

Haunted by the terrible crime he had committed against an innocent girl, Johnson brooded in his cell at the police station all day following his arraignment in the morning. Abandoning his sham of insanity, he paced restlessly back and forth in his cell waiting anxiously for the first sounds of an angry mob. Finally the suspense became too great. Calling Turnkey John Foye to the cell, he declared that he was willing to tell all.

In the presence of Chief of Police Shaughnessy, District Attorney R. N. Nelson and Turnkey Foye, who listened, horrified, he related that the deed was the result of sudden impulse. He had watched through the bedroom window the little girl and her sister undress at bedtime on different occasions and on the fateful night about 10 o'clock, shortly after the children had closed their eyes in sleep, he raised the sash and snatched little Annie from the bed, dragged her through the window, knocked her on the head with his fist, rendering her unconscious, so there would be no outcry. He then took her to the railroad bridge and, after beating her on the head until life was extinct, threw the body into Lake Monona.

Johnson said he did not want to make a detailed confession because he wanted to be on his way to Waupun to avoid mob violence. He said he would make a written confession after he had been safely lodged in prison.

Testimony at the inquest was conflicting in that one physician was of the opinion that the child had been criminally assaulted before being thrown into the lake, while another expressed the opposite view.

Johnson had a dispute with Lemberger, father of the child, several years ago, and at that time wanted to fight, but this, it is not believed, had any connection with the committing of the crime.

Johnson has already served a term in the penitentiary and several years ago he was taken to the Mendota hospital for the insane, after he had assailed a little girl at Brownsville, Wis.

PEASANTS FLEE ETNA DISTRICT.

Torrents of Burning Lava Pouring Down Slope.

Catania, Sicily. — Heavy smoke lies over the crest of Mount Etna and the bombardment is like the firing of heavy artillery. A torrent of burning lava, estimated at 2,000 feet wide and four feet deep, is pouring down the slope. Groves of trees have been uprooted and set on fire and the lava stream is sweeping through the fields.

The peasants have left their homes carrying with them the aged, the sick and the children, and whatever belongings they were able to get. Whole regions covered with hardened lava from past eruptions have been torn by the frequent earth shocks. Many of the shocks have been of great violence and the peasants fear a repetition of the Messina disaster.

JUDGE STANTON INSTRUCTS DUMAS GRAND JURY.

JUDGE C. W. STANTON.

Bemidji. — The Beltrami county grand jury, which is to hear the case of Dr. D. F. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, charged with complicity in the Puposky postoffice arson and robbery case, is in session. The jury has been instructed by Judge Stanton.

Martin Behan, the wounded Puposky bandit caught by detectives on the night that his pal, Mike Davis, escaped in the timber, is on his way here to repeat again his story on the witness stand of his alleged conniving with Dr. Dumas to burn and rob the postoffice at Puposky.

Assistant State Fire Marshal Sam Fullerton declared that if at least two other men in Cass Lake besides Dr. Dumas were not arrested in connection with the Puposky case the state would be keenly disappointed.

"The state believes," he said, "that Sheriff Hazen will do his duty, and that a jury of fair-minded men will be obtained who will consider the evidence for just what it is worth. I will hazard no guess as to the outcome of the case against Dr. Dumas, and, while I hope he may be able to establish his innocence, the perpetrators of the crime must be brought to justice."

FRUIT GOING TO WASTE.

Apples Being Fed to Pigs in Southern Minnesota.

Winona. — From reports reaching Winona from the surrounding countryside in Southern Minnesota crops of fruits of all kinds are so abundant that the problem of what shall be done with them has become serious.

A Winonan, who made a trip through Winona county the past week says there are so many apples this year that branches of trees are breaking with their weight. Farmers are making every effort to dispose of the oversupply before it is too late, but it seems that they are unable to do this in all instances. Scores are making cider by the barrel. In many cases apples are fed to hogs. There is also a great plenty of crabapples throughout the district.

It is reported there are so many wild grapes that it is an impossibility to see the vines. The same thing is true of tame grapes, and it is asserted that vines which never before have been productive, to speak of, are laden with fruit. Wine is being put up in great quantities. In many places the plums are said to be as large as eggs.

As with fruits, so it is with the nuts. Hazel nuts, hickory nuts, walnuts and butternuts are everywhere in profusion. Hundreds of watermelons and cantaloupes have gone to waste in Winona county this summer, according to farmers, as they have been unable to dispose of them. Tomatoes also are very plentiful and, in addition to their large numbers, the quality of the vegetable is away above the standard.

TO CELEBRATE BIRTH.

Lac Qui Parle County Is Forty Years Old.

Madison.—The fortieth anniversary of the organization of Lac qui Parle county will be celebrated in this city September 27 to 30, with one of the biggest reunions on record of pioneers of this section of the state.

Elaborate preparations are being made by the residents of this city and of the county for the entertainment of hundreds of "old-timers," and invitations to the event have been sent broadcast over the state and nation.

Lac qui Parle was a prominent trading post long before there was any thought of organizing Minnesota into a territory. It was the most important trading post between lower Mississippi points and the Selkirk settlements of the North in the early years of 1800, and in 1835 Dr. Williamson and his family ascended the Minnesota river and established at Lac qui Parle a mission said to be one of the first religious institutions in the state.

Test Case On Paving Cost.

Faribault.—The city of Faribault is to be made defendant in a test suit to be brought at the November term of court. When the paving in the business section was done the abutting property holders were assessed for their proportionate amount and in like manner assessed for curbing which was reset. The property holders contend the city had no right to assess them for curbing which was already in place. The test is being brought by A. S. [illegible], but there are about fifty other property holders interested.

20% EXPRESS REDUCTION.

Cut in Rates by Companies Doing Business in Minnesota.

St. Paul.—The several express companies doing business in Minnesota have made an offer to the state warehouse and railroad commission to reduce the intrastate and interstate joint express rate by more than 20 per cent.

It was the most sweeping reductions offered by the companies in recent years. Members of the railroad and warehouse commission withheld official recognition of the new schedule until the tariff could be examined and the actual effects of the offer determined.

The proposal of the companies is in response to the demand of shippers all over the country, who have been agitating reductions on joint express rates for several years. Under the old schedule the joint express rate was the sum total of the local rates. In other words, when express was shipped from some point in Minnesota to Minneapolis on one line and then to some tributary point on another, the regular rate was paid to Minneapolis and the local rate to the tributary point. Under the new rules, the total rate would be reduced 20 per cent.

This reduction is considered by far of the greatest importance. It means that if express were shipped, for instance, from a point east of Chicago into Chicago on one line, then from Chicago to either of the Twin Cities on another and then to a tributary point on a third line, there would be a reduction of 20 per cent on the entire rate. Members of the railroad and warehouse commission said that this reduction would mean a saving of many thousands of dollars to the shippers.

THOUSANDS FOR STATE.

Two Eastern Estates Will Pay Between $200,000 and $300,000 Inheritance Taxes.

Minnesota will reap between $200,000 and $300,000, conservatively estimated, from two estates alone, as the result of the trip, according to Assistant Attorney General Weeks, who returned from a three-week trip throughout the east, investigating estates in which the state has a claim under the inheritance tax law.

Within a few days, after the Whittier hearing is concluded, Mr. Weeks will consult with local attorneys representing the two estates, and he anticipates no difficulty in effecting a settlement.

What procedure will be followed in respect to other estates has not been determined, he said, but suits to collect the state's claims may be necessary.

ORDERS REBELS IN CHINA SLAIN.

Government Edict Says Leaders Meant to Proclaim Independence.

Peking, China. — According to an imperial edict the ring-leaders in the disorders in Sze-Chuen province intended to proclaim independence. As a consequence, the Chinese government has ordered the viceroy to destroy the rebels to the last man. The government, however, has instructed the viceroy to distinguish between the misguided and the actual rebels.

In Minnesota.

Important Happenings of the Week Briefly Told.

Lake City.—The barn on the farm of George Lamont of Doak Center, was struck by lightning and burned. Four valuable horses were cremated.

Heron Lake.—A gasoline stove exploded in the house of Richard Haetzler and burned his 2-year-old child so badly it died in a few minutes. The house was not damaged.

Crookston. — Burglars broke into the saloon of Albert Jance at Fisher, fourteen miles west of here, blew the door off and got away with $300 without leaving a trace except some automobile tracks.

Hastings. — At the last week's meeting of the city council a franchise was granted the Interurban Construction Company, to operate its proposed trolley lines which will be extended from Iver Grove to Hastings.

Minnesota Lake. — The council has established the price of liquor licenses at $1,500 and limited the number of saloons to two. This raises the same revenue that six saloons brought in several years ago, when the license was $500.

Minneapolis. — "Die Frau," the $1,000 painting stolen from the ladies' parlor of the Radisson hotel, has been recovered. It was left in a drug store by an unidentified woman, who is believed to have cut it from its frame, two hours after it had been stolen.

Little Falls.—The body of John Georgon of Culdrum was found within twenty rods of the house, lying in thick underbrush. The man, who was 71 years old, disappeared some time ago, but nothing was thought of the matter because he had been in the habit of leaving for months at a time.

Red Wing.—D. M. Neill, Red Wing, president of the Minnesota Federation of Commercial clubs, will attend the third national conservations congress at Kansas City, Sept. 25-27, as the personal representative of Governor A. O. Eberhart. Fifteen delegates-at-large have been appointed from Minnesota and it is expected that the majority will attend.

Mankato. — L. A. Stacy, of Algona, Iowa, has begun suit in the United States court in this city against the city of St. James to recover $3,500 damages for injuries received as a result of an accident last winter, when he struck his crutch against a raised iron grating on the sidewalk and fell. He says the bone in his lame leg was fractured.

Winona.—A movement has been started for the construction of a new steamer to be operated between Wabasha and Lansing, Iowa, to take the place of the La Crosse, which has been in service this year. Captain Louis Muntz of the La Crosse has started a canvass among merchants in the river towns touched. Some $25,000 will be required. Owners of the La Crosse will put in the $10,000 represented in the boat and wharves.

Faribault.—By a majority of 136 to 8 the people of school district 5, 6, 7 and 81 in Steele county and district 50 in Rice county have voted to consolidate their schools into one graded school. School children of twenty sections of land will have the benefit of a large modern, sanitary school building. Instruction will be given up to the third year of high school work. The election was held at Medford, just over the Rice county line, where the school will be located. The board of education of the consolidated district will call a special bond election shortly to raise the money for the new building, which will cost about $16,000.

Warren.—Nels Malm, one of the well to do farmers of the township of Bloomer, ten miles northwest of town, has installed an electric lighting plant on his farm. The plant was installed by his son, who is an electrician, and is similar to the outfits used in small towns, but in addition to the generating machinery there is a storage battery, making it necessary to use a low voltage. The batteries, when they are fully charged, will light an ordinary farm residence for about two weeks. The generator is run by a small gasoline engine. Mr. Malm's residence also has a heating plant and hot and cold water in different parts of the house.

Red Lake Falls.—The people of Red Lake county will celebrate the harvesting of a bumper crop in an enthusiastic manner. The Red Lake County Agricultural society has recently been organized and will hold the first Red Lake county fair in this city, Sept. 19, 20 and 21. The business people and farmers of the county are enthusiastic over the fair project and the success of the first fair is assured. Fair grounds have been acquired and a good half-mile track has been made ready for the race events, and grandstands, fences and sheds are now being built. More than $3,000 will be given in premiums and purses and there will be many special features and attractions.

St. Cloud.—A. Lindenberg, a saloonkeeper, was waylaid here at midnight and may die of a gunshot wound just below the heart. Lindenberg has been in the habit of carrying home from his saloon the receipts of his evening's business. When he was about to open the screen door on the porch of his house, he was seized by two men and robbed of $8 in cash. He yelled for the police, whereupon one of the men drew a revolver and shot him at close range just below the heart. The gunman then threw his weapon away and, with his companion took to [illegible]

STATE OF MINNESOTA

Executive Department.

Proclamation.

That the fire waste is increasing year by year and becoming more and more appalling within the State of Minnesota is certain.

I.

To determine by a congress of representative men, interested in the preservation of the wealth of our state, what the loss of property has been by reason of fire, the causes therefor, and how such waste can be reduced, will contribute greatly to the advancement of this state and to the economic welfare of its people. The magnitude of loss of property by fire, as well as the cost of fire prevention, is not grasped by the average man. It is estimated that approximately one-half a billion dollars is annually expended by the people of the United States for this purpose,—a sum one-half as great as the annual budget of our federal government. Nearly two hundred fifty million dollars represents the loss by fire. A sum which would be equaled if a per capita tax of $2.71 were collected from every man, woman and child in the United States. In no European country does the per capita loss exceed 50 cents.

During the past fifteen years computations indicate that approximately two billion dollars and twenty thousand lives have been "sacrificed to fire." Minnesota has borne too great a part of this enormous loss of property. The loss of timber in our state by forest fires is almost beyond computation. Property destroyed by fire is a total and absolute loss. Every indication points to an increase of loss by fire in our state during the year 1911.

II.

The season of the year when fires are wont to increase in number is at hand. The heating stove of the householder is again to be utilized, and the smoke therefrom must penetrate the swallow's nest before escaping. It is believed that more than fifty per cent of our fire loss is due to incendiarism or negligence. Much can be done for the prevention of fires by criminals, or through carelessness. Carelessness in the use of fire and lights in housekeeping is common. Carelessness in the use of matches is universal. Inflammable rubbish in factories is too often found. Dark and dirty hallways where matches are scratched and where cigar and cigarette stubs are thrown are too frequently the cause of fires. Tenants visit dark basements by means of candles, or old-fashioned oil lamps. Unsafe oil stoves are sold and employed. Oily waste is not rarely found in packing houses, factories and lumber yards. Property is not carefully watched and those things which produce fire are improperly guarded.

III.

It is meet that our people should be instructed and caused to realize that fire waste is impoverishing our commonwealth. Taking into account these vital considerations for the welfare of our state, I hereby do proclaim the eighth day of November, 1911, to be known as Minnesota Fire Prevention Day, and urge that it be so recognized and observed in all departments of the state, in all public and private institutions of learning, and by all organizations and persons interested in the social and economic uplift of our people. It is urged that the Press, as the strongest factor in the development of public sentiment, impress the importance of this movement upon our people.

And I do further proclaim the holding of a Minnesota Fire Prevention Congress, to be held in the Palm Room, Saint Paul Hotel, in the City of St. Paul, on said eighth day of November, and earnestly invite the entire citizenship of the state to participate and co-operate in carrying out the plans of this gathering, that its purposes may be fully realized.

In Testimony Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be hereto affixed at the Capitol, in the City of St. Paul, this 7th day of September, A. D. 1911.

ADOLPH O. EBERHART,
(Seal.) Governor.

Attest:
Julius A. Schmahl, Secretary of State.
A. M. Hayes, Executive Clerk.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson is taking a month's vacation. The country would breathe easier if it could be assured of his permanent retirement.

After Janury 1 next a team driver after dark will have to carry a light that will show both in front and rear, under the new law. If he does not and an automobile runs into him he is barred from recovering damages. Autos are required to have two front lights and one rear light.

The weights and measures department of the state railroad and warehouse commission will soon be in operation. The work in organizing this new department has been slow for the reason that the commission has experienced great difficulty in securing the services of competent men.

The annual meeting of the Minnesota State Ben Franklin club will be held next Friday and Saturday, Sept. 22, and 23 in the rooms of the Minneapolis Ben Franklin club. The best program of the year has been prepared for thse occasion, a program teeming with money saving, money making suggestion which no printer can afford to miss.

The result of the vote on prophibition in Maine is still in doubt. Figures from the office of the secretary of state show a majority for repeal of 155, while the Associated Press returns are 347 votes against. Victory for the wets in Monday's elections does not open the state to public sale of liquor. To accomplish this will require a two-thirds vote of the state legislature, repealing the no-license statue.

Reform of the Bench

It was not for mere causeless reasons, for mere love of the bizarre and experimental, that the people of Arizona embodied the principle of the recall in their constitution. An evil existed and they prescribed what they thought was the right course of treatment for it. The evil is no less because the method of cure has been frowned upon.

That part of the bar which has found prosperity in hair splitting has no excuse for congratulating itself upon Mr. Taft's veto. The judiciary will have to be reformed just the same and if the legal profession doesn't purpose doing it, the task will have to be done for it The faith in technicalities, the long and heart breaking delays, the leaning toward political friendships, the playing for partisan favors, the reversion to hoary and outworn practices and procedures, all will have to go before the old respect for the bench is restored. And the people of the United States are determined that that respect shall be possible again. The Arizona extension of the recall was a groping toward the light. Though Arizona would more than likely make a failure of it, other communities are bound to try no less resolutely to regenerate the judiciary. It seems for a moment a question of choice of medicines. It is in reality a question of gaining a cure, whatever the medicine.—Toledo Blade.

Second Papers

Under the present requirements it is necessary for anyone desirous of taking out second papers to file their petition with the clerk of court 90 days before the term of court at which these petitions will be heard. As the next term of court will be held in January it is necessary to file petitions not later than October 14.

Petitions can be filed any time and it would therefore seem advisable for those who want to make their applications to do so now and not wait until the last daps.

From New York to Los Angeles

James Ward, the aviator, left New York City Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock for a flight to the Pacific coast for a $50,000 prize. After circling the harbor he sailed up the Hudson and passed Jersey city, got lost and was forced to land at Ashbrook, twenty-two miles from New York. He had mistaken the Lehigh Valley for the Erie railroad, which latter he had purposed to follow.

He returned to Newark and took a fresh start for Middleton, having lost a number of hours of valuable time. His wife will follow him as closely as possible by rail.

Rural School Notes

The following teachers were granted certificates at the last examination or had their certificates renewed:

FIRST GRADE.

Louise Netteland, St, Hilaire.
Stella Olson, Thief River Falls.
Tyra E. Wallen, St Hilaire.

SECOND GRADE.

Stella Arndt. Kuehnel.
Dena Wold, "
Katherine Dunn, "
Elthea Henry, Kratka (limited).
Elvina Bloom, Strip.
Katie B. Dahl, Thief River Falls.
Ida A. Ove, " "
Laura E. Johnson, " "
Cora Stene, " "
Sophia Utabgaa, " "
Nora G. Johnson, St. Hilaire.
Selma Hoff, " "
Gina Finstad, " "
Mrs. Ellen B. Prestegard, Erie.
Fred Sheldrew, Grygla (limited).

There were granted in all eighteen certificates. We have only a word of commendation for those candidates who worked hard in school and in the the summer training school to make up credits. Returns show good averages.

To judge from present indications, all our schools will be supplied with teachers. School boards that have not hired teachers should take the matter up for consideration at once and let such teachers as may have put in their applications know, because some of these may have other positions offered to them. They can not afford to wait, not knowing if an application will be accepted. School boards deferring action in hiring a teacher may find themselves without one for this reason when school opens.

Delays in sending in clerks' annual reports has also delayed the sending out from this office of the necessary certificates to the clerks.

The superintendent will be glad to meet all teachers and officers in the new quarters at the court house.

Respectfully, E. A. MOSTUE.

Will Be Warm Game

An interesting county fair attraction for the second day of the fair, Wednesday, Sept. 20, will be the ball game to be played by the Terrebone and St. Hilaire teams. These teams have played two games this season, each winning a game by a close score. The Terrebonne boys say they are going into the contest with a determination to win the "rubber" game. The St. Hilaire fellows say they are going to carry away the money. To the fans who have been watching the teams work it looks like anybody's game, so there is not the least doubt it will be a game worth seeing. —Red Lake Falls Gazett.

Steenerson at the County Fair

Congressman Halvor Steenerson will deliver an address at the Red Lake County fair. The day and hour for his address have not been definitely decided upon, but it is probable that the congressman will speak on Thursday, the last day of the fair.—Gazette.

Substantial.

The joy of ready money,
The cinch of cash in hand,
Is something that the dullest
Can always understand.
There may be other pleasures
And other forms of bliss,
But there is none, I venture,
So sure enough as this.

In looking at the posies,
In going for a walk,
In taking in a lecture
To hear a fellow talk
And all such simple doings
Some pleasures may attend,
But there is no enjoyment
Like having cash to spend.

In love and its allurements
The one of youthful mind
Some feelings highfalutin
May very often find,
But when he pays the preacher
And starts to buy the hash
Things run on more serenely
If he can scatter cash.

Then here's to ready money,
The useful friend of man!
It gets him into places
No other booster can.
It gets him into places
And gets him out again
If he has ever handy
The twenty or the ten.

HIT HIM IN TWO PLACES.

The Way Cicero Treated His Devoted Admirer Petrarch.

In the early autumn of 1358 Petrarch suffered an accident which may be narrated in his own words. "You shall hear," he writes to a friend, "what a trick Cicero, the man whom I have loved and worshiped from my boyhood, has just played me. I possess a huge volume of his letters, which I wrote out some time ago with my own hand because there was no original manuscript accessible to the copyists. Ill health hindered me, but my great love of Cicero and delight in the letters and eagerness to possess them prevailed against my bodily weakness and the laboriousness of the work. This is the book which you have seen leaning against the doorpost at the entry to my library. One day while going into the room thinking about something else, as I often do, I happened inadvertently to catch the book in the fringe of my gown. In its fall it struck me lightly on the left leg a little above the heel. 'What! My Cicero,' quoth I, bantering him, 'pray what are you hitting me for?' He said nothing, but next day as I came again the same way he hit me again, and again I laughed at him and set him up in his place. Why make a long story? Over and over again I went on suffering the same hurt, and, thinking he might be cross at having to stand on the ground, I put him up a shelf higher, but not till after the repeated blows on the same spot had broken the skin and a far from despicable sore had resulted. I despised it, though, reckoning the cause of my accident of much more weight than the accident itself. At last, when the pain was too much not only for my wit, but for sleep and rest, so that to neglect the thing any longer seemed not courage, but madness, I was forced to call in the doctors, who have now for some days been fussing over this really ridiculous wound, not without great pain and some danger to the wounded limb, as they insist, though I think you know just what reliance I place on their prognostications either of good or evil. So this is how my beloved Cicero has treated me. He long ago struck my heart, and now he has struck my leg." —From H. C. Hollway-Calthorp's "Petrarch."

THE GHOST AT THE FEAST.

What the Ensign Saw and What Happened After Dinner.

In "The Story of My Life," by Mr. Augustus Hare, is told the following creepy story:

A regiment was passing through Derbyshire on its way to fresh quarters in the north. The colonel, as they stayed for the night in one of the country towns, was invited to dine at a country house in the neighborhood and to bring any one he liked with him. Consequently he took with him a young ensign for whom he had a great fancy. They arrived, and it was a large party, but the lady of the house did not appear till just as they were going in to dinner and when she appeared was so strangely distrait and preoccupied that she scarcely attended to anything that was said to her.

At dinner the colonel observed that his young companion scarcely ever took his eyes off the lady of the house, staring at her in a way which seemed at once rude and unaccountable. It made him observe the lady herself, and he saw that she seemed scarcely to attend to anything said by her neighbors on either side of her, but rather seemed, in a manner quite unaccountable, to be listening to some one or something behind her.

As soon as dinner was over the young ensign came to the colonel and said: "Oh, do take me away! I entreat you so take me away from this place!"

The colonel said: "Indeed, your conduct is so very extraordinary and unpleasant that I quite agree with you that the best thing we can do is to go away." And he made the excuse of his young friend being ill and ordered their carriage.

When they had driven some distance the colonel asked the ensign for an explanation of his conduct. He said that he could not help it. During the whole of dinner he had seen a terrible black, shadowy figure standing behind the chair of the lady of the house, and it had seemed to whisper to her and she to listen to it. He had scarcely told this when a man on horseback rode rapidly past the carriage, and the colonel, recognizing one of the servants of the house they had just left, called out to know if anything was the matter.

"Oh, don't stop me, sir!" he shouted, "I am going for the doctor! My lady has just cut her throat!"

Interested.

He was telling his wife about a small game of poker in which he had lost 45 cents.

"It was the worst game I ever played," he exclaimed, still angry over it, "and I got so mad I couldn't see."

"What did you do then, dear," she asked sweetly—"go it blind?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE USEFUL PIG.

A Colored Woman's Story of a Trade and Its Results.

A colored woman was being examined at a conference at Tuskegee. "Do the people in your community own homes?" came the query from Mr. Booker Washington.

"I think's they's fixing to own 'em, sah."

"But do they own them?"

"A heap of times you can't jest tell, sah. But they's holding 'em down."

"Do you own your home?"

"Yes, sah, I do," proudly. "And I can tell you jest how I got it. I swapped a puppy dog for it."

"Tell us about it."

"Well, it was this way. When I started I didn't have anything at all but jest a little yaller puppy dog.

"I took the dog over to my brother-in-law's. He had eight little bits of pigs, oh, jest so little, and I swapped the puppy with him for one of the pigs. It was sech a little pig that it didn't look like it would live, but I nursed it good, and I prayed to the Lord to make that little pig come forward to do me good, and the pig lived and grew.

"The first year I turned her out, and when she came back in the fall she brought me seven little pigs with her. That was my start. I've never had to buy any meat since. This winter I've killed three hogs, and I've got another at home now ready to kill. I've got forty acres of land now, all paid for, and a house, and it all come from that one little puppy."

"Do you hear that," exclaimed Mr. Washington, "you men? Some of you'd better go back home and swap your dogs for pigs!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

"Dave, how do you get your lesson so well now?" said the master.

"I learn every word in the lesson and get my mother to hear me at night, then I go over them in the morning before I come to school, and I go over them at my seat before the class is called up."

"Good boy, Dave!" said the master. "That's the way to have success; always work that way and you'll do."

Dave is today the manager of a big lumber company, and he attributes his start to the words:

"Go up ahead and see that you stay there. You can if you work hard."—Genesee Courier.

THE SPENDTHRIFT.

HE left so little, did you say?
He had so brief a time to stay
'Twas hardly worth his while to gather
Dross of our little earthly day.

The things that other people prize
He gave to others, being wise;
Being so heavenly foolish, rather,
That kept his gains for paradise.

Hardly a keepsake did he leave,
And all his gold was fugitive.
He kept those things that will not perish.
For him the widow and orphan grieve.

He gave with a light laugh, indeed,
As he and gold were ill agreed.
Held it the poorest thing to cherish,
Save that it filled another's need.

He had his pilgrim's scrip of hope
And living waters in his cup.
The staff of faith that still suffices
The stumbling soul, to lift it up.

Being so soon a traveler,
Of earthly things he had no care,
But on the road that's paradise's
He went the lighter, being bare.
—Katharine Tynan.

The term "barrels" is usually used in speaking of quantities of cement. However, cement is seldom actually packed in barrels. A barrel is the unit of measure and simply means four sacks, each sack weighing 95 lbs. Universal Portland Cement is packed in paper or cloth sacks; in most cases cloth sacks are used. Universal is of the best quality of Portland Cement possible to manufacture. Forty million sacks are made and consumed yearly in this country. The railroads use hundreds of thousands of barrels. It is used by the biggest architects and contractors in the cities and the government uses it extensively in all departments. If you have any concrete work to do, ask your dealer for Universal. SEA ELEPHANTS REAL

Explorers Found One That Was 21 Feet Long.

Three Herds of These Animals Disprove Theory That They Were Extinct—Many Specimens Have Been Found.

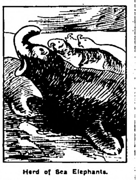
Los Angeles, Cal.—The recent American Museum of Natural History expedition to Lower California aboard the U. S. S. Albatross was the most fruitful and interesting scientific trip ever made in the southwest, and its discoveries are of inestimable value, according to P. I. Osburn of Pasadena, who acted as guide for the party. The cruise covered practically all the islands in the Gulf of California.

By far the most important find was made in a large hidden cove on Guadalupe island, where the scientists came upon three herds of sea elephants, about the present existence of which there has been serious doubt, many believing them to be extinct.

The first sea elephant seen was a gigantic bull lying prone on the sand under a towering cliff. As soon as he sighted the explorers he made for the water, but before he reached the edge he was shot by one of the naturalists in the boat, it being impossible to take him alive. This animal was the largest seen and measured about 21 feet in length. The weight was enormous.

The party managed to round up five live young sea elephants, and these were taken aboard. They did not show the well-developed elephant-like snout or trunk of the adults and resembled the California sea lion. They all showed fight and wallowed about the deck unceasingly. Their call, hard to describe, is a concert of sharp cries and barkings.

The largest herd of these water elephants comprise about fifty, of all ages and sizes, and they were lying high on the beach. They were so sluggish and inactive that the naturalists walked among them and made photographs and sketches. The fighting bulls let out hollow roars much like the terrifying ones of caged lions. At times they emitted from their mouths small clouds of white vapor and rolled their large black eyes. The eyes of the bulls were more than three inches in diameter.



Herd of Sea Elephants.

At Pichilinque island Osburn shot a black hare, found nowhere else in the world except on another island near by. These hares, coal black on top, inhabit the sea caves and the rocks of the cliffs and mesas. Hundreds of immense lizards, rare birds, fishes never before seen and an unclassified deer were taken.

BLOODHOUNDS AS TRACKERS

Conviction in a Kansas Murder Case Is Affirmed on Circumstantial Evidence.

Topeka, Kan.—Is the evidence obtained from the action of bloodhounds and the tracks of shoes sufficient to hold, where a man is convicted of murder? The Kansas supreme court has decided that it is, where the dogs have been proved to be accurate and reliable in following the trail of human footsteps.

In November, 1910, Joseph Anderson was shot and killed at his home in Graham county. Glen Adams lived six miles away, but he was known to have left his home early on the evening of the murder, returning early the next morning. Tracks about the home of Anderson gave the bloodhounds a good trail and they followed it to the Adams house. Shoe tracks at the Adams home and around Anderson's body corresponded with the shoes which Adams wore. The shoes and the bloodhounds afforded the only evidence adduced against Adams except some conflicting statements he made at the time of his arrest.

As a possible motive for the crime, it was brought out at the trial that Anderson had accused Adams and some other young men of breaking into a schoolhouse some time before.

Plymouth, N. H.—When Charles S. Milligan, a milk dealer, went for his cows he was surprised at seeing a young deer feeding with his herd near the pasture bars. The deer followed the herd to the barn, remaining there for two hours and eating hay.

DEATH BEFORE 100 YEARS IS SUICIDE

Prof. Munyon Says Ignorance of Laws of Health Explains Early End of Life.

NOTED SCIENTIST HAS ENCOURAGING WORD FOR DESPONDENT MEN AND WOMEN

"Death before 100 years of age has been reached is nothing more or less than slow suicide. A man (or woman) who dies at an earlier age is simply ignorant of the laws of health."

Such was the original and rather startling statement made by Professor James M. Munyon, the famous Philadelphia health authority, who is establishing health headquarters in all the large cities of the world for the purpose of getting in direct touch with his thousands of converts.

Professor Munyon is a living embodiment of the cheerful creed he preaches. Virile, well poised, active and energetic, he looks as though he would easily attain the century age limit which he declares is the normal one. He said:

"I want the people of the world to know my opinions on the subject of health, which are the fruit of a life-time devoted to healing the sick, people of America. There isn't a building in this city big enough to house the people in this State alone who have found health through my methods. Before I get through there won't be a building big enough to house my cured patients in this city alone.

"I want, most of all, to talk to the sick people—the invalids, the discouraged ones, the victims of nerve-wearing, body-racking diseases and ailments—for these are the ones to whom the message of hope which I bear will bring the greatest blessing.

"I want to talk to the rheumatics, the sufferers from stomach trouble, the ones afflicted with that noxious disease, catarrh. I want to tell my story to the women who have become chronic invalids as a result of nervous troubles. I want to talk to the men who are 'all run down,' whose health has been broken by overwork, improper diet, late hours and other causes, and who feel the creeping clutch of serious, chronic illness.

"To these people I bring a story of hope. I can give them a promise of better things. I want to astonish them by showing the record of cures performed through my new system of treatment.

"I have taken the best of the ideas from all schools and embodied them in a new system of treatments individually adapted to each particular case. I have no 'cure alls,' but my present method of attacking disease is the very best thought of modern science. The success which I have had with these treatments in this city and all over America proves its efficacy. Old methods must give away to new medical science moves. I know what my remedies are doing for humanity everywhere. I know what they will do for the people of this city. Let me prove my statements—that's all I ask."

The continuous stream of callers and mail that comes to Professor James M. Munyon at his laboratories, Fifty-third and Jefferson streets, Philadelphia, Pa., keeps Dr. Munyon and his enormous corps of expert physicians busy.

When the Minister Scored.

In a contribution to the Christian Register, Thomas R. Slicer tells this: "Some men the other night, in conversation with me, knowing I was a minister—and it is the spirit of this time to put it up to a minister in terms at least of gentle satire—said: 'We have been discussing conscience,' and one of them said, I have given a definition of conscience; it is the vermicular apendix of the soul,' and they laughed. And I said, 'That is a good definition in your case; you never know you have it until it hurts you.' Then they did not laugh."

AFTER 7 YEARS SUFFERING

I Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Waurika, Okla.—"I had female troubles for seven years, was all run down, and so nervous I could not do anything. The doctors treated me for different things but did me no good. I got so bad that I could not sleep day or night. While in this condition I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and began its use and wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice. In a short time I had gained my average weight and am now strong and well."—Mrs. SALLIE STEVENS, R. F. D., No. 8, Box 81, Waurika, Okla.

Another Grateful Woman.

Huntington, Mass.—"I was in a nervous, run down condition and for three years could find no help.

"I owe my present good health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier which I believe saved my life.

"My doctor knows what helped me and does not say one word against it."—Mrs. MARI JANETTE BATES, Box 134, Huntington, Mass.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, and nervous prostration.

GREAT BELLS OF THE WORLD

Tsar Kolokel the Largest, but "Liberty Bell" Is Dearest to Hearts of Americans.

Philadelphia.—In the great drama of history bells have played a very prominent role. The bell most historical and most dear to all Americans is the "Liberty Bell" now in Philadelphia. The other nations of the world have bells as famous and dear to them in historic memory as our "Liberty Bell."

In Belfast, Ireland, there is a bell reputed to be 1,352 years old. It is said that the bell was bequeathed to a church in that city by St. Patrick. It is carefully preserved and ornamented with precious stones and filigree of gold and silver.

World's Largest Bell.

The largest bell in the world is known as the Tsar Kolokel. There is an interesting history surrounding it. When it had been cast, attempt was made to hang it so that it might be rung, but, by an unhappy chance, it broke from its supports and fell to the ground, wherein it made a great hole into which it sank and lay for many years. Finally, after more than a hundred years of oblivion, it was raised and placed in a public square in Moscow, where it now stands. This bell weighs more than 440,000 pounds, and is more than 19 feet in height and 60 feet in circumference.

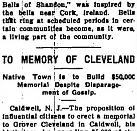
There is a bell in northern China which has been ringing without intermission for 100 years. The natives believe that at every stroke of the bell a devil is exorcised from their midst. A special tax has been levied to support those who make a business of ringing this bell. It is rung by a system of relay teams that keep replacing one another.

The history of bells is very interesting. They are usually connected with important periods in a nation's existence. They have inspired much of the world's best poetry. One of the most harmonic lyrics, "The Bells," by Edgar Allen Poe, was inspired by the ringing of church bells near his home. Father Prout's beautiful lyric, "The Bells of Shandon," was inspired by the bells near Cork, Ireland. Bells that ring at scheduled periods in certain communities become, as it were, a living part of the community.

TO MEMORY OF CLEVELAND

Native Town Is to Build $50,000 Memorial Despite Disparagement of Gossip.

Caldwell, N. J.—The proposition of influential citizens to erect a memorial to Grover Cleveland in Caldwell, his birthplace, by expending $5,000 of the municipal fund, and $45,000 to be collected elsewhere, promises to be a success, since Mrs. Cleveland has come forward with the assurance that recent gossip to the effect that the late president despised his native city is absolutely untrue.



Grover Cleveland's Birthplace.

Mrs. Cleveland wrote to the friends of the memorial project assuring them that her husband always spoke kindly of Caldwell, and her declaration is supported by a letter Mr. Cleveland wrote several years ago in which he referred to the town as a place dear to him.

Governor Woodrow Wilson has given his indorsement to the project.

BALD HEADS TRY SUN "CURE"

Thousands of Men Parade Bare Polls on Boardwalk at Atlantic City—Hair Soon Sprouts.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Somebody started a boardwalk rumor that sunshine combined with salt breezes would start hair growing on bald heads and thousands of bare polls have appeared in the daily promenades recently.

Men who formerly hid their shining scalps under the bushel of straw hats are shamelessly exhibiting their baldness to the grinning throngs in their faithful efforts to test the new cure.

According to the best authorities, the new "bald head cure" was discovered by "Tony" Biddle, a Philadelphian of pronounced baldness, who noticed that hair began to sprout after he had gone around in the sun without a hat at his Chelsea summer home for several days.

He is said to have communicated his supposed valuable discovery to friends, from whom it spread to others until a full third of the bald headed men of the resort are trying out the "cure."

WHEN THE LUCK CHANGED

Groceryman at Last Could Believe That Things Might Be Coming His Way.

George H. Earle, the Philadelphia financier, was talking in Washington about high—over high or rank—finance.

"There's a certain type of financier," said Mr. Earle, "who, in his greed for wealth, loses his humanity. He becomes, in fact, a fac simile of Peter Brown.

"Peter Brown was a Conshohocken grocer. He was delivering some groceries in his wagon one morning when he ran down and badly injured an old lady. The old lady sued him and got big damages. A few months later Brown was on his rounds again when he ran down and crippled an old man. The man also sued, and so large were the damages awarded him by a generous jury that poor Brown found himself actually on the verge of ruin.

"One morning about this time Brown's young son rushed into the shop in great excitement. 'Father!' he cried. 'Father! mother's been run over by old Gobsa Gold's 90-horse-power touring car.'

"The grocer's eyes filled with tears, and in a voice tremulous with feeling he exclaimed: 'Thank heaven, the luck's changed at last!'"

"WHY SHOULD I USE CUTICURA SOAP?

"There is nothing the matter with my skin, and I thought Cuticura Soap was only for skin troubles." True, it is for skin troubles, but its great mission is to prevent skin troubles. For more than a generation its delicate emollient and prophylactic properties have rendered it the standard for this purpose, while its extreme purity and refreshing fragrance give to it all the advantages of the best of toilet soaps. It is also invaluable in keeping the hands soft and white, the hair live and glossy, and the scalp free from dandruff and irritation.

While its first cost is a few cents more than that of ordinary toilet soaps, it is prepared with such care and of such materials, that it wears to a wafer, often outlasting several cakes of other soap, and making its use, in practice, most economical. Cuticura Soap is sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, but the truth of these claims may be demonstrated without cost by sending to "Cuticura," Dept. 23 L, Boston, for a liberal sample cake, together with a thirty-two page book on the skin and hair.

His Future Expenditures.

Among the most frequent requests that go to the United States senate are those asking some prominent member to give money to charity organizations, hospitals and other philanthropic undertakings. One day a charity worker asked Senator Flint of California, who is not a wealthy man, to give a large sum of money for a free ward in one of the hospitals.

"I am sorry that I cannot comply with your request," said the senator gravely; "but judging from the number of similar demands that have been made upon me in the past, I have decided that I can promote a greater charity. The vast amount of money spent on hospitals in this town convinces me that thousands of people are going to die and be buried without flowers. Hereafter, I shall devote my spare money exclusively to sending flowers to the dead."—The Sunday Magazine.

His Part in the Proceedings.

Clarence is a darky who is as proud of piloting Mr. Hillside's costly automobile as Mr. Hillside is of owning it. "Well, Clarence," said a neighbor, "I saw you in the Taft parade, but you didn't have the president in your car, I noticed." "No, sir," the chauffeur answered. "I didn't have the president, but I had a reporter, and I reckon Mr. Taft might have talked up there on the hill all night long and nobody in town would have knowed about it next day if it hadn't been for me and that reporter."—Exchange.

A LADY LECTURER

Feeds Nerves and Brains Scientifically.

A lady lecturer writes from Philadelphia concerning the use of right food and how she is enabled to withstand the strain and wear and tear of her arduous occupation. She says:

"Through improper food, imperfectly digested, my health was completely wrecked, and I attribute my recovery entirely to the regular use of Grape-Nuts food. It has, I assure you, proven an inestimable boon to me.

"Almost immediately after beginning the use of Grape-Nuts I found a gratifying change in my condition. The terrible weakness that formerly prostrated me for a few hours of work, was perceptibly lessened and is now only a memory—it never returns.

"Ten days after beginning on Grape-Nuts I experienced a wonderful increase in mental vigor and physical energy, and continued use has entirely freed me from the miserable insomnia and nervousness from which I used to suffer so much.

"I find Grape-Nuts very palatable and would not be without the crisp, delicious food for even a day on any consideration. Indeed, I always carry it with me on my lecture tours."

This principle was laid down by the Interstate Commerce commission in deciding the case of W. C. Sterling & Son company of Monroe, Mich., against the Michigan Central railroad and other carriers. OLYMPICRAMMED

WORLD'S LARGEST LINER COLLIDES WITH CRUISER AFTER LEAVING SOUTHAMPTON.

NO PASSENGERS INJURED

Boat Is Damaged and Is Forced to Put Back to Port—Vessel Crowded With American Tourists on Way Home From Europe.

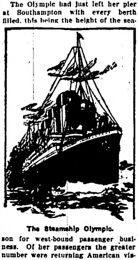
Cowes, Isle of Wight, England.—The White Star line steamer Olympic was in collision near Osbborne bay with the British cruiser Hawke. The Olympic was struck on the starboard quarter, where a large hole was smashed in. She is reported to have started back for Southampton. The Hawke has also left port for the south under her own steam. The numerous passengers are in no danger.

Following the collision the cruiser Hawke signalled to the naval authorities at Portsmouth for assistance, and tugs were sent.

Among the passengers on the Olympic are: William Waldorf Astor, George F. Baker, W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central; Chas. F. Bryan, Richard Croker, Jr., Frederick P. Duryea, George F. Ida, Justice Leaman, Clarence MacKay, Felix Warburg, Harry Payne Whitney, Harry Widener and Frank A. Munsey.

Every Berth Filled.

The Olympic had just left her pier at Southampton with every berth filled, this being the height of the season for west-bound passenger business. Of her passengers the greater number were returning American visitors to Europe. Not only were there throngs of them aboard from London and other English cities, but from all over Europe tourists had been gathering at Southhampton to take the world's largest vessel to the home country.



The Steamship Olympic.

The big steamer was rammed flush on her starboard quarter by the steel prow of the warship. Perfect discipline was maintained on board. The collision signal was given, the bulkheads automatically closed by the electrical machinery and the lifeboats and rafts were manned while the stateroom and deck stewards reassured the passengers.

Cruiser Able to Proceed.

The bow of the Hawke was badly crumpled, but her forward compartment held and she was able to proceed to Portsmouth under her own steam, but attended by a convoy of tugs.

Temporary repairs were made to the Olympic and then, with her pumps going to hold the water in check, she was dragged off by the accompanying fleet of attendant vessels and started for Southampton in tow, where a dry dock was hurriedly made ready to receive her.

$100,000 FIRE AT DULUTH.

Huge Lumber Plant Destroyed—250 Men Out of Work.

Duluth. — One of the most disastrous fires that has occurred in Duluth during the last year, raged for four hours when the Scott-Graff Lumber Company plant was almost destroyed.

The damage is estimated at $100,000 and is full covered by insurance. When the fire was discovered by a watchman, it was a small blaze on the top of an engine room. However, it spread rapidly to the planing mill and the dry kiln, and before the fire company could reach the place, the flames had spread from one end of the building to the other, and threatened to consume the whole plant, the mills on the waterfront and the lumber yards.

A general alarm was sent in and every engine in the city and one from Superior was soon on the ground The department turned its efforts to saving the main buildings and the sash and door factory. In the meantime the sparks had set fire to the lumber yard a block away, but the flames were soon checked.

The company employs about 250 men who will be turned out of work temporarily. The plant will be rebuilt.

They are of the opinion it can be made into a good paying proposition when additional water storage is provided.

Ireland of this village, was adjusting a target at which he and companions were about to shoot, Victor King, aged 14 years, who held a small rifle, accidentally discharged the gun and the Ireland boy was shot dead. Two Have Knife Wounds.

Moorhead.—Frank Grover, who was stabbed by W. N. Little, is alive, but whether or not he can live is a question. Little was arraigned, but the case was continued until Wednesday to await the result of Grover's wounds. William Whalen, a thresher, is in a serious condition as a result of a knife thrust ten inches long, said to have been inflicted by Jacob Kerner near Pettibone, N. D. It is stated that Kerner was drunk when he attacked Whalen. The latter's recovery is doubtful.

JAPANESE IDEA BEST

FLOWERS SHOULD NEVER BE CROWDED INTO BOWLS.

One Perfect Blossom More Beautiful Than a Bunch—How to Obtain Artistic Effects in House Decoration.

The most artistic effects with cut flowers are had by selecting the jar holding them with regard for the blossoms themselves and using only a few flowers at a time. The mistake made by a girl who is not in the habit of fixing flowers for the house, is to crowd the bowls and vases. The Japanese idea, which is fast gaining ground here, that one perfect flower by itself is more beautiful than a bunch of the same, may be demonstrated by any girl to her own satisfaction.

Invaluable in gaining artistic effects are those small iron rings which, dropped into a flat dish or bowl, serve as a support for the stem, so that each flower will stand without resting against the sides of the receptacle. These iron or bronze rings are to be had in all flower shops and almost wherever brass pots are sold. They are shaped in various forms, sometimes being turtles with punctured back, triangles, circles, crescents, etc. All are inexpensive.

It is a small turtle, and the tiniest copper bowl, upon which one girl relies for the finishing touch on the table in her own sitting room. The bowl is three inches high and about the same distance across the opening. It tapers slightly to the base, and is lined with transparent enamel. In this rests always a turtle about two inches long. Into his back is thrust the floral burden, beginning in the spring with jonquils. Three jonquils with a few sprays of their own foliage make a most charming effect. Later two irises are enough at a time, for they are of large size, and more would be confusing to the eye. Wild flowers of various kinds are used when they can be had, and if the stems are too small it is a simple matter to pack the hole with a little foliage crushed in. It is not unsightly and makes the stem firm. A small bunch of mignonette, thrust into one hole of the turtle, the turtle then being in a shallow green dish, suggests a little green fountain with a pool beneath.

Almost without exception garden flowers look better in china and metal receptacles than in cut glas. Nothing lovelier can be imagined than white and blue larkspur in a low copper bowl or a brass jar; in glass it does not begin to be as effective. The same is true of other out of door blooms. Brass and copper, especially the latter, when polished, add a most delicate note to the color scheme.

It is a mistake to mix flowers when arranging them. Generally speaking, they are infinitely lovelier if each kind is kept by itself. There are, however, some which are more effective in combination, as, for example, mignonette. The latter is nice with any flowers not having foliage, as it supplies the required green.

Female Labor Preferred.

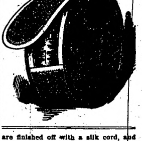
In the German textile industry the tendency is to use female in place of male labor.

CASE FOR THE HAIR BRUSHES

Any Material That Is Strong May Be Made Use Of for This Valuable Appurtenance.

This is a useful case for men's hair brushes, and it may be carried out in any fairly strong material. It must in a measure be specially made for the particular brushes it is destined to contain, as brushes of this kind vary in shape and size, and the case should fit them closely.

Two oval pieces of cardboard should be cut out just a trifle larger in size than the back of the brush, and smoothly covered with the material that has been selected. The brushes can then be placed together and in this way the width of the case determined. This portion of the case should be lined, and have an interlining of thin cardboard to stiffen it. The flap, which lifts up for the insertion of the brushes, is bound at the edge with narrow ribbon, and fastens with a button and buttonhole. The edges of the case are finished off with a silk cord, and initials or some pretty little floral design may be worked on either side. For ordinary use upon the dressing table or for traveling purposes, a case of this kind is always handy and helps to keep the brushes clean and free from dust.



Pomades and Hair Oils.

Some people have such dry hair that they are obliged to use pomades to prevent it from breaking off.

The use of liquid vaseline is highly recommended.

Inferior pomatums cause or hasten the loss of hair. Therefore, unless you can procure the very best from a well-known druggist, prepare them yourself.

The grease and the oils which are used, to be preserved from growing rancid, must go through a suitable process. Put in a brain-marie 200 grams of fat or marrow, with six grams of powdered benzoin and six grams of pulverized balm of tolu. Stir constantly with a wooden spatula. After two hours of hard boiling, strain through a bit of linen. Benzoic acid possesses the quality of preventing the fat to which it has been added from becoming rancid.

Bordered Chiffons.

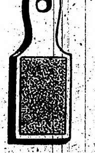
Bordered chiffons can be used for many things, but are especially good for attractive little blouses of simple line. A surplice arrangement with a short kimono sleeve is a design often chosen for such material.

Persian or flowered chiffons are made up without veiling and are trimmed with flat round collars of baby Irish or fine filet net.

TO SHARPEN THE PENCILS

Capital Little Contrivance That Will at All Times Save Much Time and Worry.

Anyone who is in the habit of using pencils frequently, knows how difficult it is to obtain a nice, fine point to the lead with a pen knife, to say nothing of the dirty state it generally leaves one's fingers in. The lead also often breaks in the process, considerably shortening the length of the life of the pencil.



We give, therefore, a sketch of a capital little contrivance on which the lead of a pencil may be sharpened to the finest possible point with the [illegible] be made in a few moments, with very little trouble, and will be found especially useful to art students and others.

It consists of a thin piece of wood three or four inches in length, cut square at one end and the other end is shaped to form a kind of handle. In this handle a circular hole is cut by which the sharpener may be hung up on a nail if desired.

On the square part a piece of fine sand paper is glued, and by rubbing the lead of the pencil on this paper the most perfect point may be obtained.

The sharpener from which our sketch was made was of bass wood of a quarter of an inch in thickness and four or five inches in length and two inches in width.

The sand paper will last a very long time, and when it has become a little worn, it will serve its purpose even better than when quite new, and it can, of course, be easily replaced when it becomes too worn.

Lace-Trimmed Hats.

One of the notes on millinery is the flat lace trimming on the largest brimmed hats of tagal or chip.

If you are fortunate enough to have laid by a handsome piece of broad lace—it only requires about half a yard—lay it flat over the round crown of your hat and fasten it down to the brim on one side with a broad buckle and on the other side by a large rosette of mixed flowers or tiny blossoms set about with a row of leaves.

Large hats have returned to their own again; the small round ones are not sufficiently becoming to the [illegible]

THE DULUTH HERALD

BEATS THE CENSUS THREE TO ONE

During the past ten years the population of Duluth increased 48 per cent., St. Paul 32 per cent., and Minneapolis 49 per cent. In the Same Period the Circulation of The Duluth Herald

INCREASED 150 PER CENT.

This marvelous expansion—so much greater than that of the surrounding territory—is due solely to the merits of The Herald.

The Herald has never used any kind of premium, contest, or price reduction to gain subscribers but prints each day the very best NEWSPAPER in the Northwest. Its editorial page is thoroughly independent and its news columns cover every feature of the world's daily history.

The latest report from the Canadian elections state that reciprocity failed to carry. After the keenest election in the history of Canada the conservatives won out.

Because his views regarding suppression of the liquor traffic among the Indians did not coincide with those of the officials of the federal bureau of Indian affairs, W. E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, chief special liquor officer of the bureau, has resigned.

There's a bit of talk which credits Andy Stephens with a desire to become a member of the state board of control. 'Tis said that he has his eye fixed on Ringdahl's place and is hoping to see that gentleman deposed. It would be a pity to exchange a Ringdahl for a Stephens, but politics does queer turns sometimes.—Northfield News.

Don't Wait

For your own welfare more than that of the teachers I want to urge those who intend to enroll in the schools this year to enveavor to do so at the earliest date possible. This does not pertain in any sense to the compulsory education law. Most people realize that it is only designed to reach the children whose parents do not appreciate or who neglect the welfare of their children.

But others who are seeking school for the good they get out of it, and not with the purpose of complying with a law, feel that they can do better by working now and perhaps catch up with the work through the winter months. I would impress upon these the fact that the basis for work in any subject is laid at the beginning of the year; and what those who stay away from school at the beginning lose, the others can not be expected to go over a second time. So plan as nearly as possible to take up the work at the beginning of the year, and avoid the well nigh impossible task of getting the last half of a subject after having lost the first. We are anxious to have as many as possible enroll.

I may add that sickness is really about the only legitimate excuse for absence, and by special effort we may lessen that. It is difficult to see any reasonable excuse for tardiness. This year we have an enrollment of 124. Let us try to make the average attendance 120 at least. It is to our mutual interest and to the special advantage of those who do not always see their own best interests. Visitors to school are welcome; and we shall consider it a sign of your interest in our (pupils' and teachers') endeavors.

A. J. BARSNESS.

A Famous Engineer

Some of the excuses made by the government engineers at St. Paul for not compelling the lumber companies to take their log jam out of Red Lake river are very amusing. One duck by name of Joice who is of course in the pay of the government, with perhaps a little on the side from logging companies, was sent up to investigate the conditions and only got as far as Thief River Falls, where he said he got a great deal of information (probably at the mill company's office) that the trouble was that Red lake had sunk three and one-half feet below its normal summer level, a condition that has not been known before for forty-two years.

Well, would not that report make a man that knows the true situation smile? We have heard that there were some pretty big liars in Thief River Falls, but the man that told that story deserves a place at the head of the class. Stand aside all you noted liars and allow him to go to the head. However, the facts are before the proper officials to take action to get a hole through that log jam, and until they have had time to act we shall refrain from publishing any more of the facts, but if those whose duty it is to open that jam show that they will not do their duty we shall place the facts before the people as they are, and will not call an old black kettle white.—Sunbeam.

Red Lake County Fair

The Red Lake county fair, held at Red Lake Falls Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, might with perfect propriety be termed a grand success. This was the first fair in that place and an immense amount of work was required to put the grounds in shape; but it was done. Fences, sheds, and stalls were built, and the grounds got into creditable shape. The exhibits of vegetables, grains, and grasses, and the women's and educational departments were housed in a large tent.

The attendance on Wednesday was said to be larger than the attendance on the big day of the Crookston fair. The farmers and others had shown their interest and every stall was filled with animals and every corner where an exhibit might be placed was doubly occupied. A curly cress, raised by Hans Wilson of this place and entered by Charles Nelson took first prize.

The ball game between St. Hilaire was won by the Terrebonne team with a score of 7 to 2. The St. Hilaire team had two players from Thief River Falls, while the Terrebonne team had the services of Garceau the pitcher, and Kelfenheim, one of the best all round players of the Red Lake Falls team.

In the running race on Wednesday the black horse owned by Victor Brink of this place got first place and a horse entered by Louis Sihff of Red Lake Falls took second. The same horses ran again Thursday, with the same result.

Otto Johnson's team, driven by Mrs. Henry Olson of this place, took second prize in the exhibition drive for ladies.

The Boss Kicker

The giraffe is the boss kicker of the universe, and his accuracy in kicking is marvelous. The explanation is that the eye of the giraffe is so placed that he can see equally as well behind as in front. In a kicking contest the much touted mule would come off about as well as the ordinary beers would in a, contest with golden grain belt beers, so perfect in purity and digestive value, that they make friends everywhere. Don't put off a trial. Get some now, Order of Alex Thompson, Crookston or of your dealer.

THE GRACEFUL ANTELOPE.

He Seems Born of Light and Nursed In the Lap of the Wind.

For me there have been no fairer days than when the antelope skimmed the plain with legs nebulous with speed on that low, gentle canter whose deceptive motion left the best aimed bullet far behind. For the antelope is the only large animal that is wholly spirituelle. Graceful as he may seem when spurning the ground and swinging high over rocks and brush, to rebound like a ball at the next touch of earth, there is still something earthly about the deer. But the antelope seems born of light and nursed in the lap of the wind. All his movements show that he was meant for the air rather than the earth. Though Nature made a slight change in giving him legs instead of wings, she made no mistake, and her work has always been the wonder and love of the hunter. When troubles arise the deer takes to the harbor of the hills, but the antelope steers for the open sea. The farther the plain sweeps wide and free the more this gay rover loves its safety, and a run that to the deer would mean death is to him only a "breather" that warms him up to the race. Whether illumining the horizon like a shooting star in the clear morning air of the great plain or looming high, like a stilted ghost in the mirage of glowing midday, he is the most charming of all things that run, and his passing has left a great void that nothing can fill. The few that are left, protected as they are, give no idea of the effect produced on a lover of the open by one of the great bands of the days that were, strung out in a film almost like vapor with distance and speed, and vanishing as if in air over the land's outlying verge.—T. S. Van Dyke in Recreation.

The Measure of a Woman's Wit.

There are three ways by which a woman's brain
Can well be measured. One is by the fit
Of boot or shoe. A size that gives her pain
Proves her deficient in the thing called wit.

A waist so girded that its span appears
A waspike structure shows her stupid quite.
But when her head must put on sundry tiers
To wear her hat—all sense has taken flight.

—L. S. Waterhouse in New York Life.

The Real Advantage.

John Bright used to tell how a barber who was cutting his hair once said to him: "You 'ave a large 'ead, sir. It is a good thing to 'ave a large 'ead, for a large 'ead means a large brain, and a large brain is the most useful thing a man can 'ave, as it nourishes the roots of the 'air."—Sacred Heart Review.

DREAM INSPIRATION.

Intellectual Achievements Born of Visions In Sleep.

It is well known, says H. Addington Bruce in Success Magazine, that dreams have stimulated men to remarkable intellectual achievements and have even supplied the material for these achievements. Thus Coleridge composed "Kubla Khan" in a dream. Tartini got his "Devil's Sonata" from a dream in which the devil appeared and challenged him to a musical competition. It was a dream that gave Voltaire the first canto of his "Henriade," and Dante's "Divina Commedia" is likewise said to have been inspired by a dream.

Many novelists on their own admission have obtained the plots for some of their best works from materials provided in dreams. A particularly impressive instance is that of Robert Louis Stevenson, whose "Chapter on Dreams" in his book "Across the Plains" should be read by all who would learn what dreams can do for a man intellectually. The solution of baffling mathematical problems, the ideas necessary to complete some invention, have been supplied by dreams. Occasionally the dreamer has been known to rise in his sleep and jot down the information thus acquired.

In such cases he usually forgets all about the helpful dream and on awaking is greatly surprised at finding the record he has made of it, which shows that—as with the visions so potently influencing health—it is possible for dreams to aid a man in an intellectual way without his being consciously aware of them.

Bird's Milk.

"I fed him with bird's milk." This curious expression was used by the old sultan of Turkey, while a prisoner on his way to Saloniki, with reference to his brother Mohammed, his predecessor on the throne. Abdul Hamid was lamenting his own fate and telling his captors how little he deserved it and how kind he had been to his brother. "I fed him with bird's milk," he said, as if that were the greatest kindness he could show. What is bird's milk? Not the Turkish equivalent of the milk of human kindness, but a European brand of condensed milk bearing on the can a picture of a bird on a nest.

His Conundrum.

"Mistah Walkah, kin yo' tell me de diff'unce 'tween a cold in de head an' a—a chicken coop wit' a hole in de rufe?"

"No, Sam; that's a hard one. What is the difference between a cold in the head and a chicken coop with a hole in the roof?"

"De one am a case o' influenzo, an' de udlah am a case o' out flew hens, suh."

LINCOLN'S HOUSE.

An Occasion When He Did Not Recognize It at First Sight.

"Mrs. Lincoln played a good joke on her husband when he was practicing law and journeyed about from court to court on horseback," says Major Bittinger. "Those trips often took several weeks at a time.

"On one of these trips Lincoln was gone for about four weeks. He returned late one night. Stopping his horse, he dismounted at the usual place. He turned to go into the house and then stopped. Although he was a man of temperance, he thought he must have been imbibing on the sly some time that day, for before him stood a building he had never seen before. He thought it over for a minute and then went across the street and knocked at a friend's door. They were in bed, and some one sang out:

"'Who is it?'

"'Abe Lincoln,' was the reply. 'I've been looking for my house. Can you tell me where it is? Guess I must have been lost. I thought it was just across the way. When I went away the building was one story high, and now it is two.'

"It was explained to him that during his absence Mrs. Lincoln had added another story. He laughed and went back to the strange house."

He used to tell the joke on himself many times, according to the major.—National Magazine.

AGREED WITH THE ASP.

The Frenchman Got Around the Law Against Hissing.

A gentleman who had been unceremoniously hustled out of a Paris play house because he hissed when the curtain fell on the second act brought an action for damages against the manager of the said house.

The court decided in favor of the hissing gentleman, adding that if a spectator is allowed to show his delight by indulging in applause his neighbor has also the right to show disapprobation in an audible fashion.

But the law in France was not always so tolerant. In the middle of the seventeenth century it was strictly forbidden to hiss in a playhouse, and in every theater there were a number of "gardes Francaises" with strict orders to arrest any person infringing the law.

But the French are not easily put down by silly regulations, and whenever they see an opportunity they attack the authorities with that fearful weapon ridicule. In this case such an opportunity came at the Comedie Francaise during the performance of "Cleopatra," a play by Marmontel.

It was a badly written, dull work, and the people were waiting for a chance to give vent to their opinion. At last the chance came. The management had ordered a mechanical asp for the great scene in the final act, when Cleopatra puts an end to her life.

The actress raised the asp, which started hissing, whereupon a spectator rose to his feet and cried: "The asp is quite right. We all share his opinion!" Roars of laughter greeted this joke, and as it was foreseen that a similar scene would take place every night the piece was withdrawn from the repertory.

Aristhiou.

In a small village in Switzerland is a comfortable old inn much frequented by English, and the menu generally includes one dish supposed to be specially British. Though the orthography is peculiar, the meaning is generally obvious—as, for example, "rost bif roti," "rumsteck," but "aristhiou de mouton a l'Anglais" was puzzling. The first word has a distinctly classical appearance, which suggested a Greek origin. But when the dish appeared the meaning flashed into the guests' minds. "Aristhiou" was the English chef's attempt to render phonetically the words [illegible]

Shopkeepers who have a running account with people who live beyond their means get a run for their money even if they don't get it.

Being able to buy everything you want, you are so liable not to want what you buy.

When a man gets his head swelled a brickbat poultice has been known to be help some.

There is no use in crying, and occasionally laughing gets you into difficulty.

Overdoing of some essentials is generally followed by the underdoing of others.

After all, it is the cheerful idiots who make it a habitable old world and one worth while.

An habitual knocker may not wear his hammer where it is visible to the naked eye, but it is always palpable to the sensitive nerve.

Every earnest promoter can always be counted on to be faithful to his own interests.

It is a curious circumstance that those people who have plenty of nerve are very seldom nervous.

There are some things that have the one drawback of being too comfortable to be really good.

It keeps most of us taxed to the full of our capacity to get an income, anyway.

MOORISH SOLDIERS.

Their Methods in Battle and Their System of Signals.

At fighting on horseback the Moors are adepts and extremely mobile. But they are incorrigibly lazy and seldom indulge in night attack. When they attack in force the horsemen usually give a lift to the foot soldiers who accompany them or allow them to run alongside and hold on to a stirrup iron. The mounted men then make a charge, wheel round and retire and make way for the footmen, who crawl along the ground, almost invisible, and who rise to the attack if they come within striking distance of the enemy. As a rule, the Riffians prefer to lure detached parties into an ambush or defile and thus inflict heavy loss upon them. The mounted men seldom dismount to fire, and their firing, being from the saddle, is very inaccurate. Should the advance of the white troops be slow or hesitating the Moors effect a bold combination between horsemen and footmen and generally succeed in inflicting heavy losses on their enemy.

The prime tactics of the Moors are to delay the advance of an enemy as much as possible by mounted rifle fire until they can discern its extent and direction and subsequently to try enveloping the advancing force. The tribes also indulge in sniping, but not to a very great extent, and they also fight individually. They do not neglect opportunities for stratagem and can effect some very clever ruses. They are also guilty of abusing the services of the white flag in action.

The Moorish intelligence system is an excellent one, and the tribes are seldom without information regarding the movements of an enemy. They have also an excellent system of signaling at night by means of small fires dotted about the hills and ravines, which are obscured and revealed in accordance with an ingenious code of signals known to themselves.—Chicago News.

CONTINUOUS SHOWS.

They Were Started by B. F. Keith In a Boston Store.

It was in the month of January, 1883, that Mr. B. F. Keith, who had been studying the show business with far-seeing eyes for many years, presented, in a store that he had leased in Boston, the first continuous show ever seen on any stage. He paid his performers $20 a week for a single turn and $40 for double and required them to give eight or nine turns a day. His "top liner" or chief attraction was a pound and a half baby. The doors of his playhouse were thrown open at noon, and from that time until half past 10 at night the performance went on without interruption.

Patrons were allowed to spend the entire day in the theater, and at first so many availed themselves of this opportunity to get a substantial filling of amusement at a small cost that Mr. Keith realized that he must either abandon the idea of a continuous entertainment or else invent some method by which the audience could be driven out of the building and place made for those outside who were waiting for admittance. Necessity is the mother of invention, especially when it is mated with sharp Yankee wit, and it was thus that what is known as "the chaser" came into the world.—James L. Ford in McClure's Magazine.

J. W. Parviance, Editor McNairy County Independent, Selmer, Tenn., says: "The instrument (Lombard Piano) fills our most sanguine expectations. It is not only a rare beauty in its outward finish, but the tone is round, full, rich and sweet. Your firm has proven to be prompt and reliable in its dealings with me."

J. Ernest Parson, Editor Press, Parkersburg, Pa., says: "I must say that the Lombard sent me is a beautiful instrument, and a credit to a standard firm. We are more than satisfied."

R. S. Knapp, President Federal Charter Co., Washington, D. How to Find Fault.

Find fault when you must find fault, in private; and some time after the offense, rather than at the time. The blamed are less inclined to resist when they are blamed without witnesses; both parties are calmer and the accused party is struck with the forbearance of the accuser, who has seen the fault and watched for a private and proper time for mentioning it.

Don't Expect Kindness.

There are six sorts of people at whose hands you need not expect much kindness. The narrow minded think of nobody but themselves, the lazy are too indifferent, the busy have not time to think, the rich disregard appeals for kindness, the poor have neither spirit nor ability, and the good natured fool is not capable of serving you.—Home Notes.

A NATURAL KITCHEN

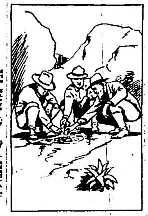
Eggs Cooked in the Hot Springs of Mexico.

Heated Waters Have Been Known for Their Medicinal and Curative Properties Since Country Was First Explored.

Candelaria, Mex.—One of the most remarkable groups of hot springs in the world is situated on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande near here. There are scores of these bubbling streams of water flowing from the rock formation and into a gulch that empties into the Rio Grande. The waters of these springs have been known for their medicinal and curative properties from the time of the first exploration and settlement of Mexico. Thousands of afflicted people have made pilgrimages to this remote region and sought the benefits of the thermal springs. Notwithstanding the fact that they are situated in an almost inaccessible locality and can only be reached by an overland journey of more than 50 miles from the nearest railroad point there is never a time that health seekers may not be found camping at the place.

There are no accommodations at the springs for visitors and many are the primitive and crude devices that are rigged up to obtain the benefit of the waters. Frequently visitors construct crude adobe rooms over one of the springs and use them for sweat boxes. The bath tubs usually consist of digging a hole in the ground and letting it fill with the hot water, the health seeker taking his outdoor bath in that water perhaps a canvass for a canopy to keep out the blazing sun. There is not such a thing as a hotel or eating house within many miles of the place. The visitors must bring their own supplies and live next to nature during their stay, whether it be brief or greatly prolonged.

The waters of these springs are said to be good for many chronic ills. That a great number of cures that are little short of marvelous have taken place as a result of drinking and bathing in them is a matter of common knowledge to the people of the border section.



Cooking in Nature's Kitchen.

One of the phenomena of the group of springs is that water having a temperature as high as 188 degrees may be flowing from a crevice in the rock at one point, and within two or three feet of it another stream of water of a temperature of less than 100 degrees. Most of the water, however, is very hot, that of the different springs ranging in temperature from 110 to 188 degrees Fahrenheit. This hot water, where it empties into small pools, is used for cooking purposes by the campers almost to the exclusion of fire. Eggs are cooked in six to eight minutes, and by placing beans in the springs over night they are thoroughly done by morning. One of the interesting and picturesque sights of the place is the cooking operations of the campers. Meat is also cooked in this manner.

In the days when the Comanche and other tribes of Indians roamed through West Texas these hot springs were used by them as nature's sanitarium for the sick members of the different tribes. The older inhabitants of this region well remember that in the earlier days there was never a time that a group of Indian tepees were not located at the springs.

HE DID NOT COMMIT MURDER

After Seventeen Years of Penal Servitude, a French Peasant Is Awarded $6,000.

Paris.—The sum of $6,000 has been awarded by the Cher assize court as compensation for 17 years' penal servitude undergone by a peasant named Charles Michaud, who received a life sentence for a murder he did not commit.

A rich old peasant farmer was murdered and Michaud, a neighbor, was convicted, chiefly on the evidence of a necktie which had belonged to the dead man and of some stains on his clothes supposed to be blood. Michaud protested his innocence throughout and declared he knew nothing about the tie and that the stains were caused by cider. He was convicted and sent to French Guiana for life.

While he was there a fellow convict confessed or rather boasted that he had committed the murder. This man later succeeded in escaping from the penal settlement, but newspapers having taken up the case and found confirmation of his story the court of cassation decided that his confession was the necessary new fact which would allow it to set aside the condemnation and order a new trial.

Michaud, who was twenty-nine when convicted, is now forty-six but looks like a broken down old man. His wife, always convinced of his innocence, was present at the second trial. His counsel asked for $2,000 damages, but the court awarded $6,000 and the placarding of the judgment throughout the district.

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Elwood, Ind.—"Your remedies have cured me and I have only taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was sick three months and could not walk. I suffered all the time. The doctors said I could not get well without an operation, for I could hardly stand the pains in my sides, especially my right one, and down my right leg. I began to feel better when I had taken only one bottle of Compound, but kept on as I was afraid to stop too soon."—Mrs. SADIE MULLEN, 2728 N. B. St., Elwood, Ind.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

One Cure for Sarcasm.

Bunsen always was sarcastic.

One evening last week when he got home his wife had a new hat to show him. It was some hat. Anybody could have seen that it was the final phrase in female headgear.

But Bunsen started to make remarks. He said it looked as if it had been trimmed by a cross-eyed milliner on an empty stomach. And he made a lot of other disparaging remarks.

Mrs. Bunsen was almost in tears. Bunsen had to go into the other room to have a quiet laugh at her expense.

The next day he had forgotten all about the hat.

The day after that he was reminded of it. Mrs. Bunsen handed him a bill for retrimming that hat—$18.34 it came to.

Bunsen paid it without a murmur, and said the revised edition of the hat was just exactly right. He is not criticizing hats any more.

Left Him Far Behind.

Childish standards of greatness are interesting—perhaps because they are at once so like yet so unlike the standards of grown folk. Many an adult, for instance, has been proud with no more reasonable basis than that which little Johnnie displayed in attempting to "top" the boasting of a juvenile comrade.

"I've got a real railroad train, with an engine that goes, an' a real, live pony, an' a really, truly, gun, an—"

"That's nothing," interrupted the lad's disgusted listener. "Once I knew a boy who sat up until 11 o'clock twice in one week!"

A HIT

What She Gained by Trying Again.

A failure at first makes us esteem final success.

A family in Minnesota that now enjoys Postum would never have known how good it is if the mother had been discouraged by the failure of her first attempt to prepare it. Her son tells the story:

"We had never used Postum till last spring when father brought home a package one evening just to try it. We had heard from our neighbors, and in fact every one who used it, how well they liked it.

"Well, the next morning Mother brewed it about five minutes, just as she had been in the habit of doing with coffee without paying special attention to the directions printed on the package. It looked weak and didn't have a very promising color, but nevertheless father raised his cup with an air of exceptancy. It certainly did give him a great surprise, but I'm afraid it wasn't a very pleasant one, for he put down his cup with a look of disgust.

Mother wasn't discouraged though, and next morning gave it another trial, letting it stand on the stove till boiling began and then letting it boil for fifteen or twenty minutes, and this time we were all so pleased with it that we have used it ever since.

"Father was a confirmed dyspeptic and a cup of coffee was to him like poison. So he never drinks it any more, but drinks Postum regularly. He isn't troubled with dyspepsia now and is actually growing fat, and I'm sure Postum is the cause of it. All the children are allowed to drink it and they are perfect pictures of health." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Important Happenings of the Week Briefly Told.

Red Wing. — Three boys escaped from the Red Wing Training School last week and the police of the Twin Cities have been notified to be on the lookout for them.

Minneapolis. — F. A. Stephens, former scoutmaster of St. Mark's church troop of Boy Scouts, has been sentenced by Judge Booth to an indeterminate term in the state prison for forgery.

Truman.—A horse and buggy were stolen from the C. N. Boynton farm three miles west of here. The thief abandoned the rig near Welcome and the horse ran into a fence and was severely injured. The thief escaped.

Minneapolis.—At a meeting of the local Shriners' Temple, it was decided to take no action this year toward the construction of a new Masonic Temple for Minneapolis. Committees have been appointed to select a site should a new building be agreed upon by the Masonic bodies.

Windom.—This vicinity was visited by one of the worst rain and wind storms ever experienced in this section. The wind did a good deal of damage and totally destroyed the new grandstand on the county fair grounds and did minor damage to smaller buildings. The loss to the fair association is estimated at $3,000.

St. Paul.—State Treasurer Walter J. Smith sent notices to all state banks having state funds on deposit, directing them to turn over all state money by Oct. 25. The October disbursements will be heavy, being estimated at $2,500,000, of which $1,250,000 will go out in the October school apportionment. There is now in banks to the credit of state funds $2,150,799.45.

Spooner.—Peter Dawson, an employe of the Rainy River Lumber Company at Rainy River, Ont., was killed last week. His foot was caught by a dog on a slasher chain. His body was pulled downward as far as the waist. The chain mutilated the flesh and bones in a terrible manner. He was taken to the Spooner hospital where he died fifteen minutes later. Dawson came from Duluth. He has a family there.

Minneapolis. — The young farmhand known as "Jim," who murdered Mrs. Amelia Bolton and her cousin, Edward Rhoades, at their home near Anoka, is still at large, and the police have no clues. A probable motive for the crime has been developed by letters found by the police which lead to the conclusion that the murderer had made improper advances to Mrs. Bolton and committed the murder either to aid in accomplishing his purpose or to prevent exposure.

Duluth. — The traffic commission of the Duluth Commercial club is preparing a complaint to be filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, attacking the rate of 18 cents per 100 pounds of flour from Duluth to New York and asking that a reduction be made to 16½ cents, thus maintaining the differential of 5 cents which has heretofore existed under the Minneapolis rate. The action is the result of the recent publication of a rate of 21½ cents from Minneapolis to the East.

Rochester.—By securing B. A. West, of Minneapolis, as instructor in the commercial department of the new high school, it is expected the attendance will reach the 300 mark. At present there are 260 students enrolled, an increase of 50 since last year. The completion of the new $125,000 high school affords the scholars many advantages, including domestic science, agriculture, manual training and commercial work. The building is equipped with a large gymnasium, shower baths and large, modern recitation departments. The dedicatory exercises will be held soon. In all 1,192 students are enrolled in the Rochester schools.

Minneapolis.—In an estimate presented to the board of state fair managers, Secretary J. C. Simpson stated that there would be a deficit of between $35,000 and $40,000 as a result of the 1911 fair. Final accounting of the total expenses and receipts has not yet been made, but Mr. Simpson's figures are considered a good estimate of the situation the board will have to face. Mr. Simpson also estimates that $40,000 will be needed by the society to pay expenses, maintain its property, and make preparations for next year's fair.

Winona.—Rev. O. H. Loomis, pastor of the Christian church in this city, has been advised that the gift from the Free Will Baptist denomination of Minnesota of Parker College at Winnebago has been accepted by the Christian church. Mr. Loomis has been asked to go to Winnebago September 19, to assist in the formalities of taking over Parker college. The offer of the college from the Free Will Baptists was made when the Christian church was in session at Austin a few months ago. Parker college has fifteen acres of campus and buildings worth $25,000. It has an endowment of $70,000 already earning.

Sleepy Eye.—Rev. H. J. Hjetland has resigned as pastor of the Congregational church and will close his work here Oct. 1. On Oct. 21 he will start on a trip around the world, through the Mediterranean and Suez canal to India, Siam, China, Japan, East Indies and Hawaii and home.

Austin.—William E. Kundy, a pioneer and veteran of the First Minnesota volunteers, is paralyzed from his shoulders to his feet as a result of a fall from a ledge while he was returning from a fishing trip on the Rum river. He fell a distance of six feet and struck on his head. He cannot live.

Anoka.—The board of education has added another instructor, the second this year, to its high school faculty, which now numbers twelve. This was made necessary by the enrollment, which is by far the largest in the history of the school. Miss Laura Matson of Albert Lea will fill the new position.

Pipestone.—Officials are examining Lakes Bisseton and George, near Fairmont, to ascertain what sort of poison is in the water. Many cattle and hogs have died in pastures near the lakes, and it is believed the water poisoned them.

PHYSICIAN SAID ECZEMA CAME FROM TEETHING

"When my little girl was about eight months old, she was taken with a very irritating breaking out, which came on her face, neck and back. When she first came down with it, it came in little watery-like festers under her eyes, and on her chin, then after a few days it would dry down in scaly, white scabs. In the daytime she was quite worrysome and would dig and scratch her face nearly all the time.

"I consulted our physician and found she was suffering from eczema, which he said came from her teething. I used the ointment he gave me and without any relief at all. Then I wrote for a book on Cuticura, and purchased some Cuticura Soap and Ointment at the drug store. I did as I found directions in the Cuticura Booklet, and when she was one year old, she was entirely cured. Now she is three years and four months, and she has never been troubled with eczema since she was cured by the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. (Signed) Mrs. Freeman Craver, 311 Lewis St., Syracuse, N. Y., May 6, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 2 K, Boston.

Practical Illustration.

To shorten a long Sunday afternoon for Fred, aged eight, his mother told him that he might illustrate the twenty-third Psalm in any way he chose. Quiet reigned for a time, as Fred, busy with pencil and pad, drew "shepherd" and "green pasture," "rod and staff." Then a silence ensued, followed by a noisy clatter which brought his mother to the room. Fred was busily arranging a train of cars, a toy gun, marbles, etc., on the table.

"What are you doing, Fred?"

"Why," he answered, "these are the presents of my enemies."

Order of Independents.

Larry O'Neil has no love for discipline save as he administered it. When he decided to "jine the p'rade," he breathed defiance with every order issued by the military leader.

"Here, you! Look out for yer feet!" muttered the man next him. "Keep shtep, can't you?"

"Get along wid yer shteps," said Larry, turning on him. "I've a shtep o' me own, an' I'll take it or lave the p'rade to get on widout me."—Youth's Companion.

Diary of a Fly-Killer.

Monday—My attention was called last night to a statement that house flies are bearers of disease and should be destroyed as soon as possible. I began my crusade against them this morning. It was a little discouraging, because there was only one fly in the house and it was quite agile. It escaped me. I broke two vases and a photograph frame.

Tuesday—I nearly killed three flies this afternoon; but the lamp got in the way. It was a $7 lamp.

Wednesday—I saw a fly on the outside of the fly screen and raised the screen so I could hit it. Seventeen flies flew in. I missed it.

Thursday—There was a sluggish looking fly on the window with closed wings. I stole toward it cautiously, but it flew up just as I let the blow fall. Then I knew it wasn't a fly. It was a wasp. My nose began to swell at once.

Friday—My nose is a sight. Drat the flies.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

PACT IS DEFEATED

BORDEN'S TRIUMPH OVER SIR WILFRID LAURIER IS COMPLETE.

BORDEN WILL BE PREMIER

Seven Members of the Liberal Cabinet Are Defeated, Laurier Will Resign at the Opening of Parliament.

Montreal.—The Laurier government and reciprocity suffered an overwhelming defeat in the Canadian elections. By a veritable landslide the Liberal majority of 43 was swept away, and the Conservative party secured one of the heaviest majorities, upwards of fifty, that any Canadian party ever has had. Seven cabinet ministers who had served with Premier Laurier were among the defeated candidates.

The Liberals lost ground practically in every province of the Dominion. Where they won, their majorities were small. Where the Conservatives won, their majorities were tremendous. Ontario, the leading province of Canada, declared almost unanimously against the administration and reciprocity.

Robert L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party, shortly will become the prime minister of Canada. He will be supported in parliament by a working majority of members far more than ample for his purposes.

Past Not to Be Introduced.

The government defeat means that the Fielding-Knox reciprocity agreement, ratified by the American congress in extra session, will not be introduced when the twelfth parliament assembles next month, and that a revised basis of trade with the United States, looking to closer commercial relations, will not be possible in the immediate future. The Conservatives are committed to a policy of trade expansion within the empire and a closed door against the United States.

Although re-elected in two constituencies in Quebec, the defeat of the Liberal party also means the retirement from public life of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who for nearly two decades has directed the destinies of the Dominion. Several times during the better campaign the venerable premier said that defeat of his party at the polls meant the end of his career; that he never would consent to lead a minority in opposition to a Conservative government.

Landslide Is Unexpected.

The landslide was not expected by either side. The Liberals were confident that they would be returned by the people with an increased majority, for they believed that reciprocity would be most acceptable to the Canadian electors. While the Conservatives claimed that they would have a majority, they did not expect that it would be so large or that the general verdict of the country would be given so decisively against the government.

Makers of Pact Defeated.

Minister of Finance Fielding and Minister of Customs Patterson, who made the reciprocity bargain with the United States, failed to win their elections. Sir Frederick Borden, minister of militia; Mac Kenzie King, minister of labor; Sidney Fisher, minister of agriculture; George P. Graham, minister of railways, and William Templeman, minister of inland revenue, also went down to defeat.

The ministers who survive the landslide are William Pugsley, of New Brunswick, minister of public works; Charles Murphy of Ontario, secretary of state; Frank Oliver of Alberta, minister of the interior; Premier Laurier, Rudolphe Lemieux, minister of marine and fisheries, and Dr. H. S. Beland, postmaster general in the province of Quebec.

Laurier Expected to Resign.

Ottawa.—The result was a complete surprise to both parties in Canada's capital. The Liberals expected a victory, the Conservatives did not hope for the landslide. It is expected that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the premier will tender to Governor General Earl Grey his resignation within the next two weeks.

STILL JUMPING ON WILSON.

Presbyterians Denounce Him for Accepting Chairmanship.

Mason City, Iowa, Sept. :—James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, was denounced by members of the Presbyterian synod, his own pastor, Rev. J. N. Currens of Traer, supporting the resolutions condemning the cabinet member for accepting the honorary chairmanship of the National Brewers' association. For nearly an hour the business of the synod was suspended while members indulged in criticsm of the secretary.

Bemidji.—Bemidji no longer has a militia company. Captain Charles Ehlers from the adjutant general's office has spent two days in Bemidji packing up Company K's equipment and has shipped it back to the capitol. Since Adam Otto, captain of the company, resigned as assistant postmaster and took up his work as postoffice inspector, which work carried him out of Bemidji, the company has not had a meeting.

Brainerd.—J. W. Lewis and T. W. Todd, prominent laymen of Minneapolis, occupied pulpits in Brainerd churches and spoke at a mass meeting in the afternoon explaining the new movement among the Protestant churches of the country called "the men and religion movement." Pipestone.—An automobile party, on its way from Royal, Iowa, to Pipestone, met with a bad accident on a bridge between Lester, Iowa, and Hills, Minn. The party was composed of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chesley of Royal and Miss Mamie Heffron and Burt Frank of Pipestone. While traveling at a good rate of speed over a small bridge the machine turned a somersault, throwing out all of the occupants and making them unconscious. None was badly injured except Mr. Chesley, who received injuries about the head and body. The accident was caused by the fact that there was a drop of two feet on the approach of the bridge and the car was run across the bridge at such speed as to make it impossible to stop when it was seen by the driver that the approach was in poor repair.

Stillwater.—H. A. Fuller, a farmer near Lake Elmo, pleaded guilty in the municipal court to a charge of illegal fishing last June. The county attorney stated that he understood it was a case of spite and asked leniency. The lowest fine of $10 with costs was imposed and paid.

Faribault.—At a meeting of the city commissioners the matter of the safety of public buildings was brought up by Mayor Blodgett. The commissioners authorized the mayor to appoint an inspector whose duty it will be to make a thorough investigation and report to the city officials [illegible]

N-W STOCKS DROP

EXTREMELY ERRATIC SESSION IN WALL STREET FOLLOWS THE STEEL STATEMNT.

MARKET HAS WILD TURN

Hill Issues Fluctuate and Close at Losses of Several Points—Immense Quantities of Steel Are Thrown on 'Change.

New York, N. Y. — In one of the most wildly erratic and excited sessions on the stock exchange that Wall Street has ever seen, aside from times of panic, most of the securities of northwestern roads fluctuated widely with other active issues listed on 'change. The statement issued by the United States Steel corporation denying that the combine intended dissolving or disintegrating was the pivot around which the market moved.

The first transaction in United States Steel was 38,000 shares, the largest block within recent years with the exception of a 45,000-share block on last Friday. The price touched 62, a gain of 5⅛; the preferred rose 5¾; Lehigh Valley, 6; Union Pacific, 3¾; and other favorite speculative issues from 2 to 4 points. Never before had such quantities of Steel stock been dealt in. The total for the first 15 minutes was more than 190,000 shares and for half an hour 275,000.

Northern Pacific opened at 116½, in comparison with 114 at close on Tuesday. This proved to be the high point for that issue for the day. In the general slump that followed, this stock was covered down to 111½, a loss of 5 points a share, within a short time. The close was only half a point better, or at a net loss of two points for the day. Total transactions in Northern Pacific were 15,700 shares.

G. N. Less Erratic.

Great Northern preferred was a little less erratic, as it has been for some weeks. Opening at 123¾, it advanced to 124¼, which represented a gross gain of 2½ points over the previous night's final price. The general break carried it back to 120, while the final rally restored only ¾ of a point of the loss. Final quotations showed a net loss for the day of 1¾. Transactions were 9,800 shares.

Great Northern ore certificates were dealt in to the extent of 1,500 shares. After opening at 45¾, there was a recession to 43¾, from which there was no recovery.

St. Paul common was under heavy pressure. The initial quotation—110½—was only ¾ above the close of the day before and later the stock sold down easily to 106 and rallied only ⅛ from that low level. The total sales were 55,600 shares.

The market was in a state of complete confusion throughout the day. The range of prices in some cases exceeded six points.

A peculiar feature of the day's trading was that it resulted in the utter rout of both the bull and the bear factions. At the opening there was a stampede of bears to cover their contracts, which they were compelled to do at heavy losses. In the afternoon, the bears obtained control of the market and prices melted away. At the close of the turbulent session the bears retired victorious from the field of battle.

After the first wild rush to buy stocks it became apparent that heavy selling was again in progress. The market wavered and broke. All through the afternoon it was attacked relentlessly. The gains of 3 to 5 points of the early trading were lost and almost all of the active stocks closed with net losses.

The New York stock exchange has listed $14,601,000 first and refunding mortgage 4¼ per cent bonds, series H of 1961, of the Great Northern Railway Company, and $1,987,000 registered bonds of various numbers and denominations. The stock list committee is further empowered to add $3,952,000 additional of these bonds, on official notice of issuance in exchange for temporary registered bonds, making a total amount authorized to be listed of $20,000,000.

The stock exchange has also listed, as of Oct. 16, 1911, $2,187,400 additional preferred and $4,374,800 common stock of Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railroad Company on official notice of issuance and payment in full. This will make the total listed $12,603,400 preferred and $25,206,800. The total amount authorized is $42,000,000, of which $14,000,000 is preferred and $28,000,000 common.

Fergus Falls.—The troubles of the saloonkeepers of this city are not yet ended. A week ago the city council voted to return to them the unearned portion of their license money, which was due them when they were closed by the city going dry in the spring of last year. Then Mayor Anderson vetoed the ordinance in so far as it related to the claims that had been assigned to the breweries, and today five taxpayers filed a written protest with the city attorney against the payment of the balance of the claims.

Under the city charter, when a claim is protested by five taxpayers, the city attorney must appeal to the district court to test its legality. Ten days must elapse between the allowance of a bill and its payment, and the saloonkeepers had expected to secure their money tomorrow.

Last week the council had an ordinance before it to permit the saloons to remain open until 11 o'clock instead of closing at 10 as they are now required to do. The ordinance was defeated by a vote of 4 to 4. Another ordinance permitting them to restore the screens on their windows was defeated by a vote of 5 to 3. A third ordinance to punish minors who enter saloons was adopted.

AGED MEN ATTEND FAIR

Rice County Show Attracts Hundred-Year-Old Spectator.

Northfield—Officials of the Rice county fair, believe that one attendance record for the whole state was broken when Joseph Stowe, who lives on a farm near Dundas, came in to see the exhibits. Mr. Stowe was born on April 14, 1811, and is more than 100 years old. Another man 91 years' old, another 90, five men more than 81 years old and one woman whose age is 85 attended the fair.

This information was obtained by a firm of furniture dealers, who offered a cane as a prize to the oldest person attending the fair.

The following is a list of the names entered: William Jackson, 91 years old, born September 28, 1820; Lamber Watt, 90 years old, born December 2, 1820; Lot Huestis, 82 years old, born August 3, 1829; J. C. Cooper, 81 years old; born January 24, 1830; Henry Potter, 84 years old born Mar. 8, 1827; E. T. Archibald, 84 years old, born June 14, 1827; A. D. Holt, 83 years old, born August 23, 1828; Martha Wheaton, 85 years old, born August 19, 1826.

Mr. Stowe, the winner, was born in Halifax, Vt. He has lived in Minnesota more than half of his life. He is now living with a son, John Stowe on a farm near Dundas.

FAIR WEEK AT PLAINVIEW.

Wabasha County Has a Fine Exhibit —Hammond Speaks.

Plainview.— The twelfth Wabasha county fair was held last week. The livestock and agricultural exhibits are the largest known, as the premiums have been greatly added to this year. The list of free attractions and entertainments is the largest and best ever given here. The Plainview and Elgin bands furnished the music, Congressman Hammond delivered an address on Friday. The weather was ideal.

The seeds were furnished by the league and the children did the planting and caring for the flowers. The prize winners were Camilla Bakken, Blanche Miller, Mabel Hanson, [illegible] and Robbie Peterson.

SHOOT UP THE TOWN

Willow River Man Wounds Marshal, Mail Carrier and Father.

Willow River.—Ernest Eden, who has terrorized this village since his return from Dakota shot and probably fatally injured Marshal L. S. Mottle. He also shot Mail Carrier Vernon Pembleton through the left arm. He then went home and in a struggle for the possession of the revolver shot his father through the arm. Eden then escaped into the woods. He is still at large.

HUNTER KILLS FARMER

Newry, Minn., Man Shot by Neighbor Accidently When They Meet.

Austin.—Frank Greegan, a farmer living at Newry, west of here was instantly killed by the accidental discharge of both barrels of a shotgun belonging to a hunter who happened, to run upon Greegan and a neighbor, who with their children, were picking walnuts. The hunting party, three in number, were also neighbors.

NEW MINING COMPANY.

Iron Valley Co., at Brainerd, Capitalized at $100,000.

Brainerd.—The Iron Valley Mining company incorporated by Attorney W. W. Barron, Surveyor L. Knudsen and Dr. R. A. Beise, all of Brainerd, has been capitalized at $100,000. The company has an option on the northeast quarter of section 10, town 43, range 32, about one mile southwest of Lenox near the Northern Pacific tracks.

SHOT BOY IN MELON PATCH.

Mankato Ex-Patrolman Pleads Guilty To Assault.

Mankato.—William K. Young, former patrolman, who a week ago shot the son of Policeman George Simmonds while the latter was in his melon patch near the city, putting nearly a hundred bird shot into his body, pleaded guilty to assault in the third degree in the municipal court, but sentence was deferred until September 30.

Boys Admits Forging Checks.

Canby.—Folly Karp is accused of having passed bogus checks. It is said he passed one on the First National bank of Canby for $10 and went to Marshall to attend a circus. The check purporting to be signed by Chris Rock, the boy's stepfather, was pronounced a forgery. The boy is said to have passed similar checks at Marshall and Springfield. He was caught at Gary, S. D., where he cashed a check. The boy admitted forging Mr. Rock's name to four checks and had several made out. He will be placed in a reform school.

May Use Oil For Power.

Thief River Falls.—This city recently voted $40,000 bonds for an auxiliary steam plant to aid the city electric plant. Committees sent to investigate steam and oil plants reported in favor of steam. It is felt that possibly oil will give satisfactory results so all bids for erection of the plant have been laid aside.

Low water in Red Lake river causes erection of an auxiliary plant. Many believe the great drainage ditches are drying the north country. Water is becoming scarce in parts of Northern Minnesota.

Rich Lumberman To Marry.

Los Angeles, Cal. — A romance that had its beginning on an automobile ride from the Hotel Virginia at Long Branch, will culminate next month in a wedding in that city, when Mrs. Clara Hood Royce, a widow, becomes the bride of H. C. Akeley, a millionaire lumberman of Minneapolis. While Mrs. Royce was reticent about discussing the plans for the marriage, she admitted that the date now set is Oct. 31, and that the couple will spend their honeymoon in south[illegible]

The annual convention of the Red River Valley Dairymen's association will be held in Crookston Nov. 7 and 8.

The state of California has done some very bold, progressive, and intelligent things in the last few years. In making Louis R Glavis secretary of her new conservation commission California indicates to the world where she stands, but if it doesn't look sharp it will find itself on Mr. Ballinger's black list.—Cass Lake Times.

Some time ago Chicago selected a committee of representative men and women to probe the vice of the city, with a view to curing it so far as possible. The committee made a report, which has been published, describing conditions as it found them. The postoffice department has barred that report from the mails as obscene, This, surely, is about the limit of stupid prudery.—Duluth Herald.

The bill limiting the power of the supreme court, introduced by Hon. Johathan Bourne, jr., of Oregon, is a good one and should become a law. By its provisions all federal or state laws and the state constitutions must be construed literally as the words are commonly understood in every day use unless the supreme court by unanimous decision of all its members qualified to sit in the cause, shall decide that such literal interpretation is not the true expession of the legislative intention and meaning in the language in controversy.

Judge McPherson of Iowa rendered a court decision that the railway commission of Iowa had full authority to reduce express rates fifteen per cent. How different from the recent decision of Judge Sanborn in Minnesota, who upheld the railroads in their contention for a return to the higher rates in effect before the action of the state in reducing them. This lends further force to the Duluth Herald's query why Minnesota of all the states was selected as the one state in which the mandate of the people should be overruled in the interest of the railroads.

A friend in another state asks us what we think of the chances of Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey for the presidency, in Minnesota. Our opinion may be as worthless as the idle surmises of the truckling politician, but we do not hesitate to assert that if Taft is nominated by the republican machine and Wilson is the nominee of the democrats the latter will carry Minnesota by a hundred thousand majority. Taft may have friends in our state who will support him by their votes but there is not enough of them to cast much of a shadow. The farmers and the consumers will support Wilson because they believe in him.—Cass Lake Times.

For the Public Good

One hears a good deal about the power of the press, but the fact is that newspaper has very much real power over men or events in these days unless it is known to be standing sanely and steadfastly for the welfare of the whole community and nation. The day of the party organ is past. Sensational papers appealing to popular passions can not move thoughtful men—the men who make history. The only kind of newspaper that really has tremendous power in these days is the independent, reliable, disinterested journal of wide circulation, whose columns are known to stand always for the general good—for public honesty and a square deal, whatever happens. An excellent example of this sort of journalism is The Chicago Record Herald. It has the enormous circulation that deservedly goes with the printing of all the news, but its power lies in its wise, conservative, independent editorial policy, which is shaped with one sole end in view—the public good. Its news and critical columns show the same spirit. It is an ideal paper for the home.

Rural School Notes

The fall of the year is now with us. This brings us to think of the precautions to be taken for the season coming. Let me remind school officers to consider and provide for the necessities of their respective districts, so as to insure in time a successful school year. These necessities may be few or many, small or great, but they should be considered in time so as to add to the efficiency of school when once begun.

Will the school clerks kindly report at your earliest convenience the name of teacher employed and the grade of certificate held by her. If teacher is not employed will you likewise let this office know. The superintendent wishes to have everything arranged before schools begin so as not to interfere with the work of visitation. The superintendent will be found at his office on Saturday after Oct. 1.

I would like to hear from those school children who intend to enter the county industrial contest. State your success in raising the corn and in growing garden vegetables, and number of entries to be made.

Will teachers also inform this office as to what progress is made in domestic science work in their schools. This information is needed to determine if a contest is to be held.

Text books are loaned to pupils free of charge or sold at cost. It is difficult to arrive at the average cost per pupil. However, 20 cents per pupil will be a fair average,

Thief River Falls has built the only brick school house during the year. Its cost is $45,000. Of the rural districts district No. 55 in Silverton has built a frame structure costing $800, and district No. 57 at Reiner, a structure costing $1,300. School district No. 56 at Erie has had the misfortune of having the material for a house burned. This is a hard blow for this young and progressive district. Not daunted by adverse circumstances the district is building a modern structure that will be ready for occupancy this fall.

Pennington county has sixty-seven organized school districts. Of these districts Nos. 70 and 219 are joint districts with Marshall county, and districts Nos. 58, 33, 148, 133, 227, 108, 43, 124, and 17 are joint with Red Lake county.

The unorganized school territory is spread over parts of North, Clover Leaf, Goodridge, Kratka, Reiner, Star, Hickory, Deer Park, and Mayfield. The county board of education is sustaining three schools on this sparsely settled territory—namely: In Hickory, Clover Leaf, and Kratka.

There are fifty-seven school houses within the limits of the county. The estimated value of these, with sites, is $125.311. Of this sum $105,000 falls to the lot of Thief River Falls, $2,500 to St. Hilaire, and $17,811 to the rural districts.

Twenty-two districts will qualify for state aid this year as against fourteen for last year. Fourteen of these schools will have eight months of school and eight will have seven months.

Of the 2,009 volumes in the 28 school libraries in the county, 727 volumes were bought last year. We hope to see these libraries increase in number in the future, as they form one of the strongest and most useful adjuncts to the school work. Every school, if need be, should have a library.

The number of school visits since the assumption of the active school work of the office Jan. 1, 1910, is forty.

This concludes the first report for the Pennington county schools. The hope is entertained that the schools will advance materially both in number, financial betterment, and efficiency of educational attainments in the ensuing year. We need the cooperation of school officers, the enthusiasm and energetic work of the teacher, and the good will and united action of our school patrons to effect this progress. May the good work progress to the best interests of all, but especially to our dear school public.

Respectfully submitted,
[illegible] A. MOSTUE.

Automobilists' Sore Throat

Scientific physicians assert that automobilists' sore throat is a new thing, caused by the dust along the roads. It is often mistaken for a cold, but is simply irritation, caused by the germs in the dust. Therefore in riding never fail to take along something to wash the dust from the throat so it cannot irritate. There is nothing so valuable for this purpose as golden grain belt beers, germless, pure, healthful, and tonic in their effect. Try a few bottles the next trip. They make friends everywhere. Canada on the Back Track

The result of the Canadian election goes a great deal deeper than the mere defeat of a wholesome if timid attempt at freeing trade over the border line from some of the absurd tariff restrictions that now hamper it.

By rejecting the liberal government and landing the conservatives in power Canada has, apparently, turned itself bag and baggage over to the very kind of tyranny that the United States is now struggling to free itself from—the tyranny of government by and for special privilege.

Canada was, therefore, at the parting of the ways in a deeper sense than President Taft realized when he uttered the phrase that was distorted by the conservatives into a telling campaign slogan.

The day before election the Indianapolis News made this striking comment on the situation: "Canadian manufacturers and special interests have delivered their mandate to the people of Canada on the eve of election. They are commanded to vote against reciprocity under penalty of the factories and railroads being shut down for good. The act of the E. B. Eddy company at Ottawa yesterday in closing its factory and marching its men out to hear an anti-reciprocity orator recalls the feudal ages, and the notices posted that if reciprocity carries there will be no more work hark back to the dark days of American politics. Thus far the issue has been reciprocity. By marching its employes out to hear a political speech of any kind and by posting notices of suspension unless the people vote as they say these interests have given Canada another issue. The question now is whether the industrial, financial, and railroad interests are going to be dictators of Canada. The United States serves as a warning. By such methods and domination these interests wrote our tariff laws and clamped burdensome taxation on us that has crippled the nation and clipped its wings in world industrial expansion. By such domination they have controlled government, brought on us our trust evil and corrupted men and government. The revolt has come. Our whole intent now is to shake ourselves free of the domination that threatens Canada today. The irrational Kipling has warned Canada that her soul is at stake. It certainly is."

And Canada, in deadly fear of the impossible bogey of annexation, fled for refuge under the wings of the Canadian brothers of the vested interests that have plundered the American people under a tyranny as evil and oppressive as any in the history of the world. Canada now lies open to their marauding, and by the time another election rolls around they will have riveted its chains so that escape will not be easy.—Duluth Herald.

Aid for Schools

For the first time in Minnesota's history money from the general revenue fund is being sent out to aid common schools, as provided by the Warner bill passed at the last session of the legislature. Fifty thousand dollars was appropriated to help those districts where there are great tracts of state land untaxable and where settlers have been unable to maintain adequate schools.

Complaint has been made that in the sparsely settled districts land owners contributed regularly to the state and road funds, getting no return, in many cases having no schools. Representative Warner's measure provided that the sum awarded to each school district should not exceed 5 cents for each acre of state land, that not more than $250 should be paid to any one district, and that no part of the appropriation shall be used to purchase a site or erect school buildings.

When the money was apportioned it was learned that $50,000 was not enough to pay 5 cents an acre, so the districts will receive sums computed at the rate of 3 cents an acre, but in no case more than $150.

Marshall county will receive $969.42; Pennington, $38.91; Polk, $39.85.

The congressional franking privilege and the congressional leave to print things in the Record have both been abused freely, until the patrons of the postoffice are paying for the free hauling of an amazing miscellany, and the Congressional Record is anything but a true report of what happens in congress.

THE MIRAGE.

Conditions That Make Possible This Beautiful Illusion.

About that natural phenomenon, the mirage, much mystery clung in days of old, but science explains it as readily as the rainbow.

The fata morgana of the strait of Messina and the specter of the Brocken were nothing more in sober reality than mere mirage.

A mirage may occur at any place where the denser stratum of air is placed above the lighter stratum, thus refracting the rays of light, the common surface of the two stratums acting as a mirror.

In looming mirages distant objects show an extravagant increase in vertical height without alteration in breadth. Distant hummocks of ice are thus magnified into immense towers and pinnacles, and a ship is sometimes abnormally drawn out until it appears twelve or thirteen times as high as it is long. Rocks are seen drawn up to ten or twelve times their proper height. Houses as well as human beings and animals appear in like exaggerated shape.

Another form of mirage is when a ship or some other object near the water seems greatly elongated and a second inverted image meets it from above.

Sometimes the proper image of the object is elevated far above the sea, while the second image strangely appears inverted beneath it, the whole surrounded by a sheet of sky which is mirrored and repeated within it.

In 1882 in the arctic region Captain Scoresby recognized by its inverted image in the air his father's ship, the Fame, which afterward proved to be seventeen miles beyond the visible horizon of his observation.

One August evening in 1806 Dr. Vince saw from Ramsgate, at which place only the tops of Dover castle towers are usually visible, the whole of the castle. It appeared as though lifted up and bodily placed on the near side of the intervening hill. So perfect was this illusion that the hill itself actually could not be seen through the figure.

Some forms of mirage are lateral as well as vertical, arising from unequal density of two contiguous vertical bodies of air. Thus on Lake Geneva a boat has been seen double, the two images some distance apart.

Persons have been duplicated in the same way. Any one on a hot day by placing his eye near to a heated wall may see lateral mirages of objects at a distance and nearly on a line with the wall.

Mirages are very frequent on deserts or the large sandy plains which abound in the southwestern states and territories. Many a panting wagon train has pushed on in joyous haste at the sight of a green grove or limpid lake, only to be cruelly disappointed at the fading away of the vision. Is it any wonder that the natives and Indians regard the phenomenon as the work of evil and tantalizing spirits?

Lake Ontario is famous for beautiful and wonderful mirages, during which the opposite shore of the lake is plainly visible from either side.—Pearson's [illegible]

Coffee as Remedy For Asthma.

Coffee is a very excellent remedy for asthma. Those who do not know how to cut short their attacks and have not tried coffee should do so by all means. It often succeeds admirably when almost everything else has failed. There are one or two little points to be attended to in taking coffee for asthma. In the first place, it should be very strong, in fact, perfectly black. Weak coffee does more harm than good. If made very strong, much of it need not be taken. A large quantity is a positive disadvantage, for it is less rapidly absorbed and only distends the stomach. Then it should be given without sugar or milk, pure "cafe noir." It should be given on an empty stomach, for when taken on a full stomach it often does harm by putting a stop to the process of digestion.—Family Doctor.

The No Grog Law.

In July, 1862, congress revolutionized the American navy by passing the historic law providing:

"That from and after the 1st day of September, 1862, the spirit ration in the navy of the United States shall forever cease, and thereafter no distilled spirituous liquors shall be admitted on board of vessels of war except as medical stores and upon the order and under the control of the medical officers of such vessels and to be used only for medical purposes.

"From and after the 1st day of September next there shall be allowed and paid to each person in the navy now entitled to the spirit ration 5 cents per day in commutation and lieu thereof, which shall be in addition to the present pay."

And since that day there has been no "grog" in the United States navy.

No Piano has ever been more enthusiastically endorsed. The Artistic Case, the Easy, Responsive Action, and above all the deep, sweet, rich Tone, captivates performer and listener. The united verdict is that

LOMBARD PIANOS ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD !!

Mrs. Helen M. Slaker, 244 Grand Ave., Aurora, Ill., says: "I cannot find words in the English language to express my appreciation to you for having sold me such a beautiful instrument. I really think it is the most beautiful case I ever saw, and the tone is simply grand. I shall be glad to give you any testimonial, as I think the Lombard should take the lead."

Rev. Geo. Doubleday, Pres. Corpus Christi College, Galesburg, Ill., says: "We are using the Lombard in our College work at Corpus Christi, and it is a pleasure to recommend it. It is a beautiful instrument with a deep, sweet, rich tone."

J. W. Purviance, Editor McNairy County Independent, Selmer, Tenn., says: "The instrument (Lombard Piano) fills our most sanguine expectations. It is not only a rare beauty in its outward finish, but the tone is round, full, rich and sweet. Your firm has proven to be prompt and reliable in its dealings with me."

J. Ernest Paxson, Editor Press, Parkersburg, Pa., says: "I must say that the Lombard sent me is a beautiful instrument, and a credit to a standard firm. We are more than satisfied."

R. S. Knapp, President Federal Charter Co., Washington, D. C., says: "We now realize after a careful and comprehensive trial of the Lombard by many musical artists of Washington, that it stands second to none, regardless of price or make. Every one who has tried this instrument is enthusiastic in its praise."

These are samples of hundreds of enthusiastic letters received in every mail.

SHE GOT WHAT SHE WANTED

This Woman Had to Insist Strongly, but it Paid

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a female weakness and stomach trouble and I went to the store to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but the clerk did not want to let me have it—he said it was no good and wanted me to try something else, but knowing all about it I insisted and finally got it, and I am so glad I did, for it has cured me.

"I know of so many cases where women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I can say to every suffering woman if that medicine does not help her, there is nothing that will."—Mrs. JANETZKI, 2963 Arch St., Chicago, Ill.

This is the age of substitution, and women who want a cure should insist upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound just as this woman did, and not accept something else on which the druggist can make a little more profit.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

His Idea.

"An Ahkound is the best man of his kind, isn't he, pop?"

"I believe so, son."

"Then, pop, if I kill more flies than all the other fellows, I will be an Ahkound of Swat?"

Cause of the Excitement.

The sons of the rich were all enthusiastically following some one down the street.

"What's up?" someone asked.

A rather more accommodating young nabob than the others turned around.

"Do you see that tall fellow up front?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Well," he said, "he's discovered a new way to spend money."

Only a Moose.

"The modern woman isn't a bluff," asserted Mrs. Gobbolink, looking up from her newspaper. "This suffrage movement has more in it than mere ideas. The new woman is brave and fearless. Here is a story of a woman up in Canada who killed a mouse. It seems that she—"

"Impossible!" interjected Mr. Gobbolink. "There must be some mistake—read it again."

Mrs. Gobbolink searched out the paragraph and then blushed vividly. "How stupid of me," she stammered. "I did make a mistake. It wasn't a mouse she killed—nothing but a moose."

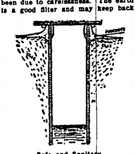
FARM and GARDEN

BUILD SUITABLE FARM WELL

Should Be Far Enough Away From Sources of Pollution to Avoid All Possible Danger.

There are few safer sources of water supply than a good well tightly covered, properly situated and cared for. If wells have, in the past, proved to be the sources of infection it has been due to carelessness. The earth is a good filter and may keep back impurities for a long time, but ultimately they get in because the earth becomes thoroughly saturated. You can't be too careful.

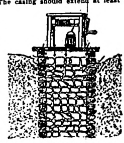


Safe and Sanitary.

A well with ground water approaching near the surface is more liable to contamination through seepage from nearby drains or closets than one where a deep ground water compels a greater filtration. A sandy soil makes the best and safest filter; a clayey or limestone region is most dangerous, because of fissures and cracks which may allow a free passage of unfiltered contaminated matter.

Under the best of circumstances, no possible source of pollution should be allowed within 25 feet of a well; with poor conditions as to soil or ground water the well should be far away from these sources of danger and possible disease.

Be careful about the covering. Have it tight. Be just as careful about the casing. It should be of bricks laid in cement mortar, pointed inside. This casing should go down as far as possible and the space around it should be filled in with a well-tamped clay. The casing should extend at least 18 inches above the surface of the ground and it should be protected for several feet around with a concrete shield. The platform should, of course, be tight, so that not a drop of water may flow back into the well. Ventilation for a well is not necessary.



Liable to Pollution.

Cost of Raising Wheat.

Including the item of rent, the cost of raising wheat in the year 1909 was estimated by the department of agriculture at 66 cents a bushel; the cost of raising corn was 38 cents a bushel, and the cost of raising oats was 31 cents a bushel. These figures are probably a reasonable statement of fact where the three grains are successfully grown. The average wheat fields were 59 acres; corn fields, 30 acres, and average oat fields, 25 acres. The wheat cost the farmer to raise it $11.15 per acre; the corn, $12.17 per acre, and the oats, $10.91 per acre. On the selling basis of 95 cents a bushel on farms, the wheat showed a profit of $5.33 per acre; on the selling basis of 62 cents a bushel on farms, the corn showed a profit of $7.82 per acre; on the basis of 40 cents a bushel at the farm, the oats showed a profit of $4.17 per acre. These are the figures of 1909. Today there is considerable decrease in price of grain and farmers are not making any such profits.

Experiment With Dandelions.

After two years of spraying, making 12 applications in all on a strip of lawn at the New York Agricultural Experiment station with iron sulphate, the dandelions sprayed were in as thriving a condition as when the spraying first began.—Conclusion, iron sulphate will not eradicate dandelions from lawns.

Seed Doesn't Germinate.

On most meadows and pastures there is usually plenty of white and red cloverseed in the soil, but owing to the lack of suitable plant food the seed has not germinated, or if it has the growth is very delicate.

Crop to Plow Under.

Crimson clover makes an excellent crop to be plowed under, though rye will answer. It is not equal to the clover, however, being without the nitrogen-fixing properties of the clover plant.

Problems of Farmers.

There are two problems that the farmers of this country have to face: (1) spend more money on drainage and (2) use more diligence in eradicating the noxious weeds on the farm.

Without Summer Silo.

The dairyman who does not have the summer silo should by all means use soiling crops.

PREPARE FOR WINTER WHEAT

Where Sown After Barley or Oats Should Be Plowed as Soon as Possible After Harvest.

Where wheat is sown after barley, oats or wheat seeded on last fall's cornstalks, the field should be plowed as early after harvest as possible. If this cannot be done at once, harrow the land to break down the stubble and destroy weeds and start weed-seeds to germinate. The rubbish will act as a mulch and keep the ground moist, and it will plow much easier than if left unprotected to bake in the hot summer's sun.

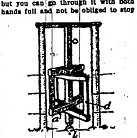
The three-horse double springtooth harrow and the double steel disk are the two best implements for cutting up stubble ground. Three heavy horses hooked to the disk harrow will cut the ground fully five inches in depth. By harrowing the field both ways before the grounds becomes too hard the land will be put in nice condition to plow later in the month.

The ground should be plowed early this month so the stubble turned under will rot and the ground settle nicely before it is time to drill. The ground should be harrowed a few days after it is plowed to prevent the escape of moisture. Fresh plowed land can be well pulverized by one cross harrowing. An occasional harrowing should be given to keep the ground mellow and to kill weeds. This method is equal to a summer fallow and without the loss of a crop. Land so prepared can be drilled to wheat and seeded to grass by the middle of September.

GOOD GATE FOR A BARNYARD

One Shown in Illustration Will Keep Stock in, but Allows Person to Go in and Out at Will.

Here is shown a good gate for the barnyard. It will keep the stock in, but you can go through it with both hands full and not be obliged to stop to open or close it, says the Farm and Home. It is built by setting a piece of 4x4 piece of hard wood, c, in a hub, b, and placing 1x4 inch strips, a, across it as shown in the cut. Spring the ends of each pair together to hold the upright piece, d, which should be 1x4 and 2 to 3 feet high. If there are no hogs in the barnyard the bottom crosspiece can be built 18 inches above the hub. The piece, d, should be about 8 feet high and stayed with wires or with a crosspiece fastened to two posts as shown. This device forms an X, which turns as a person passes through it, but is too small for stock to go through.



Gate for Barnyard.

Culture of Soil.

The one thing above all others that the Pennsylvania station desires to teach is that soil cannot be made fertile economically at a single stroke; that land can only be kept up to its highest productive capacity by a carefully and wisely ordered system of cropping, cultivation and fertilization.

Best General Fertilizer.

Barnyard manure is the best general fertilizer to use about young fruit trees; care should be taken, however, not to pile it up about the tree trunk, as it is liable to burn the bark.

Advertise Your Farm.

A stencil or rubber stamp costs less than one dollar. The name of your farm or your own name and address ought to go on every package, either for the local market or for shipment.

For Fire Purposes.

Fill up two or three water tubs and leave them handy to the barn door for quick use in case of fire. Keep them well covered or they will make good breeding places for mosquitos.

Green Bone.

Green bone is very rich in phosphate of lime.

Axle grease pays 100 per cent profit.

Cowpeas do not do so well at the north as at the south.

Corn should be a cultivated crop in every sense of the word.

Watch your cabbage and prevent the splitting of heads if possible.

The bean harvest is very dependent upon the weather for good results.

It is said that bees cannot profitably travel more than two miles for nectar.

Winter wheat must have a snow covering during the winter to survive.

Expert truckers and gardeners grow a large part of the vegetable seeds they need.

Constant and thorough tillage is a partial cure for drouth as it affects our crops.

Corn put into the silo when in the roasting ear stage will not make first-class silage.

If any crop is stored in the barn too green there is danger of spontaneous combustion.

Thoroughly cultivate all crops that remain in the ground, and burn up all rubbish and trash.

Late potatoes generally do better if left in the ground as long as possible to thoroughly ripen.

Don't forget to cut all corn intended for seed purposes just as soon as the ears are well dented.

When timothy hay is worth $7 per ton for feeding, good corn ensilage is worth about $3 per ton.

"First rate, since he learned to adapt himself to circumstances. He started out as a lung specialist, but he's a green apple specialist now."

Unfortunate Man.

A tourist in the mountains of Tennessee once had dinner with a querulous old mountaineer who yarned about hard times for 15 minutes at a stretch. "Why, man," said the tourist, "you ought to be able to make lots of money shipping green corn to the northern market." "Yes, I orter," was the sullen reply. "You have the land, I suppose, and can get the seed." "Yes, I guess so." "They why don't you go into the speculation?" "No use, stranger," sadly replied the cracker; "the old woman is too lazy to do the plowin' and plantin'."

Secretive Family Bible.

Tommy was a venturesome lad, but nobody had ever credited him with sufficient courage to shake his head in contradiction when the Sunday school visitor, who wished to show off his knowledge of Biblical history, asserted that Sarah, Abraham's wife, was the only woman whose age was recorded in the Bible. Seeing the disapproving motion of the little head in the front row, the visitor reiterated: "Sarah was the only woman whose age is recorded in the Bible." Then Tommy spoke right up: "There are three more that I know of," said he. "Who?" asked the astonished visitor. "Mother, grandmother and Aunt Lucy," said Tommy.

FOOD AGAIN

A Mighty Important Subject to Every-One.

A Boston lady talks entertainingly of food and the changes that can be made in health by some knowledge on that line. She says:

"An injury to my spine in early womanhood left me subject to severe sick headaches which would last three or four days at a time, and a violent course of drugging brought on constipation with all the ills that follow.

"My appetite was always light and uncertain and many kinds of food distressed me.

"I began to eat Grape-Nuts food two or three years ago, because I liked the taste of it, and I kept on because I soon found it was doing me good.

"I eat it regularly at breakfast, frequently at luncheon, and again before going to bed—and have no trouble in 'sleeping on it.' It has relieved my constipation, my headaches have practically ceased, and I am in better physical condition at the age of 63 than I was at 40.

"I give Grape-Nuts credit for restoring my health, if not saving my life, and you can make no claim for it too strong for me to endorse." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

HOME OF A SIGNER

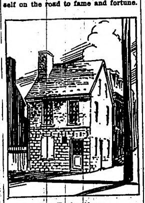
Old Taylor House Will Be Made a Museum.

One of the Two Remaining Abodes of Those Who Put Their Names to the Declaration of Independence.

Easton, Pa.—One by one the nation has permitted the homes of the signers of the Declaration of Independence to be sold into uncaring hands, or altered or torn down. Today, it is said, there remain only two of these homes as they appeared in 1776. These are the former home of George Taylor in this place, and Charles Carrollton of Baltimore. The Carrollton mansion, rich as it is in memories, has been a tenement house, inhabited principally by foreigners. The lower floor of the Taylor house was last used as a butcher shop.

It is quite probable that there is more interest attached to this Taylor house than to the home of any other signer of the famous document. It is for this reason that the Easton chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution are making such efforts to preserve this once famous building. This society has purchased the home and will convert it into a museum. As a nucleus for the proposed collection, they already have some relics of Taylor and Revolutionary days. These consist principally of suits of clothes, the sword, books and the inkstand used by the signer, as well as a number of shot cast at Taylor's furnace at Durham.

This house was built in 1757 as a home for William Parsons, the founder of the city of Easton. Shortly before Parsons died, George Taylor came to America with a man named Savage, who established a furnace at Durham, near Easton. Savage paid for Taylor's passage to America, and the latter then worked seven years for Savage, to reimburse him. Then Savage died, and Taylor married his widow, and came into possession of the furnace. Taylor now found himself on the road to fame and fortune.



The Taylor House.

The Durham furnace was kept busy making shot for the Revolutionary cannon. Taylor moved to Easton and bought the Parsons home, at the north east corner of Fourth and Ferry streets. Here General Washington visited Taylor when the former came to this city to visit the sick soldiers that had been housed in the First Reformed church, which was temporarily used as a hospital.

In 1764, Taylor was a member of the Provincial assembly, and one of the committee which thanked King George for repealing the stamp act.

The Taylor house is a two and a half story structure, built of sandstone. The mortar is so hard that it can hardly be chipped off with a chisel. The floors are of one and one-half inch oak planks, and fastened with wrought iron nails. Large oaken shelves adorn the room used by Taylor as his library, and the second floor has a spacious fireplace where hang the colonial fire tongs. The chimney is yet straight and solid, and the window sashes and panes are almost invariably the same as they were in Taylor's time. A short time ago, a small marble slab, giving the time of erection, and the date of death of the owner, George Taylor, was placed on the building by the new owners, the Easton chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

ARNOLD SEARCH COST $75,000

Detectives, Police and Reporters Still Seeking New York Girl Missing Since December.

New York.—Since the disappearance of Charley Ross no case of a missing person has had so much attention as that of Dorothy Arnold of this city. And in the history of no missing person was ever so great an effort made in all directions to discover what her fate has been; nor was money ever in any similar case so lavishly spent. The search that so far has been futile has cost $75,000 if it cost a penny. It is still going on, and money is still being lavishly expended and although as yet there is no definite prospect that the hunt will prove other than futile.

When Dorothy Arnold left her home in New York she left no word to explain her disappearance and no clew to her whereabouts. Her photographs were published broadcast and police, detectives and newspaper reporters all over the world sought the missing girl. Not one word has been heard nor any clew obtained since she left her home though thousands of dollars have been spent in the search and are still being expended.

The search is proving the most expensive on record, save perhaps those for the Greeley expedition into the far north and the Stanley expedition in quest of Livingston.

HANDS BURNED LIKE FIRE

"I can truthfully say Cuticura Remedies have cured me of four long years of eczema. About four years ago I noticed some little pimples coming on my little finger, and not giving it any attention, it soon became worse and spread all over my hands. If I would have them in water for a long time, they would burn like fire and large cracks would come. I could lay a pin in them. After using all the salves I could think of, I went to three different doctors, but all did me no good. The only relief I got was scratching.

"So after hearing so much about the wonderful Cuticura Remedies, I purchased one complete set, and after using them three days my hands were much better. Today my hands are entirely well, one set being all I used." (Signed) Miss Etta Narber, R. F. D. 2, Spring Lake, Mich., Sept. 26, 1910.

L. White Busbey, secretary to former Speaker Cannon, was explaining that the speaker did not smoke so much as people thought he did.

"My understanding," suggested one of the party, "is that he gets away with about 20 cigars a day."

"Oh, well," said Busbey, "but he eats half of 'em."—Sunday Magazine.

Cement Talk No. 7

Newspapers print nearly every day the story of some fire disaster involving the complete destruction of great property values and sometimes the loss of human lives. The annual fire losses of the United States are measured by the millions; in fact, it is stated that over two hundred and fifty million dollars worth of property was wiped out by fire in the United States last year. While it is true that the precautions to prevent fire and fire fighting systems are often inadequate, the main trouble lies in flimsy, non-fireproof building construction. Experience has proved that fireproof construction is both practicable and economical. In some industries fireproof building is compelled by law. Reinforced concrete has come to the front as the most important agent in building against fire. The use of cement in building is becoming more and more common, due to its fireproofness, durability and economy. When building anything from the back porch steps to an office building, concrete construction may be safely adopted. The use of Universal Portland Cement in the concrete will insure cement of the best quality possible to manufacture. Universal is handled everywhere by the best dealers.

300 DIE IN FLOOD

DAM BURSTS, CAUSING CATASTROPHE IN PENNSYLVANIA VILLAGES.

TWO TOWNS WIPED OUT

Rescuers Labor to Save Injured, With Light From Burning Buildings.—Logs Hurled Down on Villages By Waves.

Austin, Pa.—Two towns leveled by flood and fire, an estimated death list of over 300 persons, as many more injured and the surviving inhabitants dazed to inaction, is the destruction worked in this town by a flood which broke the concrete dam at Austin, freeing a lake five miles long that engineering science had held in leash in the valley of Freemans Run. The torrent of water, carrying with it millions of feet of pulp logs, swept away the buildings in its path, and, as the structures were dashed from their foundations, fire sprung from the broken gas connections and spread to the buildings higher up in the valley.

The flood, a repetition of the Johnstown disaster, first destroyed Austin, a town of 3,000 population, swept its buildings along in the current and dashed them into the town of Costello, a short distance down the valley.

The dam was built two years ago and the water was turned into the basin but a week ago. Behind the dam was the pile of logs to be used by the Goodyear Lumber Company and the pulp mills. When the dam went out the entire pile of concrete seemed to go down at once and the water swept along in a solid crest as high as the dam had been. The logs riding the crest of the floor made a battering ram that swept all before it. The pulp mill, half a mile above Austin, was one of the first buildings to be wrecked and its timbers were added to the burden the flood already carried. At the outskirts of the town the great dam demolished the planing mill and the hotel which stood near it.

Residences suffered because of their construction, and while no accurate estimate of the real damage can be made, it is stated that there are not enough houses left in the village to cover the survivors. The railroad shops where the debris is piled high, and which resisted for a time the force of the water, probably will prove to be the death chamber of the majority of the men who were employed there. A rescuing party attempted to reach the interior of the ruins but were driven back by the smell of burning flesh.

The five or six churches in the town are all gone, the only public institutions left standing being the hospital and the schoolhouse. They were above the flood line.

Among the principal places destroyed was the plant of the Emporium Lumber Company, not a vestige of it being left. A part of the plant of the Goodyear Lumber Company whose dam gave way, also disappeared under the raging waters, and the Commercial hotel and Davis house went down before the rush. The White house, another hotel was burned and it is believed that several persons perished with the building.

Whole families have been wiped out. Among them are some of the leading people in the town, but in the darkness and confusion it is impossible to tell just who are left. The number of the dead is estimated at from 850 to 1,000, the population of the town having been 3,000 before the disaster.

A dangerous situation developed immediately after the great wall of water had passed. Austin was piped for natural gas and the great force of the flood tore the mains from the streets. One of them, the largest pipe in the town, burst in the business section. A moment afterwards the gas rushed out and in a twinkling it had taken fire. There was no explosion, but the flames leaped to a height of twenty feet or more and, blown by a strong wind were communicated to the nearest house. In ten minutes a dozen other gas pipes had burst and were pouring their deadly inflammable fluid into the air.

The dam which burst was a gigantic concrete structure which in reality was a double dam. It was located on a hill a half mile above the village and spanned practically the entire valley, which at this point is about one-third of a mile wide and banked by high hills. The dam held back a wall of water fifty feet deep and three-quarters of a mile long normally as reserve power for the great pulp and paper mill which nestled at its base.

The Johnstown flood, which is recalled by the Austin, Pa., disaster, occurred on the afternoon of May 31, 1889, and 2,142 lives were lost and property was damaged to the extent of more than $9,500,000.

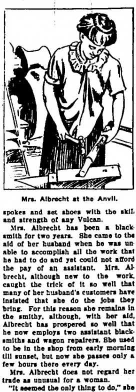
THIS WOMAN A GOOD VULCAN

Mrs. Anna M. Albrecht, a Resident of New York, Becomes an Expert Blacksmith.

New York.—Woman has crossed the last frontier of man's trades. Mrs. Anna M. Albrecht of this city is the successful invader, having won the distinction of being the only woman blacksmith in New York city and possibly the pioneer of American women in that trade.

Mrs. Albrecht is a sturdy woman of 35, the mother of three children and the chief aid and assistant of her husband in his smithy. She can heat rivets, set wheel bands, straighten spokes and set shoes with the skill and strength of any Vulcan.



Mrs. Albrecht at the Anvil.

Mrs. Albrecht has been a blacksmith for two years. She came to the aid of her husband when he was unable to accomplish all the work that he had to do and yet could not afford the pay of an assistant. Mrs. Albrecht, although new to the work, caught the trick of it so well that many of her husband's customers have insisted that she do the jobs they bring. For this reason she remains in the smithy, although, with her aid, Albrecht has prospered so well that he now employs two assistant blacksmiths and wagon repairers. She used to be in the shop from early morning till sunset, but now she passes only a few hours there every day.

Mrs. Albrecht does not regard her trade as unusual for a woman.

"It seemed the only thing to do," she said. "My husband needed help and so I helped him. I used to notice people stopping to watch me as they passed, but I soon forgot I was attracting attention. There's no reason in the world why women shouldn't be blacksmiths if they're strong enough to wield the tools. There's no more skill required for it than for a good many tasks in housework, and practice makes perfect, you know."

The woman blacksmith's costume is not at all indicative of her amazonic profession. At the anvil Mrs. Albrecht wears an old dark short skirt and a gingham dressing sacque with a low, frilled collar and sleeves cut off above the elbow. Her forearms are well developed through her use of the heavy tools. She says that she likes the work and that she will continue at it as long as there is a demand for her services.

MOREY'S IS TO BE REPLACED

Yale Alumni Arranging to Establish a Duplicate of the Famous Eating House.

New Haven, Conn.—Yale alumni in all parts of the country, who learned sometime ago of the passing of "Morey's," a famous old student eating house, have raised a fund to replace it and practically reproduce it in an old house on York street, a block from the college campus. The rooms in this York street house will be arranged exactly as in the original tavern, and on the walls will be hung the same old prints and the famous table tops on which Yale students for many generations have carved their initials.

G. O. P. CALLED

SELECTIONS OF NATIONAL CONVENTION CITY AND CHAIRMAN TOPIC FOR DISCUSSION.

DEMOCRATS MEET SOON

Progressives Urge Presidential Primaries Before Convention to Ascertain Preference as to Nominee.

Washington, D. C. — The issuance of the call for the meeting of the Republican national committee in Washington on Dec. 12 precipitates discussion of the next presidential campaign and, first of all, the selection of the convention city. It is expected that the call for the meeting of the Democratic national committee will be issued soon and that committee also will meet in Washington in December.

The selection of the national campaign chairman and the influence of politics in different sections of the country upon the choice of the convention city will be discussed by the Republicans. Chicago, St. Louis, Buffalo and Philadelphia are in the field to entertain the national convention.

President Taft's popularity and the strength he has among the business men of St. Louis gives that city considerable prestige in the race for capturing the convention. It is believed the Democrats will hold their convention in Chicago, and that they will endeavor to gain favor among the insurgent opponents of President Taft in the states of the Northwest.

Urges Presidential Primaries.

The National Progressive Republican league has issued from its headquarters here an open letter asking the committee to put in the call for the national convention a suggestion to the Republicans of the different states that the state committees call presidential primaries thirty days before the Republican national convention to obtain expressions in each of the states as to the nominee of the convention.

It is believed the chairman of the Republican national committee for the next campaign will be selected at the December meeting. Much will depend upon the wishes of the nominee of the convention, and, while it is generally conceded that President Taft will be nominated, it often is regarded wise to await the result of the convention before organizing for the campaign.

Since the entry of Chairman Hitchcock of the last campaign into the cabinet as postmaster general, the chairmanship has been filled by John F. Hill of Maine. The two names now most frequently mentioned here in connection with chairmanship for the campaign are Secretary to the President Hilles and Collector of Customs Loeb, who was secretary to President Roosevelt. The impression is becoming general here that Hill may be selected.

DR. HARRY WEBSTER ARRAIGNED.

Pleads Not Guilty to Charge of Murdering His Wife.

Oregon, Illinois. — Doctor Harry E. Webster, accused of the murder of his wife, Bessie Kent Webster, was arraigned before Judge O. E. Heard.

Dr. Harry E. Webster.

Webster pleaded not guilty, and a motion by the defense to quash the indictment against the prisoner was denied.

The state demanded an immediate trial. Counsel for the defense were granted a further hearing on this point, however, and efforts will be made to secure a continuance.

The indictment charging murder was returned by the Ogle county grand jury late in the afternoon. As soon as the indictment had been received Webster was taken from his cell in the county jail to the court room of Judge Heard. Webster's arraignment occupied but a few minutes.

Cardinal Gibbons states his opposition to some of the political propositions now before the people.

In Minnesota.

Important Happenings of the Week Briefly Told.

Minneapolis. — Minnesota "U" defeated Ames 5 to 0 in the first game of the season.

Farmington.—An electric light and power company has been organized in Farmington with an authorized capital of $10,000. A. H. Sprute is president.

Rochester.—Bishop Patrick Heffron of the diocese of Winona, was operated upon for appendicitis here. While his condition is serious, it is not considered necessarily critical.

Litchfield.—The new company composed of over 250 farmers of the county is in charge of the flour mills here, and will conduct it on a co-operative basis. The directors at a meeting elected Daniel Casey as manager.

Red Wing.—The government river boat David Tipton has a crew of men at work along the river banks in the vicinity of Horseshoe Bend near Diamond Island, dynamiting stumps of trees likely to interfere with navigation.

Minneapolis. — George Benjamin Findling, convicted of murder in the third degree, in connection with the death of 8-year-old Leo Donahue, was sentenced to 40 years at hard labor in the state prison. He was taken to Stillwater.

East Grand Forks. — Steps will be taken this week looking to the organization here of a young men's La Follette club, with similar action probably in Crookston, Thief River Falls and other northwestern Minnesota cities.

Cass Lake.—Chris Burns, fire ranger, has received the new steel tower which will be used as a lookout in locating fires. The tower will be 70 feet high and its location a high knoll two and a half miles northwest of Cass Lake.

St. Paul. — Inspectors C. W. Bongey and Thomas Nicholson of the state bureau of labor have set out on a tour of elevator inspection in which they will inspect every passenger and freight elevator in the state except in the cities of Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth. In Duluth, however, they will examine the freight elevators. Mr. Bongey will take the southern part of the state and Mr. Nicholson the northern.

Elk River.—Joseph Ballock was struck with a rock by Barlin Horwath, after an altercation at a double wedding celebration, and may die. His skull was fractured. Horwath disappeared after hitting Ballock. The fight occured following the wedding of Herbert Judge and Margaret Toth and Stephen Toth and Ada Judge. A warrant has been issued for Horwath's arrest.

Red Wing.—Progress is being made on the construction of the high power line between Red Wing and Wabasha. The construction crew has its camp at Frontenac. It is hoped to have the line completed during the next forty-five days. The first car of steel towers will be distributed from this point within a few days. Then miles of footings of galvanized structural steel for the tower foundations have been completed.

Litchfield.—The annual report of the secretary of the Minnesota Dairymen's association held here last winter is out. In the list of creameries joining the association at that time a total of $415,403 is invested in buildings and equipment. There are 5,667 stockholders, 8,882 patrons and milk is received from 56,855 cows. During 1910, 9,416,748 pounds of butter were manufactured, for which patrons were paid $2,917,666.75.

Duluth.—County Attorney Norton, who was instrumental in the conviction of the boy bandits, Melodrowsky and Johnson, the slayers of a policeman, will not aid Algot Johnson, now serving a thirty-year sentence at Stillwater, when Johnson's case comes before the pardon board in October. Johnson is said to be afflicted with tuberculosis, and Melodrowsky died of quick consumption six months after starting his term.

St. Cloud.—The four robbers who broke into Zimmer's general merchandise store and Wenner's hardware store at Cold Springs, this county, and made away with several hundred dollar's worth of goods, have been captured and are now lodged in the county jail here. The men give their names as Clemens, Moore, Watson and Smith. Smith and Clemens made a confession to County Attorney J. B. Himel, that the gang have been robbing country stores all summer.

Moorhead.—The last installment of the $10,000 reward offered for the arrest of each of the bandits, Frank Hauser and McDonald, who held up the Great Northern flyer at Rondo, Mont., in 1902, was paid to the claimants by G. D. McCubrey, clerk of the district court. The installment was $1,000, and constituted the sum offered by the Marine Insurance Company of London. Forty-five per cent went to the Western claimants and 55 per per cent to those in the East. Detectives Murnane and Delaney of St. Paul, received $120.

Litchfield.—County Superintendent Janes has arranged the program for the Meeker county boys and girls' industrial contest which will be held in this city on market day, Oct. 14. The Commercial club has contributed $100 toward the premium fund. Much interest is being shown in the county contests, and some fine exhibits are looked for.

Bemidji. — One man is dead, another mortally wounded and a third shot through the arm as the result of a midnight fight at Kellihen north of here. All the participants were woodsmen.

Mrs. Carter and her cook, says the Brooklyn Citizen, were discussing the murder which had harrowed the dusky citizens of the countryside.

"Will dey hang him fer killin' of his wife, Miss Cyarter?"

"We can't tell yet, Aunt Jinny. The court will decide. Of course, if they prove he did it on purpose—"

"Done it a purpose! Law, Miss Cyarter, in course he kilt his wife a purpose! Honey, ain't I done been married? Don't I know men?"

SOUND SLEEP
Can Easily Be Secured.

"Up to 2 years ago," a woman writes, "I was in the habit of using both tea and coffee regularly.

"I found that my health was beginning to fail, strange nervous attacks would come suddenly upon me, making me tremble so excessively that I could not do my work while they lasted; my sleep left me and I passed long nights in restless discomfort. I was filled with a nervous dread as to the future.

"A friend suggested that possibly tea and coffee were to blame, and I decided to give them up, and in casting about for a hot table beverage, which I felt was an absolute necessity, I was led by good fortune to try Postum.

"For more than a year I have used it three times a day and expect, so much good has it done me, to continue its use during the rest of my life.

"Soon after beginning the use of Postum, I found, to my surprise, that, instead of tossing on a sleepless bed through the long, dreary night, I dropped into a sound, dreamless sleep the moment my head touched the pillow.

"Then I suddenly realized that all my nervousness had left me, and my appetite, which had fallen off before, had all at once been restored so that I ate my food with a keen relish.

"All the nervous dread has gone. I walk a mile and a half each way to my work every day and enjoy it. I find an interest in everything that goes on about me, that makes life a pleasure. All this I owe to leaving off tea and coffee and the use of Postum, for I have taken no medicine." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

The Plummer Pioneer changed hands last week and A. F. Lattimore of Erie assumed its management. Mr Lattimore is an experienced newspaper man and will no doubt make an improvement in the Pioneer.

Any person desiring to file his petition for citizen papers has now a little more than two weeks in which to file the same with the clerk of the court. The last date for filing, to admit of the petitions being heard at the spring term of court which will be held in January, is Oct. 24.

Observations

Champ Clark declares that the republicans are promoting their own defeat. But Mr. Clark is willing to help some.

The balloting on reciprocity looked like an early Canadian snowstorm.

Wall street life is one war and strike rumor after another, and still the rest of the country manages to survive.

There is one good thing about that new conterfeit $100 bill; the average man will never get stung by it.

The only draw back to that coast to-coast aviation contest seems to be the inability of the flyers to keep their machines in the air.

The majority that will decide which way Maine went appears to have "took" to the tall timber and to be still hiding there.

It may be that not every country has spoken, but so far as heard from Canada is the only place where the increased cost of living is popular.

Mr. Bryan says he felt perfectly at home in Canada, and then he flatters us by calling attention to the fact he came back.

Mr Taft finds the west distinctly cooler than New England.

At least it must be admitted that "T. R." is not going about the country explaining anything.

If there were funerals after every political death we would have to have a new cemetery.

Supreme Court Has Big Task

Initiative and refernedum probably will be the subject of a decision with far reaching consequences by the supreme court of the United States in the approaching term. The question of constitutionality of these expedients of government forms the basis of a suit between the state of Oregon, where they are in use, and the Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph company.

As the case is near the head of the docket it will be reached in time to insure decision before the end of the term.

The case originated in the company's challenge of a law enacted by the Oregon legislature under the initiative plan, by which a tax of 2 per cent was placed upon the gross earnings of telegraph and telephone companies. Taking the position that the initiative and referendum, which are coupled in the Oregon law, are inconsistent with the republican form of government guaranteed by the constitution of the United States, the company refused for four years to pay the assessments.

The Duluth Herald, in commenting on this situation, says that if the court holds that the federal constitution does not permit the initiative and the referendum, that does not mean that the initiative and the referendum are wrong. It means that the constitution is wrong—or else the court—and that it must be amended as speedily as may be to permit this great people for whom the constitution exists—the people were not made for the constitution; as many seem to think; the constitution was made for the people—to have closer control of their public affairs to the end that they may be administered for the common good and not for the dispensing of special favors to special interests.

Can't Get Back

It is reported that several families now living in Cass Lake and vicinity contemplate moving to northwestern Canada next spring. We are prone to ask these people if they know just what they may expect if they go there? Do they not know that since the defeat of the reciprocity pact almost every speculator who had options on Canadian lands has canceled them or has allowed them to lapse. It is no longer a secret that millions of bushels of wheat and other cereals were destroyed by severe frosts in August, and it is a conceded fact that the growing of grain in all the provinces of Canada east of the mountains is an experiment, not ever a certainty. No country that is visited with six or eight degrees of frost during August can be depended upon for wheat production, and if we may credit the yearly reports of the weather man Saskatchewan and Alberta are outside of the safe belt. Many who have gone are returning and thousands who have been induced to leave good farms and happy homes in a land land where crops are a surety would gladly return from "Sunny Alberta" if means were provided.—Cass Lake Times.

Assessments Increased

According to the report just given out by the Minnesota tax commission the valuation of Pennington county personal property shows a marked increase. The following items given out by the commission show increased for the year 1911:

Cattle 1 year old, increased 10 per cent;

Autos, etc., 20 per cent;

Melodeons and organs, 10 per cent;

Pianos, 10 per cent;

Retail merchandise, 5 per cent;

Logs, etc., in hands of manufacturers, 25 per cent;

Manufacturers' tools, etc., 20 per cent;

Elevators, etc., 10 per cent.

Special changes in bank assessments: Merchants State Bank. St. Hilaire, increased 193 per cent;

First National Bank, Thief River Falls, increased 358 per cent.

Clear the River First

A dispatch to the dailies says that the advisability of using Red Lake as a reservoir will be urged in the report which will be made soon by the St. Paul office of the United States geological survey. By constructing a dam it is thought that the water could be held in the lake during wet seasons. This would save Thief River Falls, which has depended on water power derived from the river to furnish light and electric power, from finding themselves without light, as they have many times within the last year; but what would have been more to the point and perhaps have given immediate relief would have been to compel the lumber companies to remove their log jam from the mouth of the lake.

It is also urged that such a dam would prevent the overflowing of the Red river to a great extent.

Leave your laundry with M. R. Hage, agent for Model Steam Laundry, Thief River Falls, Minn. Dyeing, French dry cleaning and steam cleaning in connection.

Honey Sixty Years Old

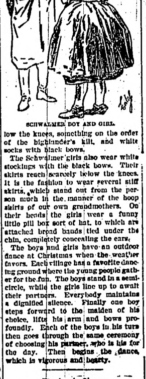
One thousand pounds of honey, some of it more than sixty years old, was obtained by workmen while tearing down an old tavern in East Lee Massachusets. It was built 150 years ago. A hundred swarms of bees were found in the garret, which no one had entered for 60 years. The keeping qualities of the honey come from its absolute purity and immunity from germs, just as the keeping qualities of golden grain belt beer, are made possible by their absolute germless purity, You owe it to yourself to try them. Order of Alex Thompson, Crookston, or of your dealer.

SCHWALMER BOYS AND GIRLS

Their Quaint Costumes and Their Odd Christmas Dance.

Over in Hesse-Nassau, a district in Germany, there is a section of the Hessian people who present an interesting study, particularly in regard to their quaint Christmas customs.

These people live in the valley of the river Schwalm. The Schwalmer boys wear a peculiar round hat or cap without brim or visor. It resembles in shape a small cheese box. They wear a sort of coat with skirt reaching below the knees, something on the order of the highlander's kilt, and white socks with black bows.



SCHWALMER BOY AND GIRL.

The Schwalmer girls also wear white stockings with the black bows. Their skirts reach scarcely below the knees. It is the fashion to wear several stiff skirts, which stand out from the person much in the manner of the hoop skirts of our own grandmothers. On their heads the girls wear a funny little pill box sort of hat, to which are attached broad bands tied under the chin, completely concealing the ears.

The boys and girls have an outdoor dance at Christmas when the weather favors. Each village has a favorite dancing ground where the young people gather for the fun. The boys stand in a semicircle, while the girls line up to await their partners. Everybody maintains a dignified silence. Finally one boy steps forward to the maiden of his choice, lifts his arm and bows profoundly. Each of the boys in his turn then goes through the same ceremony of choosing his partner, who is his for the day. Then begins the dance, which is vigorous and hearty.

The Lowly Singer.

The humble poet goes about
In very modest raiment.
If he could coin his tuneful words
He'd gladly make a payment
On rags that glisten as the sun
And raise an awful holler,
But now he has to be content—
He hasn't got a dollar.

For him the sun unfolds its light,
For him the stars are gleaming,
And so he cannot waste his time
On profit bearing scheming.
He must remain content to get
The robin's morning greeting
And not disturb his high flown thoughts
With vulgar things like eating.

Were he disposed to drop a peg
And lower his profession
Things might be drifting round his way
In quite a long procession.
Would he write ads. instead of songs
Extolling pills or bacon
He'd rake in coin; but, oh, his art
Would have to be forsaken!

No; he will go along his way,
Wrapped in his inspiration.
Let sordid poets sing of soap;
His theme is all creation.
So take him gently by the hand
And lead him to the table,
And then the poet's appetite
You'll find was but a fable.

His Dreadful Price.

"I have just had some swell photographs taken."

"I hope that they do you justice."

"Thanks, awfully, but that's not what's troubling me."

"What is?"

"How I am ever going to do the photographer justice?"

An Oversight.

"The constitution is a grand old document."

"Yes, but they wrote it too soon."

"Why so?"

"They should have waited until automobiles had been invented and made it unconstitutional to run a fellow down."

It would be nice to be able to do anything if it were not for the fact that in that case people would expect you to do something.

CEYLON MENUS.

The Way Natives Wrestle With the English Language.

A writer in the Epicure tells of several menus with which he was confronted when traveling in Ceylon. The menu, he says, is an indispensable adjunct to a respectable luncheon or dinner table in Ceylon. As a rule, the head servant writes it out and from his elementary knowledge of English as "she is wrote" springs a host of quaint blunders. At the same time his fertile oriental brain is ever apt to add footnotes, which are perhaps his happiest achievement.

At one lunch there figured among the dishes "roast beef," but it caused the hostess some consternation when she discovered the additional legend in very small letters, "roast beef, smelling a little," the parenthetical note being meant to intimate that the dish was accompanied by a sauce of savory odors.

On another occasion there appeared this following acknowledgment of deficiency: "Steak and kidney pie; no kidney."

It was altogether delightful, continues the writer, to find at one dinner, our old friend Welsh rabbit appearing as "Welsch rubbish." The same genius translated haricot mutton into "hurryged mutton." Our own boy, he adds, on the occasion of a hastily improvised dinner, was unable to accomplish a dessert. Consequently he put the word "plates" at the end of the menu.

A COSTLY TRIFLE.

It Brought Bankruptcy to an English Iron King.

It was a common penny postage stamp that brought Hobart, the great British "iron king," to his ruin. At the time of the Whitworth period, when there was a big crisis in the iron trade, he had agents in all parts of the world who kept him posted. Sometimes they telegraphed news to him in cipher, but those in England were nearly always instructed to write. At that period his principal agent, who was also his chief partner, was in Sheffield and wrote him from there warning him to sell out all iron interests for the time on account of the Whitworth crisis.

Hobart had frequent fits of irritability, and he had been receiving a lot of unstamped letters of no importance on which he had to pay double postage. One morning in anger he gave orders that such letters were to be returned to the postman. The very first unstamped letter received after this was from his partner. It was rejected as soon as it arrived.

Consequently, knowing nothing of the existence of the letter or the all important private news it contained, Hobart pledged himself next day for more iron deals than even his mighty credit was good for. The great drop in prices came two days later, and Hobart, once a millionaire, was involved in a hopeless bankruptcy from which he never recovered.—London Telegraph.

Pillsbury's Wonderful Memory.

Harry N. Pillsbury, the chess player, offered one day in South Bethlehem, Pa., to memorize thirty words, no matter how hard they might be, the selections to be read to him only once.

Professor Merriman of Lehigh university and Dr. Threlkeld-Edwards of Bethlehem picked out most of the following words: Antiphlogistine, periosteum, takadiastase, plasmon, ambrosia, Threlkeld, streptococcus, staphelococcus, micrococcus, plasmodium, Mississippi, Freiheit, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, athletics, no war, Eichenberg, American, Russia, philosopher, Piet-Potgieters-Rost, Salmagundi, Oomailecootsi, Bangmanvato, Schlochter's Nek, Manzinyama, theosophy, catechism, Madjesoomslopa.

Mr. Pillsbury immediately repeated these words in the order given and in the reverse order.

For What Other Purpose?

"I lost my watch and chain in a crowded street car."

"Why don't you see the chief of police?"

"You don't suspect him, do you?"

Expensive.

"Every time the doctor comes to see you you seem worse, my dear."

"Of course."

"Why of course?"

"Isn't he charging $2 a trip?"

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Some people are such artistic bores that they are almost entertaining.

Even the most unorthodox like to believe in a little private hell of their own convenient to consign undesirables to.

It is a wise man who thoroughly understands that seeing is very often deceiving.

Most people have a certain amount of intelligence, but the skill some of them have in keeping it concealed amounts almost to genius.

The strong repugnance that some people have to money never seizes them until money is in their possession.

Until about little more than a century ago dwarfs were frequently kept as court toys. Records of them might be multiplied almost indefinitely.

Babe, the dwarf of Stanislaus, king of Poland, lived to be ninety years of age, dying in Paris in 1858, and is variously described as having measured thirty-five inches and twenty-three inches. Julia, niece of Augustus, had two dwarfs, each twenty-eight inches in height, and Henrietta Maria had two whose joint height was seven feet two inches. The Emperor Augustus had a dwarf named Lucius whose height was two feet and weight seventeen pounds. The last court dwarf in England was Copperdin, who belonged to the Princess of Wales, mother of George III.

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES

NAILS, Tacks or Glass will not let the air out. Sixty thousand pairs sold last year. Over two hundred thousand pairs now in use.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C. O. D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "H" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. You run no risk in sending us an order as the tires may be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination. We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

IF YOU NEED TIRES don't buy any kind at any price until you send for a pair of Hedgethorn Puncture-Proof tires on approval and trial at the special introductory price quoted above; or write for our big Tire and Sundry Catalogue which describes and quotes all makes and kinds of tires at about half the usual prices.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.

A CHILD'S LAUGHTER.

All the bells of heaven may ring,
All the birds of heaven may sing,
All the wells of earth may spring,
All the winds of earth may bring
All sweet sounds together;
Sweeter far than all things heard,
Hand of harper, tone of bird,
Sounds of woods at sundown stirred,
Welling water's winsome word,
Wind in warm, wan weather.

One thing yet there is that none,
Hearing ere its chime be done,
Knows not well the sweetest one
Heard of man beneath the sun,
Hope in heaven hereafter;
Soft and strong, and loud and light,
Very sound of very light
Heard from morning's rosiest height,
When the soul of all delight
Fills a child's clear laughter.

Golden bells of welcome rolled
Never before such notes nor told
Hours so blithe in tones so bold
As the radiant mouth of gold
Here that rings forth heaven.
If the golden crested wren
Were a nightingale, why, then,
Something seen and heard of men
Might be half as sweet as when Laughs a child of seven.

—Algernon Charles Swinburne.

LINCOLN'S PASSING BELL.

TOLLING, tolling, tolling,
All the bells of the land!
Lo, the patriot martyr
Taketh his journey grand,
Travels into the ages,
Bearing a hope how dear;
Into life's unknown vistas,
Liberty's great pioneer.

TOLLING, tolling, tolling,
Do the budded violets know
The pain of the lingering clangor
Shaking their bloom out so?
They open into strange sorrow,
The rain of a nation's tears,
Into the saddest April,
Twined with the new world's years.

TOLLING, tolling, tolling!
See, they come as a cloud—
Hearts of a mighty people,
[illegible] his pall and shroud.

LOMBARD PIANOS ARE THE BEST IN THE WORLD !!

Mrs. Helen M. Slaker, 244 Grand Ave., Aurora, Ill., says: "I cannot find words in the English language to express my appreciation to you for having sold me such a beautiful instrument. I really think it is the most beautiful case I ever saw, and the tone is simply grand. I shall be glad to give you any testimonial, as I think the Lombard should take the lead."

Rev. Geo. Doubleday, Pres. Corpus Christi College, Galesburg, Ill., says: "We are using the Lombard in our College work at Corpus Christi, and it is a pleasure to recommend it. It is a beautiful instrument with a deep, sweet, rich tone."

J. W. Purviance, Editor McNairy County Independent, Selmer, Tenn., says: "The instrument (Lombard Piano) fills our most sanguine expectations. It is not only a rare beauty in its outward finish, but the tone is round, full, rich and sweet. Your firm has proven to be prompt and reliable in its dealings with me."

J. Ernest Paxson, Editor Press, Parkersburg, Pa., says: "I must say that the Lombard sent me is a beautiful instrument, and a credit to a standard firm. We are more than satisfied."

R. S. Knapp, President Federal Charter Co., Washington, D. C., says: "We now realize after a careful and comprehensive trial of the Lombard by many musical artists of Washington, that it stands second to none, regardless of price or make. Every one who has tried this instrument is enthusiastic in its praise."

These are samples of hundreds of enthusiastic letters received in every mail.

Cement Talk No. 8

The appearance of any place can be greatly improved by using concrete wherever possible. If you have a nice home, whether in the city or in the country, you can add greatly to its attractiveness by building not only the sidewalks, but the steps, curbs, fence-posts, cisterns, foundations, driveways, cellars and so on, of concrete. Build of concrete and use UNIVERSAL Portland Cement. Concrete is cheap, easy to use, clean, fire, rat and rot proof. Concrete is the simplest building material and the most durable. You need only UNIVERSAL cement, sand, gravel or crushed stone. But remember to use UNIVERSAL—it is the best cement. It is always of uniform color and great strength. Ask your dealer for it.

A REMARKABLE CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA

Munyon's Stomach Treatment Performing Miracles.

MUNYON TELLS YOU HOW TO GET WELL FREE OF CHARGE

"A few days ago I received a letter from a young man, who states he is 23 years of age, and has occupied several important positions, but owing to indigestion and inability to sleep he has been unable to concentrate his mind upon his work and has consequently been discharged on the ground of neglect of duty. He goes on to say that he is a young man of steady habits, but for years he has suffered from dyspepsia, which has so affected his nerves that he is unable to sleep, and that it is not neglect upon his part, nor lack of interest in the business, but simply physical weakness. He asks my advice in this matter.

"For the benefit of a large number of those similarly situated I propose to answer this letter publicly, hoping that it may be the means of helping many who may be affected in this way.

"In the first place, the stomach must be made well before the nerves can be made strong. The nerves must be made strong before one can sleep well. No one is capable of doing his best who is in any way troubled with insomnia or any form of nervousness. The greatest generals have been men of iron nerve and indomitable will. They have had perfect digestion, being able to eat well, and digest all they ate.

"It is said that Napoleon lost the battle of Waterloo because of a fit of indigestion. Grant's enormous reserve power was due to a well stomach. Abraham Lincoln said that 'he did not know that he had a stomach.' Grover Cleveland, it is said, could work 18 hours a day, eat a hearty meal at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, go to bed and sleep soundly until 9 o'clock and get up refreshed, ready for a new day's work.

"Pres. Taft is another type of healthy manhood. Who thinks for one moment that he would be the President of the United States today had he been a dyspeptic or affected with some nervous ailment? I claim that two-thirds of all the failures in professional and business life are due to weak and deranged stomachs.

"No business house would care to employ a dyspeptic representative to sell goods for them on the road. One-half the men who stand behind counters today, earning from $12 to $15 a week, will never get beyond these figures, for the reason that they are physically weak. They lack the nerve power and commanding strength that come from a good, sound stomach.

"No one cares to hear a dyspeptic preacher. No matter how pious he may be, he is bound to reflect his bilious and jaundiced condition. He will unconsciously inoculate his hearers with his melancholy feelings.

"No one would think of entrusting an important legal case in the hands of a dyspeptic lawyer, any more than he would care to entrust his own life, or that of a dear one, in the hands of a physician who is nervous, irritable or a dyspeptic. Men must have good digestion, strong nerves and vital manhood in order to render a clean, clear-cut decision either in medicine, law or business.

"I believe that more than half of the divorces can be traced to ill health. I want every dyspeptic to try my stomach treatment, for it corrects nearly all forms of indigestion and nervousness. It makes old stomachs almost as good as new. Its marvelous power for digesting food and getting the best out of it makes for good rich, red blood. This, in turn, strengthens the nerves, builds up the general system, and will surely prolong life and make it a pleasure to live and do the things allotted to us."

Keeping Busy.

We are told that at New York's coming municipal budget exhibit bells will be rung and lights flashed to show a birth every four minutes, a death every eleven minutes.

Just what sort of demonstration is made every time a cafe bottle pops, or a bellboy is tipped, we are not told.

As long as there are people in the world who try to get something for nothing, a lot of other people will be able to live without work.

M'INTIRE ON METHODISM

PREACHES SERMON AT SEMI-CENTENIAL ANNIVERSARY.

Lay Association Elects Officers—Windom Picked for 1912 Conference.

Faribault. — Monday, October 2, was a great day for the Methodists here. Special interest centered on Bishop McIntyre's sermon at the theater in the forenoon and the ordination of elders and deacons in the afternoon. The following have entered the conference and were received on trial: Arthur B. Godge, A. C. Reinke, Earl Ferrel, E. H. Hickman, Fred Smith, John W. Atkins, Benton B. Wood and Walter Pickering. Several transfers were made to other conferences. Rev. W. C. Sage goes to the North Dakota conference and E. A. Palmer to the southern California conference.

Resolutions were adopted urging that the present method of districts and district superintendents be retained. Another resolution recommended to the general conference that the lay members be admitted to the annual conference.

The anniversary of the Freeman's Aid Society was held and was addressed by Rev. P. J. Mavetty, D. D., of Cincinnati.

CARLETON HEAD AT MOORHEAD.

President Cowling Says $1,000,000 Fund for College Will Be Raised.

Moorhead.—President D. J. Cowling of Carleton college, Northfield, was a guest of honor in this city last week. He occupied the pulpit in the First Congregational church and spoke before a society of business men known as the Men's Siminar.

Taking as his subject "The Place of the Small College," and treating of Carleton college in particular, President Cowling addressed members of the Men's Seminar. With finue skill the speaker told of the differences in his experiences secured at Yale university and at Carleton, emphasizing the more intimate relation held in the smaller school between not only the students, but the students and instructors.

President Cowling also told of the progress made of securing the $1,000,000 endowment fund for the college, and said, "We now feel that the securing of the fund for the school at Northfield is a practical certainty."

GUARD OFFICERS' ELECTION.

Duluth Meeting Ends—Minneapolis to Get Next Session.

Duluth.—The annual meeting of the officers of the Minnesota national guard ended with the election of officers. Colonel E. D. Luce of Minneapolis was elected president, Captain George Leach, Minneapolis, vice-president, Captain K. A. Franklin, Duluth, secretary; Major H. Hart, St. Paul, treasurer. The next meeting will be held at Minneapolis.

In an address before the meeting Congressman Miller advocated the fortification of important posts of the country and declared himself in favor of the fortification of the Panama canal.

Captain Albert Pfaender of New Ulm told of the close relations existing between the militia of the state and the Legislature.

FARMER KILLED IN AUTO SPILL.

Olmstead County Man's Machine Hits Pole—Family Escapes.

Eyota.—Frank Hughes, one of the prosperous farmers of this county, residing near here, was instantly killed when his automobile, which he was driving, ran into a post and turned turtle. The machine fell on him. Hughes, with his wife, daughter and baby, were driving to a neighbor's.

The muddy condition of the roads caused the car to skid, running square into a post with such violence that it threw the machine completely over. Mrs. Hughes, who was carrying her baby, saved its life by throwing the child out of the machine, and she also escaped injury. The older daughter received a fractured arm.

Mr. Hughes was one of the well-known farmers of the county. He was about 40 years of age.

TWO ARRESTED AS BURGLARS

Loot From Stores and Kit of Tools Found in Room of Suspects.

Two Harbors.—Melles, Pirie & Co., expert accountants of Minneapolis, have been employed to audit the books of F. J. McAlpine, former city clerk, and water and light collector, who is under arrest charged with a shortage of $12,000. Mr. McAlpine says he can make good any claims against him. It will take about three weeks to audit the books.

LOGGERS START HARVEST.

One Hundred Men Begin Cutting Contract for a Walker Company.

Cass Lake.—The George Cochran logging camps are running full blast, nearly 100 men being employed. Four and one-half million feet will be cut for the Leech Lake Lumber company, of Walker. The logs are being hauled by rail, one solid train load being taken to Walker daily. The Cochrans have received a new switch engine to be used in hauling logs from the woods.

FINDS DRINK WAS DRUGGED.

Chloral Hydrate Placed in Whisky to Lure Robbery Victims.

Moorhead.—By the announcement by Professor E. F. Ladd, food commissioner of North Dakota, that the results of an analysis of whisky from this this city showed the presence of chloral hydrate, the theory of officials concerning several robberies of late has been strengthened. Chloral hydrate is the principal ingredient in "knock out drops."

The whisky was sent to Professor Ladd after it had been taken from Ed Smith and George Derman, transients, who were then sent to the county jail. It was thought by the police that these men would offer the whisky to others who had money and after they were under the influence of the drug would lead them to the river bank and rob them. Several robberies of this nature have occurred of late and the police think this was the method used.

Smith and Derman admitted having put the stuff in the whisky, but said they used it as a narcotic. As there was no evidence they had "doped" anyone with the whisky, the case was dismissed.

FARMER KILLED BY AUTO.

Family of Olmsted County Man Escape When Machine Turns Turtle.

Rochester.—Frank Hughes, one of the prosperous farmers of this county, residing five miles southwest of the village of Eyota, was instantly killed when his automobile, which he was driving, ran into a post and turned turtle, the machine crushing him. Mr. Hughes, with his wife, his daughter and baby, were driving to a neighbor's for a call and were about four miles west of Eyota village, near the Oscar curred.

The extremely muddy condition of the roads caused the car to skid, running square into a post with such violence that it threw the machine completely over. Mrs. Hughes, who was carrying her baby in her arms, saved its life by throwing the child out of the machine, and she also escaped injury.

The elder daughter received a fractured arm. Mr. Hughes was one of the well-known farmers of the country. He was about 40 years old.

PROGRESSIVES PLAN FOR FEAST.

Clapp and Anderson to Talk at Rochester Event, October 10.

Rochester. — All the plans for the progressive Republican League feast that will be held in Rochester on Tuesday night, October 10, are progressing rapidly, and the opening of the campaign of the progressive cause in the First district, the home of ex-Congressman James A. Tawney and Congressman Sydney Anderson may attract more than district-wide attention, for it is quite probable that Senator Moses E. Clapp will make his first address for the progressives in Minnesota at the Rochester banquet.

George Loftus, W. I. Nolan and former City Attorney James Peterson of Minneapolis are among the speakers who have announced they will be on hand, and there seems little question but what Senator Clapp will also be on hand to espouse the cause of the LaFollette faction. Congressman Anderson will also be one of the speakers.

MUST BUILD STOCK YARDS.

Great Northern Ordered to Give Relief to Brook Park Farmers.

The Great Northern railway must build a stock yards at its station in Brook Park, Pine County, according to an order issued by the state railroad and warehouse commission. The commission finds there are approximately 225 farmers within a radius of five miles of the town, and that shipments of stock from there are being diverted because of the lack of loading facilities.

There are only 160 residents in Brook Park, but they petitioned the commission to require the Great Northern to stop the Gopher Limited there. This petition was denied. The commission also refused to require the road to move its depot.

WON'T GIVE UP SALARIES.

Glotzbach's Amendment Rejected by Faribault Charter Commissioners.

Faribault.—The charter commission held a meeting to consider some amendments, one in particular, which reduces the sinking-fund tax from 5 mills to about 1 mill. F. I. Glotzbach offered an amendment to do away with the salaries of the four commissioners and the mayor under the new form of government, placing these officers on the old honor system. The Senator made a strong speech in support of his amendment and stated that the $3,500 paid annually in salaries would go a long ways in a few years toward paving streets. However, the amendment was lost when put to a vote.

"ECZEMA ITCHED SO BADLY I COULDN'T STAND IT."

"I suffered with eczema on my neck for about six months, beginning by little pimples breaking out. I kept scratching till the blood came. It kept getting worse, I couldn't sleep nights any more. It kept itching for about a month, then I went to a doctor and got some liquid to take. It seemed as if I was going to get better. The itching stopped for about three days, but when it started again, was even worse than before. The eczema itched so badly I couldn't stand it any more.

"I went to a doctor and he gave me some medicine, but didn't do any good. We have been having Cuticura Remedies in the house, so I decided to try them. I had been using Cuticura Soap, so I got me a box of Cuticura Ointment, and washed off the affected part with Cuticura Soap three times a day, and then put the Cuticura Ointment on. The first day I put it on, it relieved me of itching so I could sleep all that night. It took about a week, then I could see the scab come off. I kept the treatment up for three weeks, and my eczema was cured.

"My brother got his face burned with gun-powder, and he used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The people all thought he would have scars, but you can't see that he ever had his face burned. It was simply awful to look at before the Cuticura Remedies (Soap and Ointment) cured it." (Signed) Miss Elizabeth Gehrki, Forrest City, Ark., Oct. 16, 1910. Red Cross Christmas Seals.

A statement denying the recent reports about the abandonment of the Red Cross Christmas seal sale has been issued by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The statement declares that not only will the sale be held this year, as in the past three years, but that it will be conducted on broader lines than ever before. The only order issued by the postoffice department which bears on the sale of Red Cross seals was sent out on July 1, and prohibits the use of the mails to letters and packages bearing non-postage stamps on the face, and also to any mail bearing seals which resemble postage stamps, if used either on the face or back. The Red Cross seal to be used this year has been submitted to the postoffice department and approved, and thus may be used, but only on the back of letters and packages. The design to be used this year depicts a pretty winter scene embossed in a heavy red circle. The corners are white, thus giving the effect when affixed to a letter or a package of a round seal.

The Simple Life.

Anna Maria Wilhelmina Pickering, in her "Memoirs," edited by her son, tells a Yorkshire incident which contains a great deal of human nature. Variety spices life; the plain is monotonous, until its extent entitles it to the name of prairie or desert, and it gains interest through vastness.

There was an old couple in the village whom I used often to go to see. One day, when I found them sitting, one on each side of the fire, the old man said to me:

"Well, t' missis and me, we've been married nigh on 50 years, and we've never had one quarrel."

The old woman looked at me, with a twinkle in her eye, and said:

DUMAS IS GUILTY

BELTRAMI COUNTY JURY RETURNS VERDICT AGAINST CASS LAKE MAYOR.

FOR THE PUPOSKY AFFAIR

Attorneys for Physician to Appeal Case—Heated Argumentation by Counsel Mark Closing Hours of Trial.

Bemidji. — Dr. D. F. Dumas, the mayor of Cass Lake, was found guilty of arson in the third degree. Dr. Dumas was charged specifically with having attempted, with Mike Davis and Martin Behan, to burn the postoffice building at Puposky early in the morning of June 17.

Dr. Dumas returned with his wife to Cass Lake in their automobile after the verdict was read. He took the verdict without any show of emotion and refused to comment on it.

Attorney Freeman P. Lane of Minneapolis, of counsel for the defense, announced when the verdict was read that steps would be taken to have the case appealed to the supreme court. Dr. Dumas was allowed his liberty on his original bond. Sentence was deferred pending the outcome of the appeal.

Probably never before in Bemidji, and possibly not in the state, was there so much dramatic excoriation as marked the closing arguments of both Assistant Attorney General Alexander L. Janes of St. Paul, for the state, and Attorney Lane for Dr. Dumas. This was the first criminal case of unusual importance in which Mr. Janes has made an argument to the jury since he became a member of the attorney general's staff, and the courtroom was visibly impressed with the manner in which he reviewed the evidence and the eloquence which punctuated his remarks.

Attorney Lane, for the defense, charged that the Dumas case had cost Beltrami county $90,000. He characterized the case against Dr. Dumas as a put-up job, and was unsparing in his denouncement of Assistant Fire Marshal Sam Fullerton.

Assistant Attorney Janes, for the state, not only defended Robert A. Smythe, whose maneuvers led up to the arrest of Dr. Dumas, and whom Attorney Lane repeatedly referred to as a "dirty little liar," but he also upheld the state's course in the case and all the men connected with the prosecution.

Editor Adams, of Fergus Falls, Urges State Inspection of Dams

Elmer E. Adams, editor of the Fergus Falls Journal, has addressed a letter to the St. Paul Pioneer Press urging state inspection of dams which imperil both life and property, if corporations, public or private, cannot be held responsible for damage ensuing from faulty engineering or building. Mr. Adams' letter is of unusually timely interest because of the recent disasters, consequent upon the giving away of dams at Austin, Pa., and at Black River Falls, Wis.

The letter follows:

"Many of your readers were very much interested in the editorial on 'Concrete in Dam Construction,' which appeared a few days ago, suggested by the disastrous collapse of the dam at Austin, Pa.

State Should Lessen Dangers.

"If corporations, either municipal or private, are going to impound great quantities of water, above cities and towns, imperiling the lives of the inhabitants and endangering property, without being liable for the results of their acts, the state should certainly step in and do what it is possible to do to lessen the dangers.

"If the early reports are to be believed, the dam at Austin had been previously damaged so that it was no longer safe, the owners were advised, yet nothing was done, and no one had the power to compel anything to be done, and yet there is little or no hope that any of those who have suffered will be recompensed by the corporation which entailed this great loss upon them.

Similar Experience at Fergus Falls.

"Fergus Falls had practically the same experience two years ago. A concrete dam, holding almost as much water as the Austin dam was built just above the city. Within ten months, from the day the dam was complete, without any warning, with less than the usual head of water, with less than the normal rainfall, it went out so quickly, early one morning, that the men at work in the dynamo house did not have time to put on their clothes before it was swept down the river and a wall of water 25 feet high rushed down upon the city, a mile below. Fortunately there was room for the water to spread out a little, yet it flooded stores, and washed out every dam in the city, paralyzing business and entailing great loss upon all others on the stream.

Causes Affecting the Collapse.

"The Fergus Falls' dam collapsed from two possible causes, one attributable to the ignorance and irresponsibility of city officials, the other to a desire to get the dam built for far less than it was worth to do it right. The reason assigned by the engineer in charge of the construction, for the collapse is that the officials in his absence and in face of his direct orders not to do it, ordered the orifice of a spring under the dam closed up, thus preventing any outlet and saturating the ground until it had no power of resistance. The other cause, which is accepted by nearly all engineers, and by all intelligent persons who have studied the situation, was the failure, as required by the specifications, to drive steel sheet piling on the upstream side of the dam, which all admit would prevent the water getting under the dam, thus affording an opportunity to erode.

Defects in Dam Construction.

"When the municipality selected an engineer it selected one who had just lost one concrete dam. The site of the dam had the "general reputation" of being treacherous ground, one dam having been built near it. When the bids were called for—the charter required that the work be let to the lowest bidder—the cost was found to be $72,000, while the city had and could spend but $42,000. The engineer said he would find some one who would build it for the amount the city had to expend and returned with a bidder, with whom it was soon openly charged he was in partnership. The steel sheet piling was not driven in at the base of the dam as required by specifications because there was no money to pay for it. The contractor brought by the engineer failed before the work was one-third done, and the engineer assigned his own pay for supervising the construction, before it was earned. The city council then got another contractor who completed the dam on the foundation put in by the original contractors and in ten months it collapsed, wrecking four other dams below it and doing much other damage.

Private Enterprises a Success.

"While the municipality was building its dam above the city, a private company was building one below it. The latter did those things which were needful, expending three times as much money as the city, and its dam not only stood and held its own load, but when the city dam let all the water of its great pond down upon it as well as the water in the four other ponds wrecked at the same time, it withstood that tremendous strain also.

"Concrete dams can be built so that they will do the work for which they are intended, namely to 'impound the water,' and in case our courts are not going to hold the owners of such dams as collapsed at Austin and at Fergus Falls responsible for the damages and losses which they entail upon others, then the Pioneer Press is correct in saying there should be state inspection of dams during construction that the danger of those living below them may be lessened."

PEARL HUNTING IN ROCK RIVER.

Fortunes Are Secured With Garden Rakes at Luverne.

Luverne.—Every pleasant Sunday hundreds of persons armed with garden rakes resort to the banks of Rock river and there rake its bed for pearl-bearing clams. Thousands of dollars' worth of pearls have been found. One pearl sold for $500. A farmer, whose crops were a failure, went pearl hunting and in a week found and sold $85 worth of pearls.

Two Crops in One Season.

Rushmore.—Knute Thomas, a farmer, bids fair to raise his second crop of oats in one season. During the later part of June grasshoppers worked on the grain cutting off much of it which fell to the ground. The crop was harvested in early July and immediately plowed. In a few days a heavy growth appeared and now the grain stands three feet high and is heading out. There are twenty-five acres in the field and no frost has as yet appeared.

WISCONSIN FLOOD

WRECK TERRIBLE DAMAGE TO CITY OF BLACK RIVER FALLS.

BUSINESS SECTION GONE

Side Walls of Immense Power Dam At Hatfield Give Way, and Waters Carry Destruction Down the Valley.

La Crosse.—More than half of the business section of Black River Falls is in ruins, the homes of scores of farmers have been swept away with probably loss of life and the main dam at Hatfield, Wis., momentarily is threatened with destruction which would release a flood that would carry death and destruction before it, as a result of the breaking of the west dyke of the upper Dells dam, following incessant rains which filled the immense reservoirs of the La Crosse Water company to overflowing.

Half of the business section has been utterly destroyed, together with a considerable part of the residence district, and it is admitted by the townspeople who have taken refuge on the high lands, unable to make even an effort for the protection of their stores and homes, that the city will be utterly wiped off the map.

Whether or not lives have been lost is not yet certain, as the people have been scattered.

Business Houses Destroyed.

Between 25 and 30 business houses, comprising all the stores on both sides of two streets in Black River Falls, have been destroyed, together with an equal number of residences. The waters are still rising rapidly and the destruction of the stores on the other two business streets is predicted. The Tremont hotel, a substantial three-story structure, was the first to go, and many others followed.

City Is in Darkness.

The city is in darkness, the electric light plant being one of the first agencies to be put out of commission, adding to the excitement and confusion of the hour.

The disaster was caused by the sudden rise of the Black river behind the two dams of the La Crosse Water Power Company, following rains which lasted almost a week. The dams withstood the pressure, but in each case the river washed around the side, taking out a big section of the river bank and coming down upon the country below in almost as great volume as though the dam had been swept away.

Villages in Path of Flood.

Below Black River Falls are a number of villages, including Roaring Creek, Irving, North Bend, Melrose, Holmen, Lytles, Midway and Onalaska, and the high waters are due to strike them. Forces of men have been sent out to strengthen the bridges in the three counties along the river.

Cut off by telephone, the news from Black River Falls was sent to La Crosse by the Wisconsin Telephone company, which stationed a man on the top of a telephone pole who cut in and sent in his report as well as the flooded lines permitted.

Eleven Feet of Water Over Dam.

Eleven feet of water is pouring over its crest and sweeping down on the stricken city of Black River Falls and the intermediate farms and settlements. The village of Hatfield is under water and the cottages of employes constituting a small village near the powerhouse, two miles below, were abandoned, in fear that the dynamiting of the canal would be insufficient to ward off the destructive flood which threatens to engulf the powerhouse and settlement.

The water power company has had 300 men fighting to prevent the disaster for nearly a week. Farmers had been warned in advance to expect the break at any moment and many of them had fled with their families to safety before the dyke gave way.

During the night, when the real danger was apparent, a general alarm was sent out. Residents of the valley were warned to flee for their lives. In an effort to save those who could not be reached by telephone, Caretaker True of the Dells Dam, mounted a horse and rode at breakneck speed during the remainder of the night, warning farmers to escape. Wagons were loaded with household goods and started for high ground, but as the country is flat for many miles, it is not known whether all escaped.

The present flood is the worst in the history of Black River. Torrential rains above the reservoir sent the water up repeatedly and the efforts of 300 laborers who worked to prevent the disaster, were of no avail. The workmen have been called off, as nothing more can be done, and practically all depends upon the strength of the big dam, and the elements.

A decision by the supreme court on the constitutionality of the so-called employers' liability law of 1908 is expected October 16. It is the case of Henry Schodde against the Twin Falls Land and Water company.

The task of attempting to put an end to all initiative and referendum legislation in this country was begun Wednesday in the supreme court of the United States. Counsel for the Pacific States Telephone & Telegraph company filed a brief attacking a law of Oregon because it was enacted by virtue of the initiative amendment to the state constitution, which is alleged to be in violation of the federal constitution.

Attorney General Wickersham filed a brief in the supreme court of the United States and began his fight before the tribunal to have the principal coal-carrying railroads and coal-owning companies in the anthracite sections adjudged to be in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. An entirely different attack was made on the corporations from that in Pennsylvania, where the government lost in nearly every point.

"JIM" IS FOUND

JAMES P. DYGERT IS ARRESTED AT ARCTANDER, MINN., AFTER MONTH'S HUNT.

HUSBAND IDENTIFIES HIM

Neighbors and St. Paul Pawnbroker Says He Is Much Wanted "Jim." Accused Brought to Jail in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis.—James P. Dygart, arrested in Arctander, Minn., by Sheriff Bonde of Kandiyohi county, was identified as the missing "Jim" sought by the police to explain the mysterious double murder of Mrs. Amelia Bolton and Frank Edward Rhodes on the Bolton farm near Wyoming, Anoka county, Sept. 12.

S. E. Carlisle, neighbor of the Boltons, living near Wyoming, John Reloux, storekeeper at Wyoming, and Morris Effan, proprietor of a pawn shop in St. Paul where "Jim" pawned the Bolton mandolin the night of the murder, and Walter E. Bolton, husband of the murdered woman, identified him in the city jail.

Dygart was brought to Minneapolis from Willmar by Sheriff Bonde. He was met at the train by Sheriff John Casey of Anoka, Carlisle, Effan, Reloux and Bolton.

As Dygart stepped from the train, Sheriff Casey approached him, laid his hand on the man's shoulder and said "Hello, Jim, where have you been all summer?"

"I worked for that man," replied "Jim" pointing to Bolton.

Dygart admitted he had visited Effan's pawn shop and had pawned something but would not admit that it was the stolen mandolin that had belonged in the Bolton home. He told a conflicting story as to his movements after he left the Bolton farm Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 12, the day on which the crime is thought to have been committed. County authorities from Anoka did not place a formal charge of murder against Dygart and it was only through snatches of conversation overheard on the train when he was being brought to Minneapolis that Dygart knew he was wanted for murder. Cool and apparently unruffled he talked to reporters and Sheriff Casey as to his movements after he left the Bolton farm. His story conflicts in many details with the theory of his movements held by County Attorney Pratt and other Anoka authorities. They say their theories have been substantiated with evidence that will be used at his trial.

Dygart told Sheriff Bonde of Kandiyohi county, who arrested him, and Sheriff Casey that he went to work for Stene, the farmer at whose house he was arrested, Sept. 10, two days before the murder. Stene told Sheriff Bonde that he went to work Sept. 18, six days after the murder and four days after the discovery of the bodies of Mrs. Bolton and Rhodes.

His father, Andrew Dygart, he says, lives in Spencer, Wis. Dygart says he was reared there. He was born in what was then Holland, Wis., now changed to Escaton. He knew various people known in Spencer by Sheriff Casey and newspaper men, and could not be shaken in his story of the place he claims as his home.

The peculiar scar on the left side of his neck heralded over the country the day after the discovery of the bodies on the Bolton farm led to "Jim's" arrest.

The murder of Mrs. Bolton and her cousin, Frank Rhodes, was discovered Thursday, Sept. 14. Neighbors heard cattle lowing in the yard and went to see what the trouble was, as the cows acted as if they had not been fed for some time. The house was locked and neighbors broke in a door. At the bottom of the cellar stairs lay the body of Mrs. Bolton, a bullet wound in her back. Blood was on the kitchen floor. An hour later, Fisher Carlisle, son of S. E. Carlisle, discovered the body of Rhodes in a "dead" furrow in a potato patch across the road from the farm house. "Jim" was missing. He was seen last at the Bolton home, Tuesday noon, by two boys who had gone there to take a dog Mr. Bolton had sent to Wyoming. "Jim" told them Mrs. Bolton and her cousin had gone to Minneapolis that day. That was at noon. Two hours later he was seen going into Wyoming with the mandolin in his hand.

Mrs. Bolton and her cousin were killed with a high power rifle, the property of the husband of the dead woman. Four shots were fired into Rhodes and two bullets had penetrated Mrs. Bolton's body. An empty cartridge shell was found in the yard and one loaded shell in the rifle. Nothing that would give the surname of "Jim" could be found in the house. Mrs. Bolton had been assaulted after death, the coroner's investigation showed.

MUNYON PREACHES HOPE PHILOSOPHY

New Association Gaining Many Members.

FAITH'S CURATIVE POWER

NOTED HEALTH EXPERT GIVES REASON FOR BIG SUCCESS IN MEDICINE

Tremendous success has attended the organization of the new Munyon "Hope Cult." Professor Munyon claims that he has secured more converts than he even anticipated, and says that his "Hope Cult" is growing in leaps and bounds. It is said that the total membership of the association throughout the United States is now well over the half million mark.

In a statement for publication Prof. Munyon said:

"I want to talk to every sick, ailing and despondent person in this city. I want to preach my new creed to them. I want to tell them about my new philosophy of health, which is the fruit of a lifetime of study and experience in dealing with sick folk.

"I want to expound the Great Truth that I have learned that there is more curative power in an ounce of Hope than in pounds of Dope. That sick people should not take medicine except as a medium through which the great curative power of Hope may be made effective. Medicines are necessary in the present state of the world's progress because they give a patient physical support and strength and renewed vigor with which to brace up the will power. One knows, from the action of the proper medicines, that he or she is feeling better by this inspired hope and faith, which complete the cure.

"I think that probably a million persons at least in the United States have declared themselves cured by my medicines, and I know that these people have had the best remedies medical science had to offer. I have always contended that if there is any virtue in medicine my followers should have the best, but I verily believe that more than one-half of those who have been lifted to health from the bondage of chronic illness, through taking my medicines, have been really cured by the knowledge that they had the utmost in medical lore at their command, and the Hope this inspired.

"I am not in any sense a practicing physician. I employ at my laboratories in Philadelphia a large staff of expert physicians and chemists, and I have many other physicians in various cities of the United States detailed to give free advice to the sick and afflicted. My headquarters are at Munyon's Laboratories, 53d and Jefferson Sts., Phila., Pa., and I have there a staff of duly registered physicians and consulting experts, and to all who desire it I offer the best of medical advice absolutely free of charge."

Write today, addressing Prof. J. M. Munyon personally, and your letter will have a special care.

"Did I understand you to say, sir," said Colonel Stillwell, "that you regarded that orator's remarks as moonshine?"

"That's what I said," replied the critical person.

"Well, sir, I do not wish to seem captious, but when it comes to comparing that line of talk with a mountain product for whose vigorous qualities I have a large degree of respect, I must say your efforts to be complimentary, sir, go entirely to far."

The Minnesota railroad rate cases, upon which turn the question of the power of the state to regulate intrastate railroad rates when they conflict in any way with interstate rates, were assigned by the United States supreme court for argument Jan. 8.

Addressing the Booster meeting at Fargo, Hugh Chalmers, who did some high financing when connected with the National Cash Register Co., and is now building automobiles at Detroit, Mich., said in opening his address: "The two deadest things I know of, are a summer resort in winter time, and a commercial club that does nothing."

Though the official returns on their face showed a slight majority for the repeal of prohibition in Maine, it is stated now that proposed corrections in these returns, if allowed, will produce a substantial majority against repeal. The liquor interests were fighting for their lives in this campagin and relied only on the argument of money.

The Supreme Court

The supreme court of the United States convened Tuesday after a four months' recess, and will remain in session until the last of next May. It will consider as many of the 800 cases now piled up on the docket as time will permit. An estimate has it that the court will dispose of about 200 cases during the term, but that about 200 additional cases will be docketed before next June.

A long list of important cases, second only to the great Standard Oil and tobacco cases, will demand the attention of the court during the first month. The cases involve alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws. These are the suits against the principal anthracite coal carrying railroads and coal owning companies; against the railroads operating the bridges over the Mississippi at St. Louis, and against James A. Patten and other prominent business men, who are charged with obtaining a corner on the cotton market.

Railroad rates in Minnesota and other states also will be considered. The so-called "elevator cases" will test the power of the interstate commerce commission. Cases involving the rights of Indians to alienate their lands and entry of the so-called "Stacy coal land claims" in Alaska will be contested hotly.

Rural School Notes

To the boys and girls participating in the corn contest:

You are waiting to hear something about the county contest. The reports received are very meager and show conclusively that the conditions have been against us as to raising corn this year. But even though a contest can not be held, the interest manifested and work done by you will have their benefits. You are amateur farmers now and a farmer must know his trade; he must sow in hope, not knowing what the harvest will be; he must learn to labor and to wait. This lesson learned we will redouble the efforts next year. Although there are good samples of garden vegetables raised, the superintendent feels that a contest without a fine display of corn would not be the thing we want. He appreciates greatly the work and interest shown by scholars and teachers.

We have the consolation that our work is along the right lines. The work will grow, we trust, to such an extent that we ultimately will have a well defined course in elementary agriculture and domestic science in our rural schools. We will do better next year. Your superintendent expects to devote the greater part of his time in visiting schools during the fall months. He will be present at the court house on Saturdays.

Next week is the time set for the inauguration of George Edgar Vincent as president of the university of Minnesota. We have an invitation to attend and will be absent from the office for the greater part of the week, returning Friday evening.

This office has not received its order for report cards, certificates of perfect attendance, etc. These supplies will be sent out as soon as received.

All school clerks have been supplied with blanks for taking census reports, and excuse attendance blanks, and blanks for the teacher on which to report non-attendance of children to this office.

Quite a number of clerks have not yet sent in their reports on the school census. This office will appreciate it very much if the law is complied with in this respect. Parents and school boards will do both their teachers and this office a great help if they will inform themselves as to the requirements of the compulsory education law as to attendance of their children in the respective schools. The schools are yours and yours are the opportunities for education afforded your children. Do your duty.

Respectfully submitted,
E. A. MOSTUE.

THE FIRST NUMBER

Congressman Berger, the First Socialist in Congress, at Thief River Falls Monday

The people of the northwest will have an opportunity next Monday to hear a speech by one of the most remarkable men now in the public eye, when Victor L. Berger of Milwaukee will appear at the large auditorium in Thief River Falls as the first number of the list of five attractions comprising the lyceum course for the season of 1911-'12. Mr. Berger holds a unique position before the American public. He is the first socialist member of that great legislative body—the U. S. congress. He is commonly referred to as the "Father of Milwaukee." Social democracy in that city is what it is, whether good or ill, chiefly because of Mr. Berger. He is its pioneer, its propogandist, its sponsor. Its history is mainly his biography as a citizen of Milwaukee. He rocked it in its cradle, reared it, and now exults to see his bantling in control of that great city. During his first term as a member of congress Mr. Berger achieved renown as being the author of the now famous "old age pension" bill, and it is in that connection that he is best known to the American public. As a lyceum speaker Mr. Berger has few equals, and his topics, "Why Milwaukee became Socialist," "The Socialistic View of the Trust Question," and "The French Revolution from a Socialist Point of View" are ranked as masterpieces.

This sterling attraction has been secured for Monday evening, Oct. 16, at the auditorium, Thief River Falls, at a great expense by the local committee. Season tickets for the course of five numbers are now on sale and can be secured by notifying H. O. Kjomme or Oscar Sponheim, Thief River Falls. The citizens of Thief River Falls extend a hearty cordial invitation to the citizens of the northwest to attend any or all of the course entertainments.

A Scheme Worth Two of That

Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture says that the American public can deliver itself forever from the peril of high sugar prices by producing more beet sugar.

We think we know a scheme worth two of that; put sugar on the free list.

The tariff on sugar now costs the American people a couple of cents on every pound of it they buy. Taking the tariff off should reduce the price accordingly.

Beet sugar may be the solution; but it is very slow in coming and besides the sugar trust seems to handle that kind, too. Taking the tariff off sugar would provide immediate and tangible relief to the consumer.—Duluth Herald.

For a State Highway

County Surveyor C. H. Martz is preparing and has about completed a profile and specifications for the construction of a state rural highway, running directly east from Thief River Falls to the east line of Pennington county. These plans will be forwarded in a short time to the state highway commission and it is expected that they will be approved. Mr. Martz was named by the highway commission to do this work.

The road will be constructed under what is known as the Elwell bill, passed at the last session of the legislature, which provides that the state shall pay one-half the cost of construction, the county one-fourth, and the property benefitted one-fourth. It is also understood that a sum will be provided for its maintenance after it has been constructed.

Dr. Dumas Guilty

The case of Dr. D. F. Dumas, the Cass Lake mayor, charged with complicity in an attempted arson case, came to a close last Tuesday when the jury rendered a verdict of guilty after being out an hour and twenty minutes. A stay of sentence was granted pending a decision of the supreme court on questions of law, and he will enjoy his liberty until such decision is rendered, his bond of $10,000 having continued.

The convict mayor has been rearraigned on a new indictment from the grand jury, charging him with attempted theft.

DIED

Ole Larson, who lived three miles east of Hazel, died Friday, Oct. 6, of cancer of the stomach, from which disease he had long been a sufferer. He was born near Christiansand, Norway, and was 55 years of age. He is survived by an older brother, Jorgen Larson.

Honey Sixty Years Old

One thousand pounds of honey, some of it more than sixty years old, was obtained by workmen while tearing down an old tavern in East Lee Massachusets. It was built 150 years ago. A hundred swarms of bees were found in the garret, which no one had entered for 60 years. The keeping qualities of the honey come from its absolute purity and immunity from germs, just as the keeping qualities of golden grain belt beer, are made possible by their absolute germless purity. You owe it to yourself to try them. Order of Alex Thompson, Crookston, or of your dealer.

This has been a great year for the farmers.

GRIEF AND GREED.

Sorely Afflicted, Yet He Kept an Eye on the Main Point.

The following communication was recently addressed by a grief stricken German husband to the secretary of a life insurance company in Germany:

"Sir—Deeply afflicted, I take up my pen to inform you that my dear wife, Anne Maria, nee L——, insured in your company for the sum of $750, has suddenly died, leaving me a victim to the deepest despair. This grievous blow fell on me this morning at 7. Kindly endeavor to let me have my insurance money as promptly as possible. The policy bears the number ——, as you will find by reference to your books.

"I may say very seriously and in all sincerity that she was a faithful wife and an admirable mother. In order that all formalities may be settled with promptitude I inclose herewith a certificate officially recording her death.

"Her illness was but a short one. Nevertheless she suffered intensely, which naturally renders my grief all the more poignant. I have no doubt that you will afford me partial consolation by sending on the insurance money as promptly as possible.

"In return I hereby formally promise to have my second wife insured in your company for $1,500, double the sum for which my defunct darling was insured.

"My grief is immense, yet the conviction that you will afford me consolation sustains me during this terrible ordeal. In the hope that we shall soon draw our insurance money, my children join me in," etc.—Exchange.

CAME ON THE JUMP.

A Signal That Brought the Busy Waiters In a Body.

To get a waiter quickly in a big cafe is at times very difficult, but a Germantown man recently learned a method from a New York friend which is guaranteed instantly to bring not one but several waiters. This Germantown man was giving a dinner in one of Philadelphia's swellest cafes, with the New Yorker and two women as his guests. After a long delay a waiter came and took the order. Then one of the women decided that she must make a change in her order. The host signaled one waiter after another without avail. After about ten minutes of violent gesticulating on his part the New Yorker said:

"You don't know how to attract their attention. I'll bet you $5 I can bring a waiter to this table within thirty seconds."

"I'll take the bet," said the Philadelphian, drawing out his watch. The New Yorker reached over into the middle of the table, picked up a thin, delicate glass and deliberately dashed it to the floor. Instantly every waiter in the room came rushing up to see what was the trouble.

"Charge one tumbler up on the bill," said the New Yorker laconically, "and change one of those oyster orders to Blue Points."

As the waiters dispersed he added, "I guess you owe me a five spot, old man."—Philadelphia Record.

A CONTINGENT ASSET.

The Court Didn't Appoint a Receiver to Administer It.

A woman's way of getting around trouble, especially her ability to answer a question without giving any information, is well known, particularly to the members of the bar that have had occasion to cross words with her on the stand. A woman with a well developed sense of humor once foiled the persistent attempt of W. G. Chapin, late editor of the American Lawyer, to elicit information in supplementary proceedings. He tells the story of the failure himself.

"I had been admitted to the bar but a short time and was a fair specimen of the average theory stuffed, practice wanting, law school graduate. How joyously were the commands of the managing clerk obeyed! Here was the looked for opportunity to demonstrate my ability in the noble art of searchingly examining a recalcitrant witness, a woman!

"Of the two, I fancy, however, that it was the lady who was more self possessed when the proceedings opened. She was a dressmaker and had been sued for debt by a dry goods firm. The examination dragged its slow length along, revealing no assets, until finally came the omnium gatherum query asked as a finisher.

"'Have you any property of any kind or nature, real or personal, or any right or interest in property, that you have failed to mention?'

"Perhaps it was my tone she disliked. At any rate, her eyes snapped. 'Well, I've got what perhaps you wouldn't call an interest, but it's almost as good. It's an expectation. Must I answer?'

"'If you please.' I was encouraged.

"'Well, you see, it's this way. I've got two sisters, and both of 'em have married finely. Now, neither one of them begins to be as good looking as I am.'

"'Yes.' She had me puzzled.

"'Well, I really don't see why I shouldn't have the same show.'

"It is needless to say that there was no receiver appointed to administer this 'asset.'"—Chicago Record-Herald.

A CONFIDING CONSTABLE.

The Way He Helped the Housemaid Repel the Burglars.

A good story is told at the expense of a constable in rural England, says a writer in the London Telegraph.

Not long ago a young and pretty housemaid arrived at the big house of the neighborhood, and it was observed that our friend's beat often took him in that direction. At first she seemed to resent his advances, but suddenly she changed altogether, and the course of true love appeared to run smooth—for a time.

One night he called rather later than usual. It was dark, and his fair one greeted him somewhat coolly, he thought.

His doubts, however, disappeared when she suddenly declared that she would take him into her confidence. She had overheard the particulars of a plot to break into the house and steal the plate.

"Now, Jim," she said, "here's a chance for promotion. The burglars knew where the plate was kept, so we've shifted it. What I want you to do is to get into the plate cupboard and wait till they come and open the door. Then you'll have 'em."

Jim jumped at the chance and half an hour later was concealed in the cupboard. The burglars came, as expected, and promptly got to work.

The constable chuckled to himself as he heard the muffled whir of a tool on the outside of the cupboard door, and he grasped his staff and waited.

After some minutes' waiting he resolved to take a cautious peep. But the door was fast, securely screwed on the outside by the burglars.

When Jim eventually roused the house and was released from his prison the burglars and plate, together with the pretty housemaid (a confederate), had disappeared. Moreover, the constable's position took a good deal of explaining away.

Awkward, But No Chump.

Once there was a pretty woman who came upon a huge ostrich in the desert.

"Foolish bird," said the pretty woman. "You cover your head with sand and think you are out of sight."

The huge ostrich laughed.

"My dear madam," he chuckled, "there is nothing foolish about that. Don't you cover your head with a hat decorated with my feathers and think you are 'out of sight?'"

Moral.—The ostrich is an awkward bird and eats horseshoes, but he can hit back in other ways than with his big feet.—Chicago News.

Improvement.

Bacon—How is your wife?

Egbert—Improving, thank you.

"Why, I didn't know she'd been ill!"

"She hasn't, but she bought a bonnet today for $4. She used to buy the sixteen dollar kind, you know."—Yonkers Statesman.

The affairs of the Wylie elevator are as yet unsettled. The process of checking the accounts and weighing up the grain on hand is not yet completed, and Richards' friends are confident that no shortage will be disclosed. We are informed that we were in error last week in stating that that it had been previously understood by the farmers that Richards was to sell flax in Duluth in his own name.

Took First Premium

St Hilaire Cooperative creamery butter took first premium on eastern butter at the Interstate fair held at Spokane, Wash., last week, with a score of 94.

The score of the second prize was 92½ and on first prize on western butter was 93.

The butter was in competition with whole milk butter from the Hutchinson district, famed for its good product. It was exhibited by a retail firm of Spokane, and Mr. Hed, the manager of the St. Hilaire creamery, had not known that it was to be entered. This is a long mark to the credit of our creamery and its manager.

J. W. Purviance, Editor McNairy County Independent, Selmer, Tenn., says: "The instrument (Lombard Piano) fills our highest expectations. It is not only a rare beauty in its outward finish, but the tone is round, full, rich and sweet. Your firm has proven to be prompt and reliable in its dealings with me."

J. Ernest Paxson, Editor Press, Parkersburg, Pa., says: "I must say that the Lombard sent me is a beautiful instrument, and a credit to a standard firm. We are more than satisfied."

R. S. Knapp, President Federal Charter Co., Washington, D. C., says: "We now realize after a careful and comprehensive trial of the Lombard by many musical artists of Washington, that it stands second to none, regardless of price or make. Every one who has tried this instrument is enthusiastic in its praise."

These are samples of hundreds of enthusiastic letters received in every mail.

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The Silver Cup at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and adjoining preemptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) are to be had in the choicest districts.

Schools convenient, climate excellent, soil the very best, railways close at hand, building lumber cheap, fuel easy to get and reasonable in price, water easily procured, mixed farming a success.

ROYALTON BANKERS PLEAD.

Cashier and President of Institution Answer to Indictments.

Little Falls—H. J. Schwartz and Henry A. Schwartz, pleaded not guilty to indictments returned by the grand jury here and were released on $2,000 bail. The former is cashier and the latter president of the State bank of Royalton, which recently was declared to be insolvent.

H. J. Schwart was arraigned on four counts, two charging him with accepting deposits after the bank was insolvent, and two accusing him of larceny in the first degree. He is charged with embezzling funds belonging to E. E. Crome while acting as his agent, and with the larceny of $12,000 from Joseph Woltman also while acting as agent.

Henry A. Schwartz was indicted on two counts charging him with accepting money when the bank was insolvent. The cases have not been set but probably will not come up until next January owing to other business of the court.

St. Paul. — The committee in charge of St. Paul's Tag day collected $13,388.36 to aid in the campaign against tuberculosis.

Campbell.—Several cases of suspected incendiarism have come to light, but all efforts to locate the firebug have proved futile.

Elk River.—Elk River is to have a box factory. A plant is being erected by W. H. Ebner, formerly of Dayton, who expects to have it in running order in a few weeks. It will employ sixteen men.

Chaska.—Ten freight cars that made up an extra freight train on the Milwaukee road, ran into a washout a mile east of Chaska. The train was derailed, causing considerable damage, but the crew escaped.

Cloquet.—Mayor C. I. McNair has declined renomination on account of the pressure of private business. The city election takes place Nov. 7 and nominations will be by petition instead of in caucus, as formerly.

Winona.—Farmers in the vicinity of Lewiston believe they have not been getting as much for their livestock as they should, and a meeting has been called for Saturday for the purpose of forming a stock shipping association.

Winona.—The experiment has been tried in Winona of having one street, Wabasha, kept in repair by the use of the King drag. The result is that the street is in the best repair of any of the dirt roads in the city, being almost entirely free of chuck holes. The experiment has worked so well that the use of the King drag may be extended to other streets next year.

Minneapolis. — Otto N. Sverdrup, who was navigator of the steamer Fram on the Nansen polar expedition and who is a member of the Royal Geographical Society of England, made declaration of his intention to become a citizen of the United tSates. Capt. Sverdrup said he intended sailing for Europe shortly and said he would bring back his wife and three daughters. He will make his home in Minneapolis.

Rochester.—Rochester Lodge No. 1091, B. P. O. E., will celebrate its fourth anniversary with the dedication of its new home, costing about $75,000, which has just been completed. The local lodge of Elks was organized October 24, four years ago, and the festivities marking the culmination of a long anticipation for a first-class home will be held October 25-26. The Rochester lodge has a membership of more than two hundred.

Anoka.—The dead body of an unknown negro aged about 60 years was found in the woods on the George McCauley farm by hunters. According to the coroner the man had been dead eight weeks. The body was brought to this city and an examination of it will be made tomorrow. No person resembling the description is missing from this locality. It is believed that the man came from the Twin City. Murder has been hinted at, but the authorities are inclined to believe death resulted from natural causes.

Le Sueur Center. — After being out five hours, the jury in the case of Hall Greene, the colored boy, who was on trial for the murder of Harry Rugg, returned a verdict of not guilty. The murder was committed at Le Sueur on the night of July 29, 1911. Greene at first said that a hobo, Pat Masterson, committed the crime and afterwards accused Fred Felber, a railroad employe at Le Sueur and later confessed that he himself committed the crime. The confession was introduced in evidence. The evidence was very strong against Greene and it is thought that the jury founded their verdict on the fact that the boy was small and it was not possible for him to commit the crime as it was committed.

Winnebago.—Five skeletons have been dug up in the Van Blair sand pit near the city. Owing to the fact that Indian relics have been found in that vicinity from time to time, it is thought that the skeletons are those of Indians. One of the skeletons was very large.

Bemidji.—Dr. D. F. Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, was found guilty of arson in the third degree. Dr. Dumas was charged with having attempted, with Martin Behan, to burn the postoffice building at Puposky early in the morning of June 17. The case will be appealed.

Faribault.—Mayor Blodgett stopped the Jesse James pictures, which were to be shown at a Faribault theater. Club women of the city were first to protest. They called the attention of the mayor to the pictures and he did not hesitate to act.

Rochester.—Bishop Patrick Hefferon continues to show a gradual improvement from his operation for acute appendicitis, and while still in a serious condition, everything favors his ultimate recovery. Archbishop John Ireland of St. Paul arrived in Rochester to visit the bedside of the Winona prelate.

Not in Circulation There.

An error of a new clerk in the mailing department of an eastern publisher was responsible, the other day, for the mailing of a prospectus to a world-famous statesman, who had been dead for some years. The letter was returned a few days later with the following indorsement: "In Heaven,—1911. Gentlemen: As your publications are not permitted to circulate here, I believe it would be useless for me to subscribe for them. Yours respectfully," and here followed the name of the famous statesman.

RASH ALL OVER BABY'S BODY

Itched So He Could Not Sleep

"On July 27, 1909, we left Boston for a trip to England and Ireland, taking baby with us. After being in Ireland a few days a nasty rash came out all over his body. We took him to a doctor who gave us medicine for him. The trouble started in the form of a rash and was all over baby's body, head and face, at different times. It irritated, and he would scratch it with all his might. The consequence was it developed into sores, and we were afraid it would leave nasty scars on his face.

"When we reached England we took baby to another doctor, who said his condition was due to change of food and climate, and gave more medicine. The rash got no better, and it used to itch and burn at night so bad that the child could not sleep. He was completely covered with it at different times. It was at this time that my mother advised us to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for about nine months the places disappeared. There are not any scars, or other kind of disfigurement, and baby is completely cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. We have no further trouble with baby's skin. Nothing stopped the itching, and allowed baby to sleep but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. Margaret Gunn, 29 Burrell St., Roxbury, Mass., March 12, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 14 K, Boston.

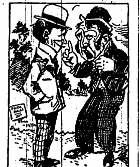
SPLENDID CANADIAN CROPS

Wheat, Oats and Barley Universally Good Throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The reports that come to hand from the wheat fields of the western Canadian provinces show remarkably good yields in all parts. Yields are recorded of wheat going 35 and 40 bushels in many places, and oats from 60 to 100 bushels per acre. Barley and flax are splendid. The thousands of Americans throughout the United States who have friends in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta will be pleased to learn of the great success that has followed their efforts. Many of these have not confined themselves to the growing of grain, but have also gone into the cattle industry. On the luxurious grasses that are so abundant there, in almost all districts, make this industry safe and profitable. The land sales reported by the railway companies and by the different land companies show the great increase that will likely take place during the next year in farming operations. What has been said time and time again may now be well repeated, that there is no place on the American continent where the same opportunities are afforded the man looking for a home, for the young man starting out in life, the man with a growing up family, who desires wider scope for his ambition. The Canadian government agents located at different points in the states will be glad to advise the reader of the conditions, and relate to him instances of the great success that has followed farming in Western Canada.

THEN HE GOT WORSE.



The Angry Man—I see the scoundrel in your face.

The Calm Man—That's a personal reflection.

Some Mosquitoes.

"Yes," said the traveler who had just returned from South Africa. "I was one day so annoyed by mosquitoes that I was compelled to take refuge in an old iron safe which lay discarded on the veldt.

"My first emotions of joy at my happy deliverance were barely over when the mosquitoes, scenting me, began to drive their stingers through the safe. Fortunately, I had a hammer in my pocket and as fast as their stingers came through the iron I clinched them, until at length such a host of them was fastened down in this way that, when they started to fly away, they carried me and that safe miles.

"Then, one by one, they died with the exertion, and I was able to come out with safety. Yes, wonderful things happen in foreign parts."—Ideas.

An Exacting Situation.

"Doctor," said the nervous man, "is there any way of teaching a person to talk in his sleep?"

"I never heard of any," replied the physician. "How could such an accomplishment be of benefit?"

"It's either that or insomnia for me. My wife is one of the best suffragette speakers before the public. She always rehearses her orations at home, and I've got to say 'hear! hear!' or 'that's the stuff!' at least once every ten minutes."—Washington Star.

A FINE NIGHT-CAP

The Best Thing in the World to Go to Bed and Sleep On.

"My wife and I find that 4 teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and a cup of hot milk, or some cream, with it, makes the finest night-cap in the world," says an Alleghany, Pa., man.

"We go to sleep as soon as we strike the bed, and slumber like babies till rising time in the morning.

"It is about 3 years now since we began to use Grape-Nuts food, and we always have it for breakfast and before retiring and sometimes for lunch. I was so sick from what the doctors called acute indigestion and brain fag before I began to use Grape-Nuts that I could neither eat, sleep nor work with any comfort.

"I was afflicted at the same time with the most intense pains, accompanied by a racking headache and backache, every time I tried to eat anything. Notwithstanding an unusual pressure from my professional duties, I was compelled for a time to give up my work altogether.

"Then I put myself on a diet of Grape-Nuts and cream alone, with an occasional cup of Postum as a runner-up, and sometimes a little dry toast. I assure you that in less than a week I felt like a new man; I had gained six pounds in weight, could sleep well and think well.

"The good work went on, and I was soon ready to return to business, and have been hard at it, and enjoying it ever since.

"Command me at any time any one enquires as to the merits of Grape-Nuts. You will find me always ready to testify." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

GUARDED THE TOMBS

Indian Girls Keep Watch Over Ancestors' Graves.

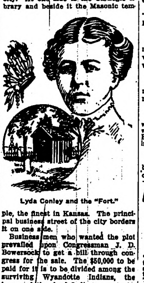
While the Garrison Made a Sortie for Legal Defense, a Marshal, by Court's Order, Demolished the "Fort."

Kansas City, Kan.—After four years of unceasing vigilance the garrison of the Indian "fort" in Huron cemetery was defeated by a trick and the building demolished. The three Conley sisters, defenders of the burial ground of their ancestors, were tempted to make a general sortie for the legal defense of their home, the first time it had been left without one of the sisters in charge. Meanwhile another branch of the law visited the fort and left it in ruins.

While the three sisters—Ida, Lyda and Lena—were in the Wyandotte county district court hearing the arguments in the last legal step taken to hold the cemetery, W. H. Mackey, United States marshal, and two deputies tore down the "fort." In accordance with an order issued by Judge Pollock in the federal court the marshal and his men removed the building, broke it to pieces with axes and threw the pieces into the alley in the rear of the cemetery. The men had finished their work and left the cemetery before the sisters knew what was happening.

Miss Lyda Conley said her mother's grave rested under the building. "The spirits of my father and mother," said Miss Lyda Conley grimly, "and the spirits of my ancestors told me to build this watch tower and protect the noble Indians who lie buried here."

The old Huron cemetery is in the heart of the business district of this city. At one side is the Carnegie library and beside it the Masonic temple, the finest in Kansas. The principal business street of the city borders it on one side.



Lyda Conley and the "Fort."

Business men who wanted the plot prevailed upon Congressman J. D. Bowersock to get a bill through congress for the sale. The $50,000 to be paid for it is to be divided among the surviving Wyandotte Indians, the bones of the dead Indians are to be removed and the place converted into a site for a business block.

The Conley sisters immediately took up the fight. They tried every resource of the law unsuccessfully. Miss Lyda appealed in person before the Supreme court of the United States, the first woman to be accorded that right, but was unsuccessful, although the court, in sympathy, told her it was "driven" to decide against her.

Then it was that the three built their watch tower and began a shotgun patrol of the cemetery. The matter was finally decided in the courts, when Judge Pollock issued the mandate setting the time for vacation.

Turn and turn about they took in the watch tower they had built in the center of the tract, the sentinel always having a loaded shotgun near her. Each one swore no United States marshal should enforce the federal court's decree, finally dispossessing them of the land.

The basis of the Conley sisters' claim was that their grandfather, "who once owned the whole state of Ohio," a chief of the Wyandottes, signed the treaty with the government in 1855 in which this cemetery was given to the Indians.

"From a legal standpoint we are entitled to this small tract of ground," Miss Lyda Conley said, "at least you would think so when the bones of our people already lie buried there. This turn the thing has taken simply means that the United States government is once more breaking its faith with the Indians."

WOMAN TURNS HOSE ON JUDGE

Appeal to Keep Street Dry on County Court Day Is Met With Shower Bath.

Frankfort, Ky.—Police Judge Herndon got a bath when he pleaded with Mrs. Jennie Cardwell to stop sprinkling the street in front of her residence. She was keeping the street wet so it could not be used comfortably by farmers assembled in town for the monthly "County Court day." Judge Herndon requested her to stop sprinkling the street. She turned the hose on Herndon and made him go home by the back streets for dry clothes.

Mrs. Cardwell is a prominent woman of the Kentucky capital and like a good many others, her old family home is near the public square. The County Court day is a picturesque sight to strangers, but residents get a little tired of having a string of horses, mules and cows tied to the front fence all day while traders haggle over terms.

Mice Eat Woman's False Teeth.

Greeley, Colo.—Mrs. George Wallace, wife of a business man, found that two husky mice had stolen her false teeth and tried to draw them into a hole in the wall. Failing in that they made a hearty meal of the rubber part and then left the molars where she stepped on them and ruined them be- [illegible]

TOO MUCH FOR HACK DRIVER

High-Sounding Name Made Old Man Think There Was Something Mysterious in the Wind.

After a long, hot, and dusty journey by train the New York commercial traveler arrived in Richmond, brushed enough dust off his face to make sure that the right man was getting off, and hailed one of the little sea-going hacks common in the Old Dominion city. It was driven by an aged negro. "Drive me to a haberdashery," said the traveling man, surveying his soiled raiment with disfavor. "Yessuh," said the negro. "Giddup." The old horse started off at a little stiff-legged jog trot. The driver seemed to be thinking deeply. By and by he pulled the horse to a stop, and leaned backward to his fare. "Scuse me, suh," said he, "but wey did you all want to go?" "Drive me to a haberdashery," said the traveling man. "Oh, yessuh," said the negro. "To be sure. Giddup." The hack rattled on for a little way, and then the negro stopped, got off the box and poked his head in over the little door. "Mebbe Ah didn't get dat name jus' right," said he. "Would you all mine repeatin' it, suh?" The traveling man said for the third time that he wanted to go to a haberdashery. The old driver shook his gray wool and looked grieved. "Ah'm an ole man," said he. "Youah kin trus' me. Wheah is it you really want to go?"

Circumstantial Evidence.

A Scotchman and his wife were visiting in a wild, beautiful part of the country. While driving one day with their host, the two men sitting together in the front seat while the lady sat behind, they crossed a high bridge which spanned a roaring torrent. An unusually loud splash caught the gentlemen's attention for a moment, but nothing was said. After several miles the gentleman turned to address a remark to his wife, but her seat was empty.

"Aye," he remarked to his host, "that will be yon splash we heard."—Housekeeper.

A Reader Cures His Constipation—Try It Free

Simple Way for Any Family to Retain the Good Health of All Its Members.

The editors of "Health Hints" and "Questions and Answers" have one question that is put to them more often than any other, and which, strangely enough, they find the most difficult to answer. That is "How can I cure my constipation?"

Dr. Caldwell, an eminent specialist in diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels has looked the whole field over, has practised the specialty for forty years and is convinced that the ingredients contained in what is called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, has the best claim to attention from constipated people.

Its success in the cure of stubborn constipation has done much to displace the use of salts, waters, strong cathartics and such things. Syrup Pepsin, by training the stomach and bowel muscles to again do their work naturally, and with its tonic ingredients strengthening the nerves, brings about a lasting cure. Among its strongest supporters are Mr. John Graveline of 96 Milwaukee Ave., Detroit, Mich., Mr. J. A. Vernon of Oklahoma City and thousands of others. It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, or if you want to try it first a free sample bottle can be obtained by writing the doctor.

CHINESE VICTORS

BATTLE AT HANKOW REGARDED AS AT LEAST FAVORABLE TO GOVERNMENT.

MORE FIGHTING IN SIGHT

Dragon Forces Hold Trenches, but are Said to Have Lost Heavily—Revolution Seems to Be Losing.

Hankow, China. — The first battle since the arrival of the imperial troops from the north was fought on the north bank of the Han river, just west of this city. It was indecisive, however, although the revolutionists temporarily drove the imperial troops back from their position. But in doing so, they exhausted their rifle ammunition and were forced to retire.

The revolutionists, with infantry and artillery, attacked the government troops which were reinforced from the Chinese warships in the river, and supported by the guns of the fleet. While the fighting was in progress the thirteen foreign vessels in the river landed a joint force under command of Vice Admiral Sir Alfred L. Winsloe, commander of the British eastern fleet, who because of his seniority, has been given the direction of the men engaged in the protection of the foreign concessions.

The Red Cross neutral camp, in charge of Dr. MacWillie of the American mission, received and cared for the rebel wounded.

Renewal of Fighting Expected.

About 2,000 revolutionists were pitted against an equal number of loyal soldiers. This evening the imperial troops are waiting reinforcements, while the revolutionists are replenishing their supplies. A renewal of hostilities may take place soon as it appears to be the plan of the rebel leaders to force the fighting before the imperial troops have been further strengthened. The latter had intended to delay an attack upon Wu-Chang until their numbers were sufficient to make a victory probable, and it had been rumored that there would be no battle before next Saturday.

The rebels who occupy Wu-Chang, Hankow and Han Yong, were alive to the government's purpose and 2,000 men crossed the Yang-Tse-Kiang river from Wu-Chang and at daybreak they fell upon the imperial camp. Fighting was severe, but it is impossible to estimate the casualties as the correspondents were not permitted near the firing line, and those who witnessed the battle from the river were fired upon.

At the first sound of firing Admiral Chen-Ping, in command of the Chinese warships, ordered men landed to support General Chang Piao, formerly commander of the troops of the Wu-Chang district, who had assumed command of the imperial troops. The rebels had anticipated this move by the fleet and directed a hot fire upon the warships and the landing parties from the Wu-Chang bank of the river.

Admiral Sah, in turn, ordered the warships to fire upon the rebel field pieces. The warship officers, however, were seriously handicapped by the danger to the foreign concessions involved in their fire.

The engagement continued for several hours, while the combined land and ship forces of the imperials were driven some distance back, and the rebels, retiring, recrossed the river to Wu-Chang.

Some of the rebels applied at the foreign concessions to learn whether they would be protected if they entered the concessions. The foreign forces are, however, concerned with the protection of foreign interests only. No trouble at present is expected.

Pekin.—The Chinese government claims to have won a great victory at Hankow and announces that the troops hold the station, where the troop trains are arriving rapidly. Although this appears to be an exaggeration, the feeling prevails here that the government has really achieved an important moral victory.

Another battle is expected hourly.

The belief has been held here that if the first encounter between the revolutionaries and loyal troops proved decisive, the supremacy would be settled there and then. Only a few unimportant towns outside of Hankow, Wu Chang and Han Yang, have taken part in the rising. Nanking, Chang-Sha, Canton and other cities of known revolutionary tendencies have not responded to the call of the insurgents, so far as can be learned.

United States Tender Sinks in the Missouri River.

St. Louis, Mo. — A message was received at the United States army engineers' office telling of the sinking of the United States light tender Lily in the Missouri river near Camden. It had a crew of 20 men.

SHOWS GREAT POWER

5,000 H. P. AWAITING DEVELOPMENT IN THE ZUMBRO.

Investigations Show Feasibility of Plan That Would Help Prevent Floods in Red River.

There is 8,000 horse power and possibly more awaiting development on Big Fork river in Koochiching county and on the Zumbro river in Wabasha county is the report made by Robert Follansbee, of the United States geological survey, who has completed the preliminary investigation of the rivers. The survey of Zumbro river will begin this week and that of the Big Fork soon.

5,000 Horse Power in the Zumbro.

Mr. Follansbee estimates that at low water the Big Fork will produce more than 3,000 horse power, and Zumbro river at the same stage more than 5,000. By the erection of reservoirs the water power possibilities of both these rivers could be greatly increased, as the flow of water then could be controlled.

The survey of Red lake to ascertain whether it could be used as a reservoir for storing the water which when released would maintain an even flow in Red Lake river has been completed, and it was found that the plan is feasible. The construction of the dam will tend to prevent the overflowing of Red river, into which Red Lake river runs. Nearly every year countless acres along the Red river are flooded so as to make cultivation impossible, and often the growing crop is ruined. This year at one time the power plant at Thief River Falls on Red Lake river was useless on account of lack of water and the town was dark.

Government May Help Build Dam.

As Red river is navigable and the construction of the dam at Red lake will have an effect on it, the reservoir probably will be constructed by the United States government, the state, and cities such as Thief River Falls and Crookston that will be directly benefited.

Big Fork river will carry the water from many drainage ditches soon to be built and it is important that the river's capacity be ascertained, so there will be no overflowage. The Big Fork empties into Rainy river fifteen miles below International Falls.

The survey of Zumbro river will show what must be done to prevent floods that annually destroy growing crops and prevent the use of much fine agricultural land. The Zumbro empties into the Mississippi at Wabasha.

The surveys made by the United States geological survey do not in any way determine what action is to be taken, but the data are at the disposal of the state and the federal government. The survey of the state is nearly completed, but the report will not be issued until 1913, to allow for gauging records over a longer period of years.

DR. JACKOLA'S BODY FOUND.

Duluth Doctor Missing Since June 21 Believed a Suicide.

Duluth. — The dead body of Dr. John Jackola, the Duluth physician who has been missing since June 21, was found in the woods a short distance east of this city. Dr. Jackola was a Finnish doctor who had established a large practice here. He was one of the leading physicians of this city but was known to be quite eccentric. During late years he has been a friend of woman's suffrage and this spring delivered several lectures to clubs in New York and Brooklyn.

While in the East he sprang into notoriety, because of his connection with Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. Because of his persistence in paying uninvited attention to this society leader and the sending of sentimental poetry, she caused his arrest. Upon his promise to desist he was released.

He left his quarters at the Kitchi Gammi club on the evening of June 21, and had not been heard from since. That he committed suicide is the popular theory.

It is expected the engineers will proceed with the work as long as the weather will permit, expecting to reach this city before severe weather is experienced. The plan is to have the line parallel the public highways with a right-of-way adjoining not less than fifty feet. Mr. Knight expects to present the matter to the business men of the city in a short time.

ARRESTED IN NEW MEXICO.

Former Indian Agent in Trouble With Crandall.

St. Paul. — Former Chief Special Indian Agent W. E. Johnson has been arrested in Santa Fe, N. M., according to a dispatch received by the State Central Prohibition committee. The charge, according to the dispatch, concerns accusations by Johnson against E. J. Crandall, former Indian agent for the district of New Mexico. Johnson first was released on $500 bail, according to the report, but this was later raised to $3,000. In a signed statement in the Northwestern Patriot, a prohibition publication, Johnson gave as his chief reason for resigning from the service, the trouble he had had with Crandall. He said Crandall was part owner of a drug company that sold liquor illegally to the Indians and said further that Crandall and his political friends prevented him from doing his work. Minneapolis friends of Johnson believe it was for this statement or a similar one made in New Mexico that Johnson was arrested.

A Fly Paradise.

First Housefly—Howdy, old pal? What sort of a season have you had?

Second Fly—Much the same as usual. Didn't take any outing this year. I'm at my old quarters in the livery stable.

First Fly—Pretty dull, I should say. I've been in clover. That's right. If there ever was a fly Eden, I found it. Listen. No screens, baldheaded owner, baldheaded baby, flypaper easy to eat and three fat women who couldn't swat an elephant. I'm going back there next summer.

The Angler's Bait.

A well-known angler at Peterborough having obtained a wasps' nest containing a large number of grubs, placed the nest in the kitchen oven to kill the grubs so that he could use them for bait.

The next morning he went to get the grubs, but on opening the oven door a swarm of wasps flew out. The oven was not hot enough to kill the grubs, but was sufficiently warm to hatch them.—London Daily Mail.

FROM TEXAS

Some Coffee Facts From the Lone Star State.

From a beautiful farm down in Texas, where gushing springs unite to form babbling brooks that wind their sparkling way through flowery meads, comes a note of gratitude for delivery from the coffee habit.

"When my baby boy came to me five years ago, I began to drink Postum, having a feeling that it would be better for him and me than the old kind of drug-laden coffee. I was not disappointed in it, for it enabled me, a small, delicate woman, to nurse a bouncing, healthy baby 14 months.

"I have since continued the use of Postum for I have grown fond of it, and have discovered to my joy that it has entirely relieved me of a bilious habit which used to prostrate me two or three times a year, causing much discomfort to my family and suffering to myself.

"My brother-in-law was cured of chronic constipation by leaving off coffee and using Postum. He has become even more fond of it than he was of the old coffee.

"In fact, the entire family, from the latest arrival (a 2-year-old who always calls for his 'potie' first thing in the morning), up to the head of the house, think there is no drink so good or so wholesome as Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Politicians in Washington think that President Taft's trip around the country is doing more harm than good, and there is fear among the southern republicans that the democrats will win in 1912 unless something is done. To this effect a late press dispatch. But everybody well knows that that necessary something is just the thing that Mr. Taft's backers do not want done.

Associate Justice John Harlan, senior member of the supreme court of the United States, aged 78, died at his home in Washington last Saturday, after a brief illness, of bronchitis, which developed complications. He had served on the bench thirty-four years. Thus passed the last friend of the common people on the supreme bench, It is now up to President Taft to make another appointment.

Despite the prayers of the churches and the protests of the prohibitionists, Secretary of Agriculture Wilson presided over the brewers' congress. In his address he said he ignored the storm of protests. He admitted that his critics were honest, conscientious, and well meaning people; but considered that their theories were not stable enough to run the government. He may realize later that he has made a mistake.

Italy has the navy and the Turks in their fighting gear are poor swimmers. Turkey has discoovered that when a nation wants a navy it wants one awfully bad.

J. P. Morgan, worth $50,000,000 has been assessed according to the New York tax list on only $800,000 worth of property. This is one of the mysteries of our system of taxation and one, incidentally, which tends to make a socialist of the small householder.

A Fight for Fair Play

It seems appropriate that Bemidji, cradle of the Northern Minnesota Development association and home of its secretary, should be the one place above all others to begin anew the fight for fair play in the legislature.

That it isn't fair that underrepresented northern Minnesota should suffer at the hands of overrepresented southern Minnesota, is too well known to need comment.

On the threshold of a magical transformation from a timbered to a farm dotted domain, northern Minnesota is most in need of legislation.

The only way to get it is to have servants of the north in the capitol at St Paul.

The only way to get them there is to wipe out the present unjust apportionment of representation and replace it with an equitable one.

At Brainerd in December of last year Gov. Eberhard told the Northern Minnesota Development association that unless the legislature passed a reapportionment bill he would reassemble it for that purpose.

The lawmakers met, a reapportionment bill was introduced; it passed the house but objection was raised in the senate on the ground that the cities were to be overrepresented, and the bill failed.

But as that measure sank into the waters of defeat the last gurgle heard was from a senator from the south who declared he was ready to vote for a bill that would be fair to the north.

Never at any time, in house or senate, did any one deny the fact that the north was entitled to more representation,

Following the defeat of the first reapportionment bill a second one was drawn by close friends of the north and was introduced by Senator A. L. Hanson of this district.

This was only a few days before the day set for final adjournment. The bill never was considered.

It can not be said that the legislature would not pass a bill that would be fair to the north; a bill providing, as did the one introduced by Senator Hanson, a representative for every county.

The expense of reconvening the legislature should not be urged as an argument against such a move for a fair representation to the north would mean that the cost of reassembling the lawmakers would be gained many times over.

There has been agitation for an extra session to pass railway legislation, and while the Pioneer has not thought that some of the things asked for along that line were all that might be desired, it quickly is apparent that, when common people must pay 3 cents a mile to travel and freight rates must boost the already alarmingly high cost of every day necessities, railroad legislation is in itself an important issue, and in event of an unfavorable decision on the Minnesota rate cases by the federal supreme court Jan. 8 next, the railroad question would be of enough importance to call together the lawmakers.

But any railroad legislation possible at this time, or any other legislation, is, in the opinion of the Pioneer, secondary to the great overshadowing issue of reapportionment.

This must not be taken in the light of an attack on Gov. Eberhard. It simply is an effort to show him that the north is ready to fight for her rights. It is true that the governor has said he would issue a call for an extra session, but he did not say when that call would be issued. It is reasonable to presume that if the St. Cloud convention is definite on the point that there should be an extra session, the governor would bow to the will of that powerful organization, standing as it does behind the north.

The Pioneer calls upon all citizens to force the fight, and in the interests of this part of the state and in behalf of their own interest it calls upon the newspapers to join in the crusade to make the voice of the north thunder its demands at the St. Cloud convention.—Bemidji Pioneer.

Short Course for 1911-'12

A term of five months, to be known as the "short course," will begin at the Lincoln high school building in Thief River Falls on Monday, Oct. 30.

This course will be open to all young people over 16 years of age in this and adjoining counties, who for various reasons cannot attend school but part of the school year. No qualifications but that as to age are necessary to enroll, There are no charges of any kind for this course and all books, supplies, and other school material are furnished free.

Students will be permitted to begin the daily recitations at any hour that suits their convenience, though it is suggested that they start at 9 o'clock, Those from the country having chores to perform may be dismissed at an early hour in the afternoon.

The studies will consist of lessons in ordinary English, including a study of composition and the commonest forms of the language; practical arithmetic and its application to the affairs of every day life; the keeping of accounts and a study of ordinary business forms; spelling, writing, and typewriting, if desired; cooking and sewing for girls; iron and wood work for the boys, and this includes the making of articles for service in the home and on the farm; agriculture, The last named subject will be particularly emphasized for the benefit of the students who are interested in agricultural pursuits.

All the departments in the school are well equipped with books, material, and machinery for the presentation of the proposed work. A special teacher has been hired to assist the regular teachers with the special course studies. The wood working shop is large and complete and the equal of anything in the northwestern part of the state. A new blacksmith shop has been recently built and is at the service of all students desiring to take this work. The agriculture department now occupies three rooms and is ready to do most efficient work. All other departments are prepared in a similar manner for service.

The students enrolling for the short course will receive credit on the regular school records for what they accomplish, and they will not be prohibited from entering any grammar grade or high school classes for which they have the necessary preparation. All literary, class, and athletic organizations are open to the short course students.

Many girls can secure places to work their board in good homes in the city and thus reduce the expense of attending the school to a minimum. Board and room at reduced rates for students can always be obtained.

The board of education cordially invites all young people in city or country who can not attend school all the year to enroll in the short course for the whole term or at least for a portion of the work. Everything connected with the school is absolutely free. No other town in northern Minnesota makes this generous offer.

Further information may be obtained by writing J. H. Hay, superintendent of the city schools.

What is Your Family Worth?

If your family is worth the best you can afford in house and food and clothes, is it not worth the best reading as well? And the best reading—best for boys and girls, best for men and women—is to be found in The Youth's Companion.

Of stories alone The Companion will print nearly 300 in 1912. With all the rest of the paper thrown in, and counting the glorious long serial stories they cost the subscriber less than a cent apiece. Moreover, you will look long before you find stories so varied and interesting—stories of coolness in the face of peril, strange adventures with creatures of the forest and the sea, moving stories of life's obscure heroisms, stories breezy with good natured humor, quaint and curious character sketches.

Now is the time to subscribe, for you will receive free from the time your $1.75 is received all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1911, containing the opening chapters of Ralph D. Paine's great serial story of the Boxer rebellion, "The Cross and the Dragon," And there is the gift of The Companion calendar for 1912, "On the New England Coast," lithographed in ten colors and gold. Only $1.75 now for the fifty-two weekly issues, but on Jan. 1, 1912, the subscription price will be advanced to $2.00.

A Question For the King.

Divinity doth not always hedge a king. There have been many rulers who could take as well as give in the joking line. The most striking instance of this kind is seen in the case of Charles II., that good natured Stuart, who once asked his chaplain, Dr. Stillingfleet:

"How is it that you always read your sermons before me when, as I understand, you can preach eloquently enough elsewhere without book or notes?"

The good doctor answered that he was so overwhelmed by his majesty's presence that he could not trust himself otherwise, continuing, "And now, sire, may it please you to tell me why you read your speeches when you have no such excuse?"—St. Louis Republic.

Her Own Coin.

There was quite a scene the other night at a certain bridge party. A loser paid a lady with her own I. O. U.'s. The lady said it was most ungentlemanly. She said she wouldn't have minded being paid back in her own coin, but she disliked paper money.—

He Was with Cook

"I was with Cook," the stranger said;
Said the farmer, "Say no more,
But sit with me at my humble board
And eat my frugal store."
"I was with Cook," the stranger cried.
"Said the farmer, "Don't you care;
But rest your head in the shade, I pray,
And take of my offered fare."
"I was with Cook," the stranger said.
He could brave the farmer's jeers,
For his jeering host had provided him
With golden grain belt beers.

IN A PYTHON'S COIL.

An Adventure That Nearly Cost a Zoo Official His Life.

The attendants in zoological gardens are exposed to dangers of various sorts, The superintendent of the Cincinnati animal park once had an adventure with a python which came near costing him his life.

It became necessary to make some changes in the snake house, and the superintendent, Mr. Stephens, was in the cage of pythons, anticipating no danger, when to his dismay he saw the largest snake coming toward him, hissing and darting its tongue angrily. Instantly he realized his danger.

The superintendent quickly grasped the huge reptile just back of the neck with his right hand and with the left clutched the creature two feet lower down, where the greatest muscular power of the python is located,

He tried to thrust the writhing mass into a waiting box, but the python coiled its twelve feet of length round the man's leg and began to constrict, carrying its tightening coils higher and higher.

Struggle as he might, Mr. Stephens seemed helpless in the serpent's grasp. His hands were so moist that the scaly body twisted in them. Perspiration streamed down his face. The python had worked its head free and was darting its horrid tongue almost in its victim's eyes.

The man threw up his hand instinctively to shield his face, and at the same moment the snake seized and began swallowing it.

By this time the attendants had rushed into the cage and they began beating the python. Not liking this treatment, the big snake relaxed its coils. Mr. Stephens jerked his hand free and broke off one of the python's fangs in his thumb in so doing.

"If I had not held on to its heaviest muscle," said the superintendent, "I have no doubt it might have strangled me. As long as I kept my grip there I felt confident, but I was pretty weak after the adventure."

The Best Ever

At the international dairy show at Milwaukee last week Minnesota creameries made 82 entries and attained an average score of 93.88; Iowa, with 86 entries, scored 93.27, and Wisconsin, with 193 entries, scored 92.76. Minnesota won the prize, a $400.00 silver cup.

The St. Hilaire creamery made a score of 95.83, which was nearly 2 points better than the average in the state. This is the highest record ever reached by the St. Hilaire creamery in any contest, whether international or otherwise, and with his record at Spokane, Wash.,—noted in our last issue—naturally makes Manager Hed feel somewhat proud of his achievements in buttermaking.

I really think it is the most beautiful case I ever saw, and the tone is simply grand. I shall be glad to give you any testimonial, as I think the Lombard should take the lead."
Rev. Geo. Doubleday, Pres. Corpus Christi College, Galesburg, Ill., says: "We are using the Lombard in our College work at Corpus Christi, and it is a pleasure to recommend it. It is a beautiful instrument with a deep, sweet, rich tone."
J. W. Purviance, Editor McNairy County Independent, Selmer, Tenn., says: "The instrument (Lombard Piano) fills our most sanguine expectations. It is not only a rare beauty in its outward finish, but the tone is round, full, rich and sweet. Your firm has proven to be prompt and reliable in its dealings with me."
J. Ernest Paxson, Editor Press, Parkersburg, Pa., says: "I must say that the Lombard sent me is a beautiful instrument, and a credit to a standard firm. We are more than satisfied."
R. S. Knapp, President Federal Charter Co., Washington, D. C., says: "We now realize after a careful and comprehensive trial of the Lombard by many musical artists of Washington, that it stands second to none, regardless of price or make. Every one who has tried this instrument is enthusiastic in its praise."

BROTHER LONG LOST

Indians Carried Away William Brown at Austin, Tex.

Recent Rumors Have Prompted a Search by Mrs. Carrie Jayne McFarland, a Sister, but So Far Without Result.

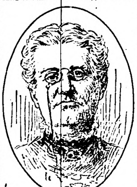
Darlington, Okla.—Nearly seventy years ago William Love Brown, then twelve years old, was carried away by a band of Comanche Indians from the home of his parents in the outskirts of Austin, Tex., and taken to the Comanche camps in what is now southwest Oklahoma. Ever since that day the kinsmen of the lost boy have been searching for him, and hoping that he might be found. Their inquiries were lately renewed by reason of a newspaper story telling of an old man, long captive among Indians in Oklahoma, who was trying to find his people.

Mrs. Carrie Jayne McFarland of Port Lavaca, Tex., sister of Brown, heard of the story and has written to United States Indian agents in Oklahoma, asking if they know of the man. The agents have no knowledge of him. Mrs. McFarland is being assisted in her search by her son-in-law, F. P. Penfield of Houston, Tex. Missionaries among the Kiowas and Comanches have been requested to question the old men of these tribes and, if possible, learn if they have any knowledge of the attack on the Brown home.

Mrs. McFarland lately told this story of the incidents that led to the loss of her brother:

"Some eight or ten Comanche Indians rode up to our gate Sunday, July 10, 1842, and asked the way to Austin. Father walked out near the gate to direct them, my mother and the children following to look at the painted faces of the Indians and the shields they carried.

"An Indian reached over the fence and picked up my brother Amos and placed him behind him and started to put a belt round his and the child's waist, in that way trying to strap the child to him. Father stepped out the gate and took Amos from the Indian, and then turned to my mother and told her to take the children and go quickly into the house.



Mrs. Carrie Jayne McFarland.

"My mother ran with the children at her side. An arrow narrowly missed her and stuck in the door facing as she entered the house. My father ran, but was shot, and fell in the yard near the door. An arrow passed half way through the arm of little Amos, just above his left elbow. Two carpenters at work on the house were present. One of them, Mr. Hoskins, was shot and killed.

"My mother called to the carpenter in the house and they carried my father inside. He asked for brother William, and was told by the negro girl that the last time she saw him the 'Injins were takin' him off. Father died in fifteen minutes after he was shot. He and Mr. Hoskins were buried across the road from the house. My mother kept hoping and looking for brother William's return for thirty years or longer."

FED BIRD ON A FIRE ESCAPE

How Mrs. McCue's Contemplated Chicken Pie in Honor of Returning Son Came to Naught.

New York.—In the Yorkville police court Magistrate Herrman was called upon to wrestle with a case that involved the mysterious disappearance of a chicken, that a devoted Irish mother was fattening on the fire escape for a feast for her sailor son on his return from the sea. The complainant was Mrs. Mary McCue, who boasted that she had been thirty-five years in this country, having come from the County Sligo, and was the mother of seven sons, three of whom were in the army and two in the navy.

The defendant, in court on a summons, was Mrs. Josephine Magnolia, who lived next door to Mrs. McCue. The latter did not accuse her neighbor of taking the chicken, but she did want the magistrate to ask if she knew where the bird had gone.

A few days ago, said Mrs. McCue, she received a letter from her son, John, on the U. S. S. Washington, and soon due here, to give the crew shore liberty. The son spoke many times of being tired of "bean scouts," and the often repeated hash which had been constantly adorning the swinging mess table on the last cruise. He even begged his mother to be sure to have one of her chicken potpies ready, with plenty of chicken and brown gravy, to celebrate his return.

This letter, Mrs. McCue said, had induced her to buy an exceedingly plump young rooster, which she had kept on the fire escape, and which she was stuffing daily with plenty of corn meal for the pie. The chicken disappeared suddenly.

Magistrate Hermann interrogated the defendant, an Italian woman, who replied that she did not know where the bird had gone.

"I don't see what I can do for you, Mrs. McCue," said the magistrate, "except to give you another chicken myself to replace the wandering rooster." [illegible]

Terrible Suffering

Eczema All Over Baby's Body.

"When my baby was four months old his face broke out with eczema and at sixteen months of age his face, hands and arms were in a dreadful state. The eczema spread all over his body. We had to put a mask or cloth over his face and tie up his hands. Finally we gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a few months he was entirely cured. Today he is a healthy boy." Mrs. Inez Lewis, Baring, Maine.

Maine Blueberries.

Washington county's blueberry crop has netted this year a revenue of more than $1,000,000, according to State Horticulturist Albert K. Gardner of Rockland. This industry was started but a few years ago in that county and the yield this year is the largest yet obtained there. One grower realized $75 from a few bushels which he set out in his orchard as a "side issue." A man near Cherryfield is said to have raked blueberries from the vines just as cranberries are gathered. It is stated that fabulous prices are paid for rental of blueberry lands and blueberry factories and the canning factories are still running.—Kennebec Journal.

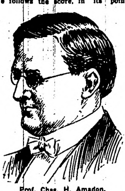
BLIND MAN LEADS ORCHESTRA

Prof. Amadon With Fingers Reads Music as Readily as Another Does With Eyes.

Holton, Kan.—A man who is totally blind is professor of voice and violin in Campbell college in this town. He is Prof. Charles H. Amadon. Besides himself there are, so far as he knows, only two blind men who are employed in teaching, other than in the institutions of learning for the blind alone.

Prof. Amadon leads the choir in a church here, and is the leader of the college band of 22 members, besides playing the cornet, in which he is proficient. In conducting the choir, he follows the score, in its point markings, with one hand and uses the baton with the other.



Prof. Chas. H. Amadon.

Prof. Amadon teaches Italian, German and French, as well as English, in his work. He devotes one day a week to tuning pianos, and goes out through the farming districts alone, finding his way with a cane.

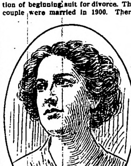
While Prof. Amadon has all the standard music in the point system for the blind, he transposes for his own use new music as it is published, for this purpose he has a small machine like a typewriter, called a Braille machine, after the man who invented it. Amadon's wife dictates the music to him and he stamps it in a sheet of paper with the machine, which leaves dots in relief upon the sheet. Rubbing the points of his fingers over these dots, he can read the music as readily as a man who can see.

Prof. Amadon is 29 years old. He was born and educated in Boston. He came to Holton three years ago. The first year he was connected with the college work he conducted "Rose Maiden," a cantata. He transposed all the parts, solos and choruses, with the words. He and his wife, working together, finished the work in a week.

SAYS SHE SEEKS REAL MATE

Mrs. Upton Sinclair, Wife of "The Jungle" Author, Not Contesting Suit for Divorce.

New York.—According to Upton Sinclair, author of the "Jungle" and other books, Socialist and founder of Utopian colonies, his wife left him to go on the stage, being incited to the step by one Harry Kemp, an alleged poet, of Kansas. In consequence of which, Sinclair declared his intention of beginning suit for divorce. The couple were married in 1900. There have been rumors of disagreements between the pair for some time.



Mrs. Meta Sinclair.

Mrs Sinclair, is not contesting her husband's suit for divorce, but refuses to admit that she intends to wed Harry Kemp. Mrs. Sinclair says that, like every other woman, she hungers for her "real mate," and that when she finds him she will marry him. She does not know whether Kemp is her "real mate." Kemp, is said to have not worn a hat for twenty years, winter or summer.

BULLET TRICK IS EXPOSED

Wound Reveals How Woman Caught Pellets With Her Teeth on the Stage.

Trinidad, Col.—Mrs. Frederick Roske, "the human target," who has been thrilling vaudeville audiences here by apparently catching in her teeth bullets fired at her from across the stage, horrified her audience by dropping to the floor with what appeared to be an ugly wound in the head. Examination showed, however, that she was not seriously injured, as the "bullet" instead of being lead, was wax, the accident revealing the secret of the "act." The wax bullets were shown to the audience and placed in the rifle, the heat of the explosion melting the wax, and the "human target" displaying in her teeth a bullet she had concealed in her mouth. The trick was revealed when one of the wax pellets failed to melt and gave the performer the fright of her life.

MISS SUSAN GLASPELL'S DOG

Voila the Original of the Puppies in Her Story The Visioning.

Miss Susan Glaspell, the author, has a dog, which fact is of more importance than might at first appear. For in her new novel, The Visioning, are introduced two frolicsome puppies named Pourquoi and N'est-ce-pas. And there are no two more real characters in the whole book than Why and Ain't It, to use their names in English form.

It was Miss Glaspell's own dog, a Bohemian beast, that inspired the creation of The Visioning's twin puppy clowns. The real dog also has a French name, Voila. When its owner bought it, over in Paris, she wanted at first to name it Raspail, both in memory of the boulevard on which she lived and as a sympathetic cognomen for a sensitive souled Parisian dog. But her family objected. They could not see their way clear to shouting, "Come Raspail! Raspail! Raspail!" So Miss Glaspell compromised on Voila.

Voila has vagaries. It is a wanderer. It is a collie, and a collie, it evidently thinks, ought to be afield. Whenever it feels that way, away Voila goes. Fortunately it wears a collar with Miss Glaspell's name and address. She has come to think nothing of such a phone message as this:

"Hello! Is dis Miss Glaspell! Vell, dis is der bartender bei Hans Bummelransen's saloon. No, no, vait! I didn't got der wrong phone number. I choost vant to say I got here your dog. Vill you come for him?"

Then the author of The Visioning has to drop chapter plans and seek out Herr Bummelransen's place with sorrow—and a dollar. But were it not so there might never have been a N'est-ce-pas and a Pourquoi.

PIMPLES ON FACE 3 YEARS

"I was troubled with acne for three long years. My face was the only part affected, but it caused great disfigurement, also suffering and loss of sleep. At first there appeared red, hard pimples which later contained white matter. I suffered a great deal caused by the itching. I was in a state of perplexity when walking the streets or anywhere before the public.

"I used pills and other remedies but they failed completely. I thought of giving up when nothing would help, but something told me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a Cuticura Booklet which I read carefully. Then I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and by following the directions I was relieved in a few days. I used Cuticura Soap for washing my face, and applied the Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. This treatment brought marvelous results so I continued with it for a few weeks and was cured completely. I can truthfully say that the Cuticura Remedies are not only all, but more than they claim to be." (Signed) G. Baumel, 1015 W. 20th Place, Chicago, Ill., May 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 28 K, Boston.

Some Shakespeare Statistics.

A Shakespearean enthusiast with a turn for statistics has discovered that the plays contain 106,007 lines and 814,780 words. "Hamlet" is the longest play, with 3,930 lines, and the "Comedy of Errors" the shortest, with 1,777 lines. Altogether the plays contain 1,227 characters, of which 157 are females. The longest part is that of Hamlet. The part with the longest word in it is that of Costard in "Love's Labor Lost," who tells Moth that he is "not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus."

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

CHINESE SOLONS IN OPEN REVOLT

IMPEACH MINISTER WHO MADE LOANS FOR NATIONALIZATION OF RAILROADS.

SEND ULTIMATUM TO THRONE

Mandarin's Head Demanded in Assembly, in Midst of Disorder.—Imperial Family Ready for Flight.

Pekin, Oct. 26.—Further defections to the rebels, including Nan Chang, capital of the province of Kiang-Si, and Kwei Lin, capital of Kwang Si, have served to increase the tension here of the revolution.

To add to the seriousness of the situation, the Tsu Cheng Yuan, China's first national assembly, gave to the Manchus what the legations consider an ultimatum. The assembly impeached Sheng Hsuan Huai, president of the ministry of posts and communications, and demanded his dismissal with severe punishment. A reply is required from the government at once, failing which the assembly will dissolve and the members return to their respective provinces. From the temper shown it is believed the assembly will carry out the threat. The only course open to the government is either to sacrifice a man who is considered by foreigners the strongest member of the cabinet, or, retaining him, declare war on the assembly as well as the vast majority of Chinese.

The charges against Sheng Huan were formulated by the people of Sze Chuen, Hu Peh and Nunan. Sheng negotiated the loans for the nationalization of the railroads and has been a leading advocate of the anti-provincial policy, which is regarded as largely responsible for the revolution. The inhabitants of these provinces have shown strong opposition to the proposed railway.

At the meeting of the assembly members urged that they were not against foreign loans, but against the methods employed and the results, which were tantamount to robbing Chinese, who had already begun the railways, and selling them out to foreigners.

His Head Demanded.

Sheng's secretary produced a written statement from his chief who, like the other members of the cabinet, was absent from the meeting of the assembly, but he was shouted down. Cries of "Decapitate Sheng!" sounded above the high-pitched indictments. No one attempted to defend the minister. When the assembly rose to vote, even the front-row Manchu princes, evidently intimidated by the radicals, stood up, demanding the noted mandarin's degradation.

General Yin Tchang's silence has given rise to speculation. The war minister in the field seems to consider it unnecessary to communicate anything but his needs to the presidents of the other government boards. Only the palace seems to know his intentions.

The imperialist commander has not been followed by any foreigners, even the foreign controllers of the railway having withdrawn. Therefore it is impossible to ascertain whether reports regarding the imperial army are true.

Trains go down to the south laden with soldiers and equipment, but they do not return. The troops set forth with sufficient ammunition, then quantities of ammunition follow, but no commissariat supplies. There are rumors of mutinies, retreats and desertions.

In spite of disorganization, inability and disaffection, the army evidently has moved steadily forward. A wireless report from Hankow indicated that the imperialist and revolutionary forces already are closely in touch.

Should Yin Tchang fail to fight, or lose his first serious battle, there appears no hope of checking the revolt. It is commonly reported in Pekin that the imperial family is ready for flight. The road to Jehol, 115 miles northeast of Pekin, is studded with troops. Other rumors designate the foreign settlements in Tien Tsin as the possible refuge.

London.—A special dispatch from Pekin reports that the revolutionaries have outflanked the Imperialists 180 miles north of Hankow. The rebels, according to the dispatch, captured the government's war chest containing 1,500,000 taels ($1,000,000).

Chinese Governor Assassinated.

Canton, Oct. 26.—The newly appointed Tartar general, Fung Sen, was assassinated upon his arrival to assume his duties here. The general, accompanied by his wife and a large escort of soldiers, was coming ashore when a bomb was thrown from the roof of a building and dropped among the party. The explosion which followed killed Fung Sen and a number of soldiers and caused a fire which burned several houses. The general's wife is also said to have been killed.

The town of Tchen-Chow, near the center of Honan province, was captured by rebels. The developments mark the rebellion's spread to the northward towards Peking. Tchen-Chow is also an important strategic point. Details are lacking of the circumstances of its capture. Its surrender by the imperialists, following the surrender, without a blow, of Sian-Fu, the ancient capital of China and capital of the province of Shen-Si, has completely broken the government's nerve, and from Peking comes the news that the imperial court has completed all preparations for flight at a moment's notice of Je-Hol, one of the imperial palaces, 120 miles north of the capital.

Twelve Towns Captured.

The towns which have thus far fallen wholly into the rebels' hands are Wu-Chang, Hankow, Chang-Sha, Kia-Ting, Han-Yang, Hwang-Chow, Sin-Gan-Fu, Hu-Kow, I-Chang, Kiu-Kiang, Sian-Fu, and Tchen-Chow. Canton and Nanking are momentarily expected to surrender.

A report that 10,000 Japanese troops have arrived at Mukden, Manchuria, is causing uneasiness among the supporters of the revolution, who believe that Japan is about to aid the Manchu government. The Japanese authorities here explain that if such a movement has been made in Manchuria the only purpose is to protect Japanese residents, their property and Japanese railway interests.

It is reported that the plague has broken out on the Siberian border of Manchuria, and that a quarantine has been established. The foreign office is sending two officials of high rank to Kiu Kiang, which is held by the rebels.

Rebels Again Victorious.

Shanghai.—Capture of Tchen-Chow by the revolutionists was announced. From a strategetic point of view this city should prove of great value to the rebels. It is the junction of the Kai-Fung and Peking-Hankow railroads and is located 250 miles north of Hankow. Its capture apparently cuts off from Peking all the imperial troops now gathered around Hankow and Wu Chang. Kui Kiang in the province of Kiangsi and Sian Fu, capital of Shensin province, have also fallen into the hands of the revolutionists.

News from the lower Yang Tse valley was all discouraging to the government. With Kiu Kiang in undisputed possession of the rebels the imperial fleet has retreated on down the river, some of the vessels being reported as far eastward as Wu Hu. Conditions are ominous not only in Wu Hu but also in Nanking. Most of the Manchu officials have left these two cities and are crowding into Shanghai where every hotel is already filled with refugees.

Weavers Threaten Revolt.

The taotai of Shanghai became so alarmed over the possibility of the secession of the native city to the rebels, that he removed his household to the foreign settlement. The taotai of Nanking has also put himself under the same protection.

The city of Su Chow is in panic owing to the revolutionary threats of 5,000 weavers whose wages have been unpaid for a long time.

Revolutionary agents here announce that the insurgents expect to establish their headquarters at Kiu Kiang, which will probably be the revolutionary capital.

TAFT TO CUT GIANT CHEESE.

President Will Sample Immense Exhibit at National Dairy Show.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—One of the most interesting attractions in the National Dairy show, which opened here today, is the largest cheese ever manufactured. It is big enough to make 200,000 cheese sandwiches, and on Monday President Taft will cut and sample this immense product of the dairy. Mr. Taft also will deliver an address at the show, on agriculture and conservation.

The big cheese weighs six tons and stands higher than a man, and its cost was nearly $6,000. To manufacture it 1,200 model dairies did the milking of 8,000 cows at the same time, and the 32 cheese factories which manufactured the curd had to follow the same process to make the curd uniform. Other attractions at the show are numerous and include all sorts of dairy machinery and equipment and an excellent display of dairy cattle.

N., landed on the broad reach of Buckroe Beach, Va., three miles from here. The officers were suffering from the bitter cold when they landed and hurried to shelter.

Lieutenant Ellison, who is in charge of the naval aeronautic school at Annapolis, and Lieutenant Towers, made their descent after the most successful flight in the history of naval aviation, having flown from Annapolis, a distance of 145 miles, in the remarkable time of 2 hours and 27 minutes.

The flight was made without stop or mishap, and the hydro-aeroplane lay on the sand in as good condition as when the start was made. Chicago Grain Market.

Chicago, Oct. 26. — Prospects of a large yield in the Argentine offsetting whatever shortage there may be in other countries, lowering the wheat market today by several pegs. The bears were especially encouraged over reports from Liverpool and free and cheaper South American offerings of the new crop continued. Predictions were current that the harvest in the Argentine would begin within a week. In consequence wheat owners here showed a decided tendency to unload, notwithstanding that buyers were few and scattered. The opening was a shade to ¼@⅜c lower. December started at $1.01½ to $1.01⅛@1.01%, a loss of a sixteenth to ⅛c, and then declined to $1.01⅛.

Promise of larger receipts Northwest occasioned a further setback. The close, however, was steady with Dec. at $1.01@1.01⅛, a net loss of ½@⅝c.

In corn, owing to the fine weather, the crowd were disposed to work on the selling side. Country offerings exhibited an increase. December opened ⅛@¼c to ⅜c down at 65@65⅛c to 65⅛c and fell to 64⅝c.

The fact that there was a considerable amount of new corn on the market drove prices further down. The close was weak at 64c for December, a net decline of 1⅜@1½c.

Oats suffered in price owing to the weakness of corn. The smaller longs felt themselves obliged to let go of their holdings. December started a shade to ⅛@¼c off at 47⅜@47⅝c, and sagged to 47⅛@47⅜c.

Large receipts of hogs brought about an easy tone in the market for provisions. Initial sales were 2½@5c lower to 2½c up with January options $15.57½ for pork, $8.97½ for lard and $8.10 for ribs.

The company's liabilities are over $70,000 and the stock, furniture and other assets are valued at upward of $100,000. The cause of the trouble is not stated.

DEAL DON'T AFFECT STATE

ORE ROYALTIES MUST BE PAID JUST THE SAME IF LEASE IS TRANSFERRED.

Not a Penny of Royalty Has Been Paid—Not a Pound of Ore Has Been Shipped.

St. Paul.—The reported cancellation of the leases of the Great Northern iron ore properties, which include some state leases, by the United States Steel corporation, will have no effect on the state's interests, in the opinion of S. G. Iverson, state auditor. The leases in question, first taken by the Hill interests from the original lessees from the state in the name of the Arthur Iron Mining company, were transferred to the steel corporation, and the cancellation would simply return them to the Hill interests.

State Not Affected, Says Iverson.

"So far as the state is concerned, I cannot see how its interests will be affected in the slightest," Mr. Iverson said yesterday. "The minimum royalties of twenty-five cents a ton on 5,000 tons a year for each lease must be paid under the law, no matter who holds the leases.

"So far the state has not received a penny of royalties on shipments from these mines, and not a pound of ore has been shipped, though we received a notice the other day that the Fay mine would be opened soon," he continued.

Go to School, "U" and Swamp Funds.

The royalties from these and other mine leases are applied to the credit of the school, university and swamp funds, and not to the general revenue of the state, for the expenses of the government, as are the general taxes on the admitted tonnage. This includes both the royalties paid on shipments and the minimum royalties, which are in the nature of a penalty for non-shipment, according to Mr. Iverson, and are not advance payments.

"In other words," he explained, "when shipments are begun the minimum royalties previously paid, cannot be deducted from the 25 cents royalties a ton on shipments. They do not apply at all."

Include 1,520 Acres of State Land.

The Great Northern mine properties include 1,520 acres of lands leased from the state, according to a statement prepared by Mr. Iverson yesterday, having an admitted tonnage, reported to the state tax commission, of 36,276,033 tons. The largest tracts, totaling 960 acres, leased to William Robinson in 1900, have thirty-nine years to run; the Fay mine, a forty-acre tract, thirty-seven years, and the others from forty to forty-five. The leases are for fifty-year terms.

Five of the leases, involving an admitted tonnage of 26,976,372 tons, but authoritatively estimated to run as high as 70,000,000 belong to the permanent school fund, five to the university and three to the swamp land fund. A tabulated statement of the leases follows:

SALE OF STATE LANDS.

Seventeen Thousand Acres to be Offered at Bemidji November 8.

Bemidji.—"The sale of state lands which will be held in Bemidji and other points in Northern Minnesota in November will be one of the most important sales ever conducted by the state," says Theodore Nelson, who has charge of the state land sales as a representative of the state auditor's office. "The lands that will be offered for sale in Bemidji Wednesday, November 8, will embrace a lot of new tracts that have but recently been appraised, and in the offerings there will be much that is good."

In the printed advertisements of the November sale the amount that will be offered for sale November 8 is listed at 17,000 acres, and it is likely that about all of this amount is new offerings.

The past summer crews have been busy in the northern counties where there are state lands, appraising the lands and timber, etc., with the result that the state auditor's office now has correct data relative to the state lands in this section that have not been sold, and any intending purchaser may get all information desired by applying to the auditor's office.

Approximately 30,000 acres of state lands have been appraised in Beltrami county. There remain but a very few isolated tracts to be appraised.

The affair followed an attempt of the Indians to break up an orgy between the section hands and four squaws.

RIVER FLIGHT FARCE IS OVER.

Aviator Robinson Proves To Be An Expert In Hot Air Only.

Minneapolis. — The much heralded aeroplane "flight" of Hugh Robinson from Minneapolis to New Orleans, which has been a huge farce from the beginning, has ended at Rock Island, by his declaration that the flight is off, on account of lack of money.

Mr. Robinson said that of the $20,000 fund that was to have been subscribed by cities along the river for a prize to the aviator, to be awarded if he made the trip, only Minneapolis, his starting point, had paid its full subscription.

H. A. Tuttle, president of the Minneapolis Commercial club and of the Trans-Mississippi Flight Association, which had been formed to promote the air journey from Minneapolis to New Orleans, said that if the report of Robinson's quitting was true, he had greatly misjudged the aviator. If the flight were discontinued now, Mr. Tuttle said, it would be an act of bad faith on Mr. Robinson's part.

Robinson had covered 371 miles when he reached Rock Island. His refusal to go further was precipitated, he said, by the failure of the St. Louis officials of the Mississippi River Flight association, of which President A. B. Lambert of the St. Louis Aero Club is the head to guarantee the payment of the full subscription list.

Dumas, mayor of Cass Lake, convicted recently by a jury of third degree arson for the attempted burning of the postoffice at Puposky, is alleged to have been a confederate in the commission of the Black Duck crime.

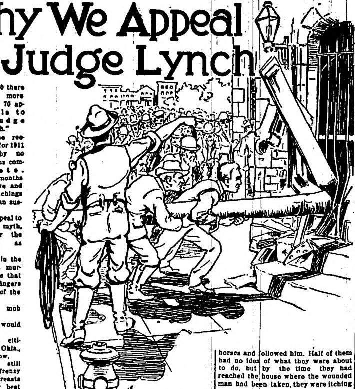
Why We Appeal To Judge Lynch



IN 1910 there were more than 70 appeals to "Judge Lynch." The record for 1911 is by no means complete. There are two months left of the twelve and the record of lynchings is being more than sustained.

Why do we appeal to this somber myth, known all over the United States as "Judge Lynch?"

What is there in the atmosphere of a murder or an outrage that makes men's fingers long for the feel of the rope?

Why does a mob form?

Coatesville, Pa., would like to know.

The repentant citizens of Durant, Okla., would like to know.

Cairo, Ill., is still wondering what frenzy entered into the breasts of many of her best citizens but a short time since when the mob spirit was loose in that city.

Since 1885 and up to the middle of the present year there have been more than 3,500 appeals to "Judge Lynch." There have been many that were never recorded in the wilder portions of the United States in the first years of this period. Possibly 100 illegal hangings have taken place in that time that have never found their way into the statistics of lynchings. Very few of the members of these mobs have ever been brought to justice for the part they have taken in them. It is a peculiarly American appeal from the justice of the courts. In most instances the appeal is taken before the law of the land has any opportunity of punishing the criminal.

Coatesville, Pa., a quiet little town in the Quaker state, was the scene of the last lynching of note. It has many churches, good schools and fewer aliens and illiterates than most villages whose principal industry is mining.

"The average of intelligence is high," writes a minister who made an investigation there after the excitement had died down. "There are many churches here and the religious spirit has always seemed good.

"I am at a loss to account for this terrible thing that has happened."

Other investigators made the same report. It was a mystery to Coatesville as to why this thing had taken place. A few hours before had been as quiet and peaceable a town as any in the state. Somewhere out of the night and from among the people of the town a mob had formed and put to a horrible death a negro accused of a crime. The next morning the town was repentant and horror-stricken. It is still wondering how the occurrence came about.

"A man by himself, thinking for himself, is a whole man; a man in a crowd is only a fraction of himself, he thinks as the mob thinks."

That is the summing up of the vague, uncanny power that grips men when the cry of "lynch him" goes up. That is the summing up of the opinion of the alienist who has had an opportunity to watch a mob form and make up its mind.

The alienist does not believe that any man is actually responsible for any act committed while he is gripped by the mob spirit.

He is temporarily an irresponsible being.

Mind and mental habits, the good clean ways of thinking are dethroned for a time at least.

He is hypnotized by a form of hypnotism that has only recently been analyzed by the psychologist. While he is in its grip, he has no brain of his own. He has little memory of what actually took place while he was in that condition.

Something bigger than himself swept his own will power out and took its place.

Munsterberg, Le Bons, Sidis and others have analyzed and discovered the principles of the mob spirit. They point out that all men are more or less subject to the influence of other minds. It is hard for one man to oppose his will to that of a roomful of individuals who are demanding something of him. It is hard for one man or ten men to hold out against the desire of hundreds, when the hunger of the man hunt is in the veins of the hundreds. Their combined will is a powerful influence that pulls them off their feet and out of themselves.

La Bon, a Frenchman, has made the most careful study of the mob, how it forms and what impulses sway it. He calls his work on the subject, "The Crowd." It is a coldly analytical record of the things that mobs do and why they do them. He finds that under the stress of excitement the plain, sober man sheds his veneer of civilization and becomes a beast full of blood hunger. He wants to kill. When he wants to wreak vengeance it must be full of atrocities and horrors. The victim is usually battered and mutilated by the clubs, the hands or the feet of the mobs.

The good citizen who was selling calico over a counter a few hours before becomes a savage. The professional man who loves books and scientific discussion feels something stir in his nerve cells that was implanted there when his forefathers executed justice on offenders with their own hands. For an hour or a day the spell is on him. He comes out of this condition as though he were coming out of a nightmare.

A while ago an Illinois desperado was arrested by two constables in his cabin. He submitted to arrest and in spite of the fact that he was accounted a dangerous character the officers allowed him some freedom to make arrangements to accompany them. While moving around the cabin he suddenly made a leap for a rifle, shot one of the officers dead and mortally wounded the other. A bullet stuck him in the thigh during the firing.

The wounded criminal fled from the cabin and, favored by the darkness, made his way across a creek bottom and hid in the timber. Posses were formed to hunt him down. Most of the members were not particularly enraged at the crime. During the whole of the day's hunt, the beating of the timber and the searching of the hills was looked upon as a form of sport. When night came the temper of the hunters changed. They had been thinking of the same thing all day long. They began to mutter among themselves.

Word came back that the wounded desperado had been found. Instinctively the horsemen began gathering themselves in squardons that set off on a gallop toward the place where he was captured. The sound of hoofs warned the sheriff who had taken charge of the prisoner. By taking a short cut through the woods he managed to escape the now thoroughly aroused mob that had been joking and laughing an hour before.

One shout had swerved the fancy of the mob. A tall, excitable farmer straightened up in his saddle when he heard of the prisoner's capture, and shouted: "Come on, boys, let's go and get him." He swung into the road at the gallop as he called, and everybody put spurs to their tired horses and followed him. Half of them had no idea of what they were about to do, but by the time they had reached the house where the wounded man had been taken, they were itching to pull at a rope. In just such careless, trivial ways the mob spirit is born.

The mob spirit does not necessarily vent itself in murder. Here are some typical instances of mob emotion that occur in everyday life.

A baseball crowd when the home team is winning in a grand closing rally when the game seemed lost.

A football crowd, when some halfback breaks loose from a tangle of players and electrifies the stands by an eighty-yard run down the field.

The intense excitement that accompanies some of the great revival meetings where thousands are under the spell of an emotional orator.

The frenzied ovations that are sometimes given a presidential candidate after a long week of the excitement of a national political convention.

The sudden blaze of excitement that follows any war scare is the manifestation of a national mob spirit. It is electrical in its effect on the great crowds that form in such periods.

Spellbinders of the political campaigns are past masters in the art of stirring up mob emotions. They are valued according to their ability to stir the crowds into yelling, screeching enthusiasms.

"Stop thief!" is another cry that starts the mob emotion, makes every man drop whatever he is about to do and turns him into a hunter of the hunted.

What would your defense be if you were brought into court charged with being a member of a mob? Is there any defense that could be made as laws stand now? In the past the man charged with being a member of such an avenging band has always relied upon technicalities and the power of public sentiment to help him go free. Now the alienists and psychologists have found a new loophole.

They assert that mob members are under the diabolic sway of the magnetism of the mob.

That he is not responsible for any acts that he may have committed while in that strange, trance-like state of excitement that glazes men's eyes and turns the gentlest soul into a creature of vengeance is their opinion.

His actions while under this peculiar mob-hypnosis are at utter variance with everything that he has ever done in all his life before.

He has hypnotized himself and others at the same time with ideas of vengeance.

According to the men who peer into our motives and dissect our thoughts these are the real reasons why we appeal to "Judge Lynch." The low percentage of convictions in assaults, murders and the whole catalogue of outrages have had to do with our readiness to carry the case into the tribunal of that judge who works in the dark and who always convicts and never grants a rehearing. Race prejudice helps the mob to appeal from the courts of the state to this mythical court that has hanged, burned and shot nearly 4,00 victims since 1885.

Lynching is not becoming less frequent. The average holds nearly uniform one year after another. States that never knew the vengeance of a mob before have recently been shocked and horrified by outbreaks of this spirit within their boundaries. The custom of appealing to that grim "judge" is spreading, and thus far no means have ever been devised that will stamp it out. It lies too deeply in the emotions.

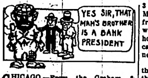
Happenings in the Cities

Chicago Has a Port of Missing Men



YES SIR, THAT MAN'S BROTHER IS A BANK PRESIDENT

CHICAGO.—From the Graham & Morton dock, at the foot of Wabash avenue, three men walked into the Chicago river the other morning. Four policemen wearily fished them out and left them to dry on the wharf.

These three men are daily associates of the following distinguished persons:

A brother of a former president's law partner. A son of a millionaire brewer. A brother of a stock exchange operator. A brother of a Chicago police officer.

Some day one of these four men may decide to take a promenade in the water and perhaps the police will get them out, and perhaps they won't. For the four distinguished persons, as well as the three undistinguished ones, only "wharf rats" and their deaths would probably trouble the city as little as their near-deaths troubled the officers who rescued the three.

There is a story called "The Port of Missing Men." O. Burke, dock superintendent for Graham & Morton, thinks he knows where the port is. Hundreds of men have dropped suddenly out of sight. Many of these, according to Mr. Burke, are laboring now along the docks of the Chicago river, unloading boats for 25 cents an hour, and, like the three who nearly drowned, occasionally dropping, or nearly dropping, out of all existence.

The casual attitude is the thing which draws the men to the docks. At 3 o'clock every morning a Graham & Morton steamer comes in loaded with fruit. The fruit must be moved into warehouses quickly. Two or three hours of working time is as much as can be spared. Two hundred men are necessary.

The two hundred men are always there. They begin drifting down to the dock at nightfall, and by midnight they are spread along its length, sleeping the untroubled sleep of the irresponsible. When the boat comes in they awake and, forming in long lines, transport the cargo, in the manner of a bucket brigade, to the warehouse. When the boat is unloaded they are paid on the spot. If they have worked two hours they have 50 cents. Fifty cents, says Mr. Burke, will last a wharf rat for two days. Then he can come back and make another fifty.

Occasionally one of the workers disappears. After a week or two his fellow-workers notice that he is gone. They make no inquiries. Perhaps he has fallen into the river, perhaps he has taken a freight train to other countries, perhaps he has quietly resumed his place in a former life. The subject is of small interest to other men.

On the dock origin and disposal are alike without significance. That a man is of good family is of importance only in so far as the family sends him remittances. Under such circumstances he has had a "fall," and may be cultivated as a prolific source of drinks.

Occasionally the "rats" become too thick and the police make a wholesale raid. In the winter, Mr. Burke says, they live on odd jobs and general labor. Every one knows their activity in ward politics at election time. It is an eventless life and an inconspicuous time.

Guest 'Jollies' Waiter to Save Tips

DO YOU KNOW— I JUST HATE TH' STUFF THEY HAND OUT OVER THESE BUM LUNCH COUNTERS—!

SALINA, KAN.—In the breach of promise suit of Miss Alice Bowes against N. W. Sly, some inside facts about how a traveling man may invariably get the best there is on the bill of fare at a hotel were made public.

Miss Bowes was a waitress in a Topeka hotel. Sly, formerly a Union Pacific conductor, and now a claim agent for that road, frequently stopped at the hotel where the plaintiff was employed. He "jollied" her freely and she thought he was trying to marry her. Sly says he was merely trying to get the best there was in the house to eat. The jury took the girl's side of the question and gave her a verdict for $10,000.

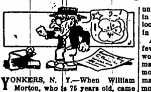
The girl says that Sly made love to her and induced her to go with him on several trips, and wrote her many effusive letters. She could not produce any of these letters. Though this statement was met by a denial from Sly that he ever wrote to her, she says the letters were so warm she destroyed them as fast as they arrived. Sly stood pat on a clear denial of every allegation and insisted the whole trouble came from Miss Bowes' inability to differentiate between hunger and heartache.

During his many years' work as a railroad man Sly took liberties with his personal locomotive and made many a flying switch on a lunch counter sandwich and cup of coffee. Trying to keep up steam on tough steak and cold apple pie finally had its effect and by the time he quit eating his meals in rag-time from the top of a stool his stomach was laid up for repairs and to get something he could eat at hotels necessitated some kindly attention from the waitresses. He says he was kind to all of them, for by that method he obtained better service. In regard to Miss Bowes, he says he didn't treat her any differently from the others.
ly from the others, but she seemed to take it seriously.

To make his denial stronger he swore that he had never been alone with Miss Bowes in his life and told the jury they could readily understand how difficult it would be, even for a man with the nerve of a claim agent, to propose to a girl in a crowded dining room.

This was the third trial of the case. Miss Bowes is the daughter of a Pottawatomie farmer, and is well connected.

Trimmed by Strangers in Poker Game



YONKERS, N. Y.—When William Morton, who is 75 years old, came out of his little trance and felt himself over he realized it was no idle dream that he had been put back $500 by his love for poker and his confidence in human nature. His belief that it was all going out and nothing coming in was strengthened when he read the following note:

"Never try to trim a wise one. It not only does not benefit a man of your years, but it has been tried by thousands before you, and the verdict of time is that it can't be done.

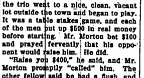
"Publicity would be very bad on your credit with your banker, and we feel therefore that we can trust you to swallow your anger and keep this afternoon's sport to yourself."

So that this information might not get lost in the shuffle, it was placed under a brick, which Mr. Morton found in a small valise when he opened it to look for $3,500 he thought he had won in a poker game.

According to Mr. Morton he met a few days ago a man from whom he won $3,000 playing poker. After the man had given an "I. O. U." for the money he told Mr. Morton of another man from whom he could win a lot of money. Mr. Morton was told the other man played a strictly cash game and that he had better provide himself with $500. Mr. Morton did so and the trio went to a nice, clean, vacant lot outside the town and began to play. It was a table stakes game, and each of the men put up $500 in real money before starting. Mr. Morton bet $100 and prayed fervently that his opponent would raise him. He did.

"Raise you $400," he said, and Mr. Morton promptly "called" him. The other fellow said he had a flush, and Mr. Morton drew down the pot, showing his hand. Then his best friend produced a valise, into which he placed all the money in the pot. Next he offered to redeem his "I O. U." and put into the valise what he said was $3,000 in cash.

Steals to Win Honors in Fraternity



YOU MAY GO —THIS TIME

NEW YORK.—Richard Pacharz, self-confessed embezzler, who had donated most of the $6,000 he stole to the lodge of which he was the chief officer, and contributed the remainder to various charitable enterprises, met clemency on every hand when he was arraigned before Judge Swann. The court suspended sentence and the young man's employers—from whom he had stolen—offered him his old place as confidential bookkeeper and cashier. It was a remarkable case of its kind.

During the eight years previous to his arrest, Pacharz had been employed by Darnet Bros. When the thefts were discovered the bookkeeper pleaded guilty. In making his plea he amazed the court by proclaiming that he had spent every dollar of the stolen money in donations to the order to which he belonged and its charities. Not a dollar of the plunder had he spent on himself or his little family.

"My trouble," said the young man, "is due entirely to a mad ambition for fraternal honors. It was the one great joy of my life to attain high rank in the lodge, so I made [illegible] picnics to the old people and children who lived at the lodge's home."

Judge Swann could scarcely credit the man's story, but his probationary officers found that everything Pacharz said was true. When he was arraigned the trustees of Pacharz's lodge produced their books to show that their officer had contributed $5,000 during the period he was stealing from his employers. They also verified his other statements about minor charities.

Judge Swann replied that he was moved to clemency not by mere sentiment. From every possible source he had received the highest praise of the prisoner. His employers had urged clemency and promised to take him back to his old job. His crime was not due to avarice or greed, but to a [illegible]

ALMOST CRAZY WITH ECZEMA

"I, the undersigned, cannot give enough praise to the Cuticura Remedies. I had been doctoring for at least a year for eczema on my foot. I had tried doctor after doctor all to no avail. When a young girl I sprained my ankle three different times, paying little or no attention to it, when five years ago a small spot showed upon my left ankle. I was worried and sent for a doctor. He said it was eczema. He drew a small bone from the ankle about the size of a match and about an inch long. The small hole grew to about the size of an apple, and the eczema spread to the knee. The doctors never could heal the hole in the ankle. The whole foot ran water all the time.

"My husband and my sons were up night and day wheeling me from one room to another in the hope of giving me some relief. I would sit for hours at a time in front of the fireplace hoping for daybreak. The pain was so intense I was almost crazy, in fact, I would lose my reason for hours at a time. One day a friend of mine dropped in to see me. No more had she glanced at my foot than she exclaimed: 'Mrs. Finnegan, why in the world don't you try the Cuticura Remedies!' Being disgusted with the doctors and their medicines, and not being able to sleep at all, I decided to give the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment a trial. After using them three days that night I slept as sound as a silver dollar for eight long hours. I awoke in the morning with but very little pain, in fact, I thought I was in heaven. After using the Cuticura Remedies for three months I was perfectly restored to health, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I will be sixty-four years of age my next birthday, hale and hearty at present." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Finnegan, 2234 Hebert St., St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 7, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 12 K, Boston.

Salve to Conscience.

It was at a concert, where the removal of hats was not obligatory, still the woman with a conscience wished to be accommodating. She turned to the woman sitting beside her and said:

"Does my hat bother you?"

"Not in the least," said the other woman sweetly, so the woman with a conscience settled complacently back to listen to the music while persons on the back seats twisted their necks out of joint trying to see around her hat.

Successful Economy in Baking.

Most housewives assume when they buy a big can of baking powder at a low price that they have been economical. They have to a slight extent—but when they use that cheap "big can" baking powder, and find it so uneven in quality, or so unreliable that the baking fails, there isn't so much economy in it after all, for the wasted materials far outweigh the few cents saved in the price.

SUCCESSFUL economy is in the reach of every woman that desires it. She has only to order Calumet Baking Powder, and use it according to instructions. Then, she will achieve economy. For not only does Calumet sell at a reasonable price—25c per pound—but it is so carefully made by experienced chemists that failure is impossible. Only the best materials are used and the proportions of the ingredients are so exact and so uniform that EVERY baking comes from the oven, light, sweet, and beautifully raised. Calumet guarantees you against failure, and that is what constitutes real economy in baking.

Why not use Calumet, a baking powder that you can always rely upon? You can get no better at any price, for at the World's Pure Food Exposition, Calumet received the Highest Award.

NEW LIFE SAVING APPARATUS

Attachment Prevents Burning of Rope Shot From Gun—Does Not Interfere With Flight.

Just at this season of the year the life saving apparatus is very much in the limelight and the attachment for life saving guns invented by a New York man is of especial interest. Those who have seen these guns on the beach at coast resorts will recall that they are cannon with an adjustable range that shoot out rods to one end of which is attached an end of a coil of rope contained in a receptacle at their side. The heat of the blast, however, has been known to set fire to the lifeline with the result that it did not reach its destination. The attachment here shown consists of a long fireproof joint that connects the end of the missile in the gun with the free end of the rope, engaging both with a series of elastic loops that allow such perfect freedom of movement as not to interfere in the slightest with the flight of the missile.

PRESSING IRONS ARE HANDY

Crease Made in Trousers by Drawing Edge Between Them—Bother With Tailor Eliminated.

A New York genius has designed a pair of pressing irons that make a man independent of the tailor after his clothes are made. They are also handy for persons traveling who want to preserve a natty appearance. The irons are two hollow box-like affairs mounted on handles, which have spring holding frames. Normally the irons are together, but when the handles are pressed together they open. The edge of a pair of trousers is then placed between them and they are drawn the length of the trouser leg, imparting as fine a crease as any tailor can give with the old-style iron. This new implement is heated by electricity and has an attachment therefor at one end. All the traveler need to do is hitch it up to the electric fixture in his hotel room and press his trousers in a few minutes. It will also press other garments or flat goods excellently.

Low Temperature on Fish.

M. Pictet, the French scientist, has been conducting some experiments to ascertain the effect of low temperature on fish and animals. He has been at work on this subject at times for 18 years, and he finds that with all the animals with which he has experimented the common snail can withstand the greatest amount of cold. He has subjected them to a temperature of 120 degrees C. below freezing point, and then nursed them back to an active life. As a rule fish will withstand a temperature of 20 degrees; below this they are killed. At 20 degrees the body of the fish is as brittle as ice itself and may be broken as a piece of ice, but after being thawed out the are as lively as before their frigid experience.

Value of Sunburned Face.

It is believed by the Lancet that the sunburned face is of value because it implies that the individual has been exposed to a fresh, healthy and open environment. The active light rays of the sun undoubtedly give a healthy stimulus to the respiratory process, since under their influence it has been proved that the quantity of oxygen absorbed is greater, while an increasing output of cerbonic acid follows.

AVERAGE WEIGHT OF BRAIN

Professor Frederick W. Mott Gives Difference Between Savages and Races Long Civilized.

Professor Frederick W. Mott, lecturing before the Royal Institution of Great Britain on "The Brain," said that although in 88 per cent. of the cases in which the brains of great men had been weighed the weight was above the average, brain weight itself did not always mean brain quality.

When there was lack of the functionating tissue, the lecturer explained, the structural material might receive more than its normal share of nourishment and the extra weight be due to overgrowth of "brain scaffolding." This accounted for the very large and heavy brains sometimes found in congenital idiots. Pointing out that the brain weight of a race long civilized surpassed that of aborigines, the lecturer stated that whereas the ordinary European hospital patient had a heavier brain than a savage, the Chinese coolie laborer's brain, developed by centuries of use, weighed 1½ ounces more than that of the European hospital patient.

Referring to the relative brain weights of Caucasian men and women, Professor Mott said that the female brain had a good start, weighing nearly 1½ ounces more than the male brain at birth. In adult life, however, the average man's brain weighed about 5¼ ounces more than the woman's.

The average weight of the European male brain is 2 pounds 15 ounces 9 drams to 2 pounds 16 ounces 9 drams, and of the female brain 2 pounds 10 ounces 14 drams. Among savages there was not this difference, since in the struggle for existence the female had to apply her brain as fully as the male, hence it was developed at practically the same rate.

RUBBER HEEL IS DETACHABLE

Device Is Adaptable Where Desired at Different Times and Its Removal at Others.

The Scientific American illustrates and describes a rubber heel, recently invented by Andrew W. Carlson of Spokane, Wash. This invention comprehends a rubber heel of a peculiar conformation adapted for removabe engagement with the heel of a boot or shoe. The inventor provides a rubber heel together with means whereby it may be securely held in position on the heel, a rubber heel being provided with an extending engaging means whereby it may be positioned on the heel. A perspective view is given in the illustration, showing the heel in position with the fastening means. The device is adaptable for use in cases where one may desire the rubber heel at some times during the day and its removal at another time. The fastening means comprises a bent number having inwardly extending portions and it is formed of risilient metal.

Temperature of Hats.

The inside temperature of men's hats was among the interesting illustrations at the Dresden Hygienic exposition. In the sun, with an external temperature of 96.8 degrees F., the inside of a yacht club cap showed 98.6 degrees; a Prussian helmet, 97.7 degrees; an English cap, 94.1 degrees; a black derby hat, 92.3 degrees; a high silk hat, 89.6 degrees; a soft white felt hat, 86 degrees; a light straw hat, 79.9 degrees; a Panama hat,, 77.9 degrees.

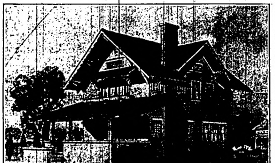
WILLIAM A. RADFORD
Editor

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

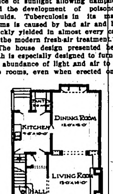
During the past two or three years the building world has been considerably stirred up over the bungalow. This style of home architecture has been enthusiastically urged by its devotees for all classes of buildings and for all locations, irrespective of the special needs of the case. While I would not decry this type of building, realizing that it has done wonders in arousing, not only the architects, but the people in general, to the possibility of art and convenience in small home building, still, I do believe that the California bungalow has at times been recommended when some other type of house would prove more appropriate and desirable.

Without questioning for a moment the attractiveness of the low, rustic bungalow cottage with its sweeping lines and open framing, for country sites, it is certain that some radical change must be made to adapt this in a practical way to the ordinary, narrow city, or village lot. The bungalow is, above all a house suited to a hilly country. A one-story house, low and broad, looks very well indeed if it can be placed on a hill or knoll well above the street and if it can have plenty of space around it for light and air and shrubbery.

With the average city lot, however, ranging in width from 25 to 40 feet the problem of securing good light and air on all four sides of a house demands careful attention. The artistic has to yield to the practical matter of sanitation. It becomes desirable to keep the house narrow and high above the ground. In this way the best air and sunlight is secured for all the rooms. This matter of good air and sunlight is more important than a great many seem to realize. We have learned during the last few years that a large proportion of the ills that human flesh is heir to is directly chargeable to bad air or poor ventilation of living and sleeping rooms, and to absence of sunlight allowing dampness and the development of poisonous moulds. Tuberculosis in its many forms is caused by bad air and has quickly yielded in almost every case to the modern fresh-air treatment.



The house design presented herewith is especially designed to furnish an abundance of light and air to all the rooms, even when erected on a narrow city lot. The extreme width of the design is 23 feet six inches, which, ordinarily, would leave quite a nice little strip of yard on each side between the walls and lot line. With the adjacent property set back an equal amount of space, about eight feet would be left free on each side, even with a thirty-foot lot.



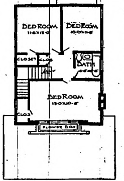
Second Floor Plan.

In addition to this feature of adaptability to city building conditions this house is designed in the true bungalow spirit; that is to say, it is unconventional in material and lines; and the wide, open rafter cornice gives it a real bungalow flavor.

A glance at the floor plans will show the thoroughly desirable arrangement of this house. It furnishes just about the maximum of roominess for a house of this size. It is really a small house, yet with the arrangement of reception hall, with its open stairway, living room and dining room separated only by two columns and cased opening, there is a clear space of 13x29 feet, which is larger than a good many really large-sized houses can boast of. The kitchen and pantry occupy the fourth corner, the arrangement being very good for convenience between kitchen and dining room. The kitchen is directly connected with the front of the house, and to the cellar stairway.

On the second floor there is one very large bedroom and two smaller ones, besides three clothes closets and a bathroom.

A distinctive feature of this entire plan is the number and the arrangement of the windows. There are five windows in the living room, six in the dining room and two each in the hall and kitchen. Upstairs each of the smaller bedrooms has three windows, while the larger bedroom has five. Two of the clothes closets have windows in them for light and ventilation. The windows in tre bedrooms are so placed that there is a cross ventilation in each of the bedrooms. This house could not fail to be cheery and healthful at all times. The windows are set rather high from the floor, so that there is no lack of privacy.



First Floor Plan.

The cost of this six-room house is estimated at $2,500, using best construction and materials, birch trim downstairs, yellow pine upstairs and oak floors throughout.

Great Plots and Great Novels.

The instinct for plot is an unappeasable one, and children keep us constantly aware of the depth and the fundamental nature of the demand that a story shall be a story. This, by the way, is the hardest thing to make it, and the student of fiction is constantly surprised to find how few are the great plots as compared with the number of the really great novels, so often does the casual chain of inevitable consequence break and fail in the dramatic type; so often does some favorite personage, growing almost too much alive, run away with the plot. Fiction, and especially English fiction, is, as we all know, far more distinguished by the creation of great characters than by the working out of great plots; and Thackeray's confession that the trend of his story often depended on the mood of the morning, he, in good humor, being inclined to make his characters do admirable deeds, in a bad humor being tempted to thrust them into villainy, may well be considered the unspoken confession of many another great novelist.—From the Atlantic.

Happy Gloomer.

At times the "Cheer-up!" idiot is absolutely cruel, for his philosophy and smiles and laughter would rob the chronic gloomer, generally a woman, of her greatest and supreme happiness in life. You all know her, the woman of both sexes who is never really happy unless she is comfortably miserable. Without her the patent medicines companies would have to go out of existence in bankruptcy and if her rheumatism leaves her for a time she is in agony of mind until it returns. Hers is the dark side of life. She has eyes only for the unpleasant and the painful. She cannot smile without cracking her lips and a surgical operation would be necessary in order to get a laugh out of her. She is always the poor lone "critter" of the Mrs. Gummidge type and the tearplant is always worked over time. She is forever expecting the worst to happen and she is keenly disappointed if it doesn't.—Grit.

Unfortunate.

Tyre Dout—I am unfortunate, mum. I had to quit my profession on account of my health.

Lady—But you look rugged. What was your profession?

Tyre Dout—Dat's just it, lady. I was too rugged. I was a ventriloquist an' a good one, lady, an' my voice got so strong I couldn't throw it.—Harper's Magazine.

PURELY FEMININE

WHEN PURSE IS LIGHT

WOMAN OF INGENUITY EASILY CAN BE WELL DRESSED.

Some Old Clothes, a Little Wit and Some Work Can Produce Wonderful Results—Stripes Are Immensely Stylish.

It goes without saying that a costume is far easier to make than a coat suit, and there is one style at present much exploited in the shops which might well appeal to home sewers. This is the dress of one-piece effect showing a little bodice with a plaited tail and puffings for trimmings. With it goes the snuggest sort of a short skirt, decked like the waist with puff bands, and sometimes holding two funny little shirred pockets on the front panel. In a dark silk, with the usual white touches on the bodice, this frock has a most practical value, for while suited to general service it can be made very smart with a dressy hat, dainty shoes and other proper accessories. It is the fad to carry huge envelope bags with these dresses, when they are worn outdoors, and when the wearer is very young and pretty she may add to the quaintness of her appearance by wearing one of the picturesque poke bonnets which are so pretty for youthful faces. A long coat or a shoulder mantle of velvet or velveteen, the long ends tying over at the front, will be worn over this little frock in the street, and when the wrap is removed the costume is at once ready for the house. About eight yards of silk or satin in the usual narrow width are required for the medium figure, and as the waist is gathered there is scarcely any fitting.

This stylish and useful little dress is shown in our illustration, the material being silk in a dim wistaria shade. The vest and undersleeves are of cream net and Val lace, treated to a little needlework in wistaria linen floss.

A double-faced satin or silk could be used for this style, with the puffings made up on the facing side; but it is far more usual to have all one color and one material and the effect is far better than when the trimming contrasts. Any soft wool, such as cashmere or veiling or marquisette, is adapted to the style, but although a very light and pliable cloth may also be used a thinner texture gives a better look. In fact, silk and satin are par excellence the materials for the graceful and youthful model.

The surplice bodice styles and tunic skirts also recommend themselves to domestic sewers, for draped effects are far less difficult to accomplish than plain ones, and such models are very useful for a combination of materials and for making over two old frocks into one.

Apropos of materials, stripes are to be immensely stylish, for of all patterns they give the slimmest look; moreover, a street suit in a good striped wool requires no trimming other than good buttons and straight stitching.

Some old clothes, a little wit and some money to buy a few things, and anybody can be well dressed. But the gentle art of the needle comes first, for, even if she has her frocks made, no woman can be perfectly dressed without understanding the needs of her figure and face in the most practical way. At any rate, the owner of the light pocketbook must sew.

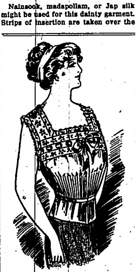
DAINTY AND NEAT CAMISOLE

Nainsook, Madapollam or Jap Silk Can Be Used for This Attractive Garment.

Nainsook, madapollam, or Jap silk might be used for this dainty garment. Strips of insertion are taken over the shoulders, edged with valenciennes lace; other strips, with beading between, are carried across back and front; ribbon is threaded through and tied in a bow in front.



Camisole.

Fine tucks are made at the waist to prevent any superfluous fulness; a narrow band connects the basque with upper part.

Materials required: One yard 36 inches wide, three yards insertion, one yard beading, three yards lace, two yards ribbon.

Millinery Wrinkles.

When a separate loop of wire is inserted in a hat bow it often has an extremely annoying habit of asserting its presence by poking out. A stitch is not always advisable, as it may spoil the look of the bow.

Here is quite a good dodge when dealing with piece silk. The loops are made the required width from a strip cut on the straight. The selvedge is one side and the other is hemmed. Into the hem a round millinery wire is pushed before making up the loop and is gives the bow a smart upstanding appearance, keeping it exactly in the required position.

Bows wired in this way are most valuable when motor veils are worn, as they come up smiling after the crushing inevitably sustained. Though you might not think it, the bow looks smarter if the side that is hemmed (what one naturally would call "the wrong side") is used for the front. It looks like a strapping slipped on and the wire acts as a kind of piping.

Gives Note of Color.

All embroidered linen and mousseline dresses show the band of velvet, satin and mousseline. The note of color seen at the hem is frequently repeated at the waist or about the corsage.

NEW STYLE IN PETTICOATS

They Are Much Narrower Than of Old and Are Made of Soft Material.

Despite the fact that Dame Fashion says the petticoat is no longer the mode, we still see the most adorable models in the shops, and purchase and wear them, too. True, they are much narrower than the styles of old and are made of soft materials, but nevertheless they are worn by the conservative woman at any rate.

The jersey material for the top portion has scored such a success that we find it used in every grade of skirt, from those having flounces of crepe or lace to the ones of satin or perhaps mohair, and all are beautiful for the new petticoat is brilliant in color or is decorated with flowers of decided hue on a ground matching the suit.

In the medium-priced skirt, soft finished taffeta will be used extensively, this material being found satisfactory as it has not the rustle formerly so much desired, and its wearing qualities are greatly improved.

Though there is a great deal of talk of the wider skirt, women are loth to sacrifice the slender lines acquired with so great trouble, and manufacturers, realizing this, have made the new skirts no wider than two and a half yards, which width hangs gracefully under the new fall suit.

A Test for Wool.

There are some materials that are marked all wool and others are frankly marked cotton and wool mixture. There is a certain feel to cotton and wool cloth that makes one look for the cotton even when it is well hidden. The test for this is to unravel two threads, one in the cross width and one on the length. A woolen thread breaks with an irregular fringy edging, while cotton makes a clean, crisp break. In the mannish mixtures be sure that the light and not the dark threads are cotton, or in a short time you will have rusty black or dingy brown material.

TOWN IS BEING REBUILT

Flood of Waters Has Not Taken Black River Falls, Wis., From the Map.

More than a million dollars absolutely disappearing in the short time of two hours was the toll collected by the waters at Black River Falls, Wisconsin. Even the residents of the town could not realize what it meant until the lake formed by the Hatfield dam was dry, and the rush of waters had passed on to the Mississippi.

Just out of reach of the flood the business men and residents of the place watched the waters carry away the buildings that represented the homes of business enterprises which it had taken years of effort to build. Among the larger industries seemingly wiped out within a few minutes was the plant of Coles Carbolisalve. This plant, along with others that suffered a like fate, is today being rebuilt, and the business men of Black River Falls promise that a better town shall replace the one destroyed by the raging floods, and that just as rapidly as men and material can put it together. It is catastrophies like the breaking of the Hatfield dam that demonstrate the American spirit.

A Broken Bone.

Your first duty, after notifying a surgeon, is to provide support for the injured member in the form of an improvised splint. Flat pieces of board, as broad, if possible, as the limb and slightly longer than the broken bone, canes, umbrellas, in fact anything that will accomplish your end may be used. In adjusting these, pad with any soft material that is at hand; straw, leaves or cushions made of grass may be used. Avoid any pressure on the injured part, cover it with a cloth, and keep wet with clean, cold water.—Woman's Home Companion.

Too Late to Change.

"A man can no more change his reputation than he can change his face or his arms," said Senator La Follette at a banquet in Madison.

"There was once a wicked old Madison millionaire who took his pastor aside and said:

"'I am going to devote the remainder of my life to doing good.'

"Dr. Thirdly, outspoken man, retorted:

"'Do you mean John H. Good, the wealthy farmer, or young Sam Good, the Socialist millionaire?'"

Grapefruit Greenery.

Effective greenery for the dining room table may be made by planting the seeds of grapefruit. Sow them thickly, and in two weeks, if the earth is good and has been kept moist in a warm place, the little shoots appear. Two weeks more and the leaves unfold, and very soon there is a mass of rich, glossy green, which is not affected by gas of furnace heat.—Suburban Life.

SHIFT
If Your Food Fails to Sustain You, Change.

One sort of diet may make a person despondent, depressed and blue and a change to the kind of food the body demands will change the whole thing.

A young woman from Phila. says:

"For several years, I kept in a run-down, miserable sort of condition, was depressed and apprehensive of trouble. I lost flesh in a distressing way and seemed in a perpetual sort of dreamy nightmare. No one serious disease showed, but the 'all-over' sickness was enough.

"Finally, between the doctor and father, I was put on Grape-Nuts and cream, as it was decided I must have a nourishing food that the body could make use of.

"The wonderful change that came over me was not, like Jonah's gourd, the growth of a single night, yet it came with a rapidity that astonished me.

"During the first week I gained in weight, my spirits improved, and the world began to look brighter and more worth while.

"And this has continued steadily, till now, after the use of Grape-Nuts for only a few weeks, I am perfectly well, feel splendidly, take a lively interest in everything, and am a changed person in every way." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"Iowa" would be better off," President Taft is reported to have said, "if she would raise more corn and less statesmen." It don't hit us, anyway. Minnesota quit raising statesmen long since.—Wadena Pioneer Journal.

Report says that Attorney F. H. Peterson of Moorhead will become a candidate for congress in the Ninth district in opposition to Congressman Steenerson. Mr. Peterson was for a number of years a member of the state and is an ultra insurgent.

The farmer who wants good fun and extra pocket money should put out a line of traps this fall. The trapping season opens during the latter part of of October and November when farm work is light and when the farmer, or his son, are able to put out and take care of a good line of traps without interfering with other regular jobs. The one thing that has prevented many farmers from doing this has been the cost of a trapping outfit but now that good traps can be bought so cheaply at any hardware store, this objection is removed. When the total amount, both in fun and money realized from one season's work with even a few good traps is considered, trapping can be looked upon as one of the most pleasant of money-making fall occuptions on the farm.

Does Liquor Support the Government?

The president of the International Brewers' association, responding to the address of welcome extended to this association by the president emeritus, —viz., the secretary of agriculture, James Wilson, paid the following compliment to the temperance element in America, and as Secretary Wilson did not contradict it we are obliged to assume that this meets his approval:

"In this country the so called temperance movement has fallen into the hands of the most intemperate people of the nation." he said. "Men suffering from what I can only describe as chronic moral inebriation, men devoid of reasoning powers, largely lacking in the most elementary knowledge and education and, worse than all, in only too many cases prompted solely by the commercial benefit they derive from the cause they make a profession of championing."

And so the cabinet of the present administration lends its sanction to this kind of an attack upon the people who do not sympathize with the liquor traffic!

The speaker went on and said: "The saloon has its drawbacks as well as its advantages; it is subject to evil uses as well as good uses, and in consequence is fraught with certain temptations, to which the weak and foolish are liable to succumb."

If any one, including Secretary Wilson, will kindly rise and explain exactly what are meant by the "good uses" of the saloon and of intoxicating liquors, they will confer a lasting benefit, doubtless, upon the "weak and foolish people" who do not quite comprehend those "good uses" yet.

Lest it be said that Secretary Wilson was not responsible for what the president of the Brewers' association said, let us quote his own language, in an interview, when discussing the criticisms which have been directed against him because he planned to cooperate with and assist the brewers. Secretary Wilson thus expresses himself regarding the anti liquor people:

"They are honest, conscientious, well-meaning people, probably with the best of motives, but the great American government cannot be run on the theories they hold. The majority of the people who have attacked me are church people. I consider that I am a good churchman myself. Our points of view differ, that's all."

And so it is the theory of President Taft's cabinet, is it, that "this government cannot exist without the liquor traffic," that "it cannot be run upon theories that the temperance people hold."

In imagination, as we read those words, we see a great army of young men marching to the support of this government by the way of the saloon, bright, healthy, sturdy, honest American citizens when they enter the saloon at the front door, bleary eyed, broken down wreckers of homes, deserters or abusers of clinging wives and weeping, suffering children, brawlers in the streets, criminals of all kinds, made such by liquor, a little while after they have been drilled and have "smelled fire" as veterans in this army of a liquor-supported nation.

Almost ninety-five per cent of our jail pension ers come out of this army. From it are recruited the thugs and murderers—the "supporters" of Mr. Wilson's government.

What a glorious defense of the nation's dignity and prosperity and upbuilding is this great army of liquor-drinkers on whom, according to Secretary Wilson, this government must lean for support, for "it could not exist upon the theories" held by the people who decry the constant recruiting of our best young men into such an army. The saloons need our young men, for they could not continue if deprived of these recruits, and the government can not continue without the saloon.

In heathen countries mothers throw their babies into the Ganges river, or in front of the Juggernaut, but in this great civilized republic, mothers must give up their children to the sacrifice of the saloons in order that the "government at Washington may still live."

What a horrible slander upon America!

If this be true, if Secretary Wilson's view point be the correct one, if this government "cannot live" without the annual sacrifice of thousands upon thousands of our homes and the men that inhabit them, then the sooner this government goes down into everlasting perdition, the better it will be for the human race. But Secretary Wilson slanders the Stars and Stripes, and insults the Grand Army of the Republic, and the no less grand army of noble Christian workers, both men and women, who believe that the decent home, be it ever so humble, is of more worth to humanity, than the loftiest capitol, whose columns rest upon the beer bottle and the whisky flask, and whose statesmen are the saloonkeepers, the brewers, and the distillers.—Northwestern Agriculturist.

King-Skattum

On Wednesday, Oct. 25, occurred the marriage of Miss Lizzie King to Mr. Sever Skattum, both of St. Hilaire. The bride was attended by her sister Miss Janie King, and the groom by Mr. James King. The bride wore a cream messaline silk, and carried a carried a lovely bouquet of American Beauty roses.

A reception was given at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John King, in the evening. Supper was served in four courses for fifty guests, from six to nine thirty.

The bride and groom are well known and highly respected young people of this place and have a host of friends who who wish them all the happiness and prosperity imaginable, and the Spectator wishes to join in the good wishes.

Mr. and Mrs. Skattum will be at home to their friends Nov. 1.

Surprise Party

That Mr. Norman Beebe still has an occasional birthday was quite evident on Wednesday evening, when more than forty of his friends took possession of his hospitable home, giving him a complete surprise.

The party had been arranged by Mrs Beebe, and with the assistance of a few friends, plans were carried out which terminated in a very happy evening.

Much credit, however, should be given the victim of the affair, who, after donning a necktie and a pair of shoes, which were minus on the arrival of the guests, and also having been reminded of a twenty-[illegible] (?) birthday, sufficiently recovered from the shock to prove himself a very agreeable host.

The amusement for the evening was Norwegian whist, Mrs. Dr. Swanson and Mr. Post carrying off high honors, each receiving a handsome deck of cards. Mrs. Krueger and Mr. Bahan the lowest scores, seemingly quite consoled after receiving a stick of candy and a lemon respectively.

The guests' gift to Mr. Beebe was a watch fob, cuff links and scarf pin, which was presented by Mr. McKercher with a few well chosen remarks and briefly responded to by Mr. Beebe, the appropriate little speech prepared for him in the kitchen by Mrs. Beebe, having been entirely forgotten in the excitement.

Last, but not least, delicious refreshments were served, after which all returned home, voting the home of Mr. and Mrs. Beebe a royal place for a good time.

His Wife's Comment on the Result of His Hunting Trip.

The braggadocio of the common variety of husbands generally sooner or later falls before the keen insight that most women have of human nature in general and bragging husbands in particular. A witty southern woman was married to such a man, who, though invariably unsuccessful as a hunter, was continually boasting of his killings.

As he was returning home one evening after an all day hunting trip it occurred to him that the usual accompaniment of an empty game bag was not in accordance with his oft boasted skill as a hunter and that his wife would again have the joke on him, so he went to the market and purchased two brace of partridges.

As he entered the house he threw them on the table with great eclat and exclaimed, "Well, you dear old doubter, you see that I am handier with the gun than you give me credit for being, after all; now don't you?"

Milady picked up the birds and examined them very carefully. As she looked up after the examination he said:

"Fine birds, my dear—very fine birds, are they not?"

"Robert," responded the wife, turning up her nose, "you were only just in time in shooting those birds today. Tomorrow it would have been everlastingly too late."—St. Louis Republic.

AN UNSOCIABLE LOT.

What Mr. Thomas Thought of the Crowd In New York.

Mr. Thomas crammed a fresh stick of birch into his little stove and closed the door, which John Arnold had left ajar on his entrance. The tiny shoe shop thus became air tight. Then the proprietor replied to John's question of what he thought of New York.

"I can tell ye in 'maxing few words," he said. "It's considerable of a place. Lots doing an' splendid big buildings an' schools an' churches an' all that. They think they're some punkins too. An' I ain't saying that there ain't plenty of real smart ones there. Spite of all that, though, I call 'em kind o' ignorant, besides being cold in their manners."

"I want to know!" commented John, visibly impressed by this recital.

"I'll tell ye," continued Mr. Thomas. "Brother Tom's boy's office is down near the big Brooklyn bridge, and I used to go down there and set a good deal while my wife visited with his wife up in Harlem.

"When it come what they call rush hour I used to go down an' stand on the bridge an' watch 'em passing by, hundreds of 'em, on their way home, an' I got to feel real friendly an' to know lots of 'em by sight. But"—

Mr. Thomas paused impressively—"but, although I didn't miss an aft'noon whilst I was there, an' that was two weeks, nary one o' them men ever give me a single glance of recognition.

"It wa'n't my place to speak first, me being a stranger an' they home, so to speak. I wa'n't going to push myself; but, I tell ye what, John, two or three times I had to hold on to myself to keep from telling of 'em just what I thought of such onfriendly ways.

"'Why,' says I to Brother Tom's boy, 'how long do you s'pose one o' them would be at Tunkett Corners before we knew him well enough to nod to an' found out his name?'"—Youth's Companion.

Slovenly Figure Cut by Charles XII. of Sweden.

Distance lends enchantment to the imagination as well as to the actual vision. This is a fortunate circumstance, for the real truth about some of the heroes of history might to a person today bring disenchantment and even disgust. Charles XII. of Sweden may claim the world's admiration as a military genius, but from Mr. Morfill's description of the monarch, given in the "Story of Poland," that gentleman would be anything but an agreeable addition to society.

"He wears a black crape cravat, but the cape of the coat is always buttoned so closely that one cannot see it. His shirt and wristbands are always dirty. He wears no ruffles nor gloves, and his hands are commonly the same color as his wristbands, so you can hardly distinguish them. His hair is light brown, very short and never combed but with the fingers.

"He begins dinner with a big piece of bread and butter, having stuck his napkin under his chin. Between every two bits of meat he eats bread which he butters with his thumb. He is never more than a quarter of an hour at his meals, eats like a horse and never speaks a word."

A kingly picture, indeed, savoring of romance and knightly fashion!

An Independent Element.

Carbon is an elementary substance widely diffused throughout nature. It occurs uncombined in two distinct forms or allotropic conditions—viz, graphite or blacklead and the diamond, which is pure crystallized carbon. It is, however, more commonly found in combination with other elementary substances than in the free state. United with oxygen, it occurs as carbonic acid gas (CO_2) and exists in the atmosphere, in natural waters, in limestone, dolomite and ironstone. In combination with hydrogen it forms the extensive series of chemical compounds known as hydrocarbons. It is also an important constituent of wood, starch, sugar, gum, oil, bone and flesh. No other element is so characteristic of the plant and animal world as carbon. In 1783 Lavoisier showed it to be an independent element. He furthermore proved the diamond to be the purest form of carbon and by combustion converted it into carbonic acid gas.—New York American.

Not the Usual Romance.

Recently one of our most fastidious young men bought a pair of overalls and found in them the name of the sewing girl who made them.

He very promptly wrote her a letter with all the effusiveness necessary in such a case and in due time received a reply, which, however, was void of the romance usual in such cases. Here it is: "I am a working girl, it is true, but I make a good living, and I do not care to support a husband, as I would do if I married some silly doodle who gets mashed on a girl he never saw. Permit me to say that I do not know how my card got in that pair of overalls and that when I do marry, if ever, it will be some fellow who can afford something better than a forty-seven cent pair of breeches."—Muscotah Recorder.

Wireless Telegraph Tapping

Many people believe that wireless telegraph is more subject to tapping or hearing of messages than the old kind. This is not a fact, however, for tests made with the old Morse telegraph show that the mere connecting of a wire can cause an operator to pick off messages from a wire sometimes a half mile away. Therefore telegraph, and telephone, for that matter, will always be as widespread as the popularity of golden grain belt beers, which make friends everywhere. James I. appears to have inherited his mother's love of billiards. Among the payments from his privy purse noted in the exchequer records is one to "Henry Waller, our joyner, for a billiards boarde. Twelve foote long and fower foote broade, the frame being wallnuttree, well wrought and carved, with eight great skrewes and eighteen small skrewes." A salutary billiard rule in force in the days of the Stuarts was one to the effect that no bystander, even though he was betting on the game, should be allowed to offer advice unless asked. If he did so it was provided that "he shall for every fault instantly forfeit twopence for the good of the company or not be suffered to stay in the room."—London Chronicle.

Mrs. Helen M. Slaker, 244 Grand Ave., Aurora, Ill., says: "I cannot find words in the English language to express my appreciation to you for having sold me such a beautiful instrument. I really think it is the most beautiful case I ever saw, and the tone is simply grand. I shall be glad to give you any testimonial, as I think the Lombard should take the lead."

Rev. Geo. Doubleday, Pres. Corpus Christi College, Galesburg, Ill., says: "We are using the Lombard in our College work at Corpus Christi, and it is a pleasure to recommend it. It is a beautiful instrument with a deep, sweet, rich tone."

J. W. Purviance, Editor McNairy County Independent, Selmer, Tenn., says: "The instrument (Lombard Piano) fills our most sanguine expectations. It is not only a rare beauty in its outward finish, but the tone is round, full, rich and sweet. Your firm has proven to be prompt and reliable in its dealings with me."

J. Ernest Paxson, Editor Press, Parkersburg, Pa., says: "I must say that the Lombard sent me is a beautiful instrument, and a credit to a standard firm. We are more than satisfied."

R. S. Knapp, President Federal Charter Co., Washington, D. C., says: "We now realize after a careful and comprehensive trial of the Lombard by many musical artists of Washington that it stands second to none, regardless of price or make. Every one who has tried this instrument is enthusiastic in its praise."

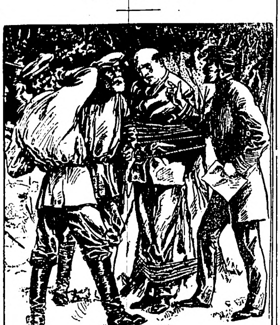
POLITICAL MURDERS IN RUSSIA INSTIGATED BY SPIES



WHEN a political killing happens in Russia, look for the agent provocateur.

This maxim is fairly justified, yet it has exceptions. There are contradictions and sinister puzzles. Things Russian are topsyturvey from the moral as well as other standpoints. For latest example, take the slaying of Premier Stolypin. Who killed him, and for what purpose? The answer is not as obvious as an American would assume. Amazingly enough, the assassin, Bogroff, was claimed both by the government and by the revolutionists. "He was a cog in our machine who went wrong," assert the police. "He was a revolutionist who obeyed our orders," say the disciples of terrorism.

It requires thought to appreciate the niceness of the dilemma which the situation presents, especially on the side of the police. The officials find it a shade preferable to take the wrong cog view, and assert that Bogroff had a regular permit to enter the theater, and used a revolver supplied by the authorities. It is less injurious to the police to take this view than to admit that they were outwitted by the enemy, and that terrorism is in successful ascendancy.

There is an increasing roll in Russia, headed by the arch betrayer Azeff, who helped to kill a grand duke and a minister while in government employ, of ambiguous persons who may be styled the missing links or unclassified monstrosities of revolution. Agent provocateur, "secret co-worker," government spy, revolutionary spy—these seem to be simple terms whose meaning can be easily learned and understood. But the dictionary definitions do not satisfy an impartial student. There are things in the phenomena not covered by the definitions. The revolutionists are with the dictionary. Like the police, they do not believe in a twilight zone; they separate the sheep from the goats with a clear cut line. They explain most elaborately that a sheep is a sheep and a goat is a goat. Nevertheless, a survey of cold facts shows that there are woolly goats and goatish sheep. Azeff, Gapon, Petroff, Bogroff, they worked on both sides and helped and hurt both sides. A psychological zoologist would have difficulty in placing them.

The Russian agent provocateur is a government spy who encourages or commits crime for the sake of making arrests. But any spy or detective is likely to conduct a degree of crime in order to succeed in his work. Between direct provocation and condonation the difference is not always perceptible. The terrorist operating against the government must needs use to a greater or less degree the same methods. He must betray somewhat, injure his party a little in order to injure the enemy more. In a game of desperate intrigue, where the stakes are life and death, only the stanchest characters preserve their moral and mental balance. So great is the peril of losing integrity that many leaders of the revolutionary movement disapprove of any revolutionist entering the service of the police.

Some new light on the spy problem in general and the Azeff case in particular was given by Leonid Menschikoff, late senior assistant to the chief of the Third section at St. Petersburg.

Mr. Menschikoff is the original exposer of the terrific Azeff and has supplied evidence against lesser stars of the inferno of provocation.

A boy of sixteen in a technical high school at Moscow, Leonid Menschikoff was arrested for belonging to a revolutionary circle. He was betrayed by a fellow member of the circle, Zubatoff, who became an eminent provocateur and chief of police at St. Petersburg. The young student spent a few months in jail. Then he entered the police service, not as a spy, but as a kind of clerk or lower official.

He determined to learn the system and the personnel and to obtain documents for the benefit of the revolutionists.

Mr. Menschikoff saw in the secret records that there were three extremely able agents provocateur in the Third Section. One was named Raskin, another Vinogradoff, another Valuyski. These men were in the inmost confidence of the terrorists. They knew beforehand all the big plots, even the slaying of Minister Plehve and Grand Duke Sergius. This trinity of talent, strange to say, focussed gradually into one personage—a master traitor whose name has removed considerable stigma from that of Judas in the minds of several million people.

Mr. Menschikoff, regardless of danger to himself and his plans, felt compelled to write an anonymous letter to a member of the revolutionary central committee, informing him that a great terrorist leader was a police spy. The committee member was asked to tell no one except five of his fellows, but in his astonishment he showed the letter to Eugene Azeff, who was known to him by another name, and said:

"Who is Azeff?"

"I am Azeff," calmly replied the arch spy. "But there is a mistake. The guilty man is Tataroff."

Tataroff, also mentioned in the letter, was in fact a police agent. He was a candidate for the inner circle of terrorism, sent forward by his employers for the purpose of checking up the activities of Azeff, whose splendid villanies had no supervision. Tataroff tried to save himself by accusing his eminent colleague, though he had no personal knowledge of Azeff's police position. A revolutionary tribunal tried Tataroff, condemned him to death and had him shot in 1906. Before he was killed, however, Tataroff denounced Azeff to the police as being disloyal and engaged in terroristic work. Azeff was arrested by General Grassimoff, chief of police, and threatened with exposure of his double role, whereupon he made a wholesale betrayal of revolutionists whom he had perhaps not intended to betray. Several hundred were arrested, exiled, shot or hanged.

James Persitz, late an official in the Russian secret police, now in New York engaged in writing his memoirs gave an account of his adventures as a spy among terrorists.

"One society which I joined in the course of my duty provided me with an experience which I shall never forget. By the fierceness of my declarations and the energy I displayed I rose until I was selected to carry out a desperate deed involving the murder of a number of prominent officials. Needless to say, the plot was communicated by me to the officials of the secret police. Communication with them was, of course, extremely dangerous. I took the greatest possible care to cover up the traces of my handiwork, but nevertheless the anarchist police outwitted me and secured incontrovertible evidence that I was a police spy. Their method of doing this was interesting.

"The chief of the society wrote out the details of an attempt to be made on a certain high official. At a time when only the leader and I were in the room he made some excuse for leaving me alone for a few moments. In my eagerness to fulfill my duty I rapidly searched over the papers he had left, noting the place and the date when the scheme was to be put into execution. Shortly afterward the anarchist chief returned and pocketed the documents.

"On the fateful night the chief informed me that the attempt had been postponed. As I afterward found out, some members of the anarchist police sent to survey the neighborhood had detected signs of the watching officials and realized that their plans had been divulged to the police by some traitor. Since the chief of the anarchists and myself were the only two people who had any knowledge of the intendd outrag—which, of course, was simply a sham affair prepared to trap me, I was immediately known to them in my true light as a police spy."

After this, Mr. Persitz says, he was decoyed to a lonely wood near Moscow, bound hand and foot by the terrorists and ordered to confess. "At first, rendered desperate by my peril, I stoutly refused to admit my guilt, shouting frantically, 'I deny it all!' But, with many curses and blows, they told me that I was already convicted. They ordered me to divulge to them the secrets of the political police. This, however, I refused to do. My captors then held a consultation and decided to follow the methods of the inquisition and wring from me by torture the particulars they were seeking. . . . Pins were forced into all parts of my body, each tormentor apparently vying with the others to discover a place which would produce the most excruciating pain.

The lash was applied in addition to the pins. Then the captors, considering it vain to gain any information, discussed methods of killing the traitor. A handsome young Polish Jewess, says the narrator came forward and exclaimed:

"'I have an excellent idea. All the deaths you suggest are too quick. He is tied; let us lay him on the railway. The Petersburg express will shortly be due, and the cur will have the pleasure of lying helpless while he sees the train coming nearer and nearer. It will give him time to think over his treachery.'

"The suggestion was heartily approved. With many a curse and blow I was promptly carried off and laid across the rails of the Moscow-Petersburg railway, being tied face uppermost to the rails by the ropes that bound my hands behind my back. After having brutally kicked me almost into insensibility and wished me a sarcastic 'goodby,' my onetime fellow anarchists disappeared in the gathering darkness of the night.

"Slowly the minutes passed away, and, at last, to my horror, I heard the rumble of the approaching train. Never shall I forget the unspeakable terror of that moment. Nerve racking though the period of suspense had been, it was as nothing to this. Presently the rumble grew to a roar, and, turning my head, I saw the lights of the express approaching. Then I think I lost all control of myself. In a frenzy of fear I redoubled my efforts to escape, flinging myself this way and that. Larger and larger grew those glaring orbs of light, nearer and nearer came the ponderous wheels. I realized that I had but a few moments more to live. Making an effort, I managed to lie calmly for a brief second or two; then I braced feet and shoulders and heaved upward with all my remaining strength.

"The cord parted. With one wild scream of excitement I rolled between the rails. I remember a deafening, thunderous roar and the approach of a hot blast, such as comes from the opening of an enormous furnace door. Then everything went red, and I lapsed into insensibility."

Mr. Persitz says he woke up in a hospital three months later, having been delirous all that time. On account of the affair he was rewarded with $400 "gratification money," an increase of salary and a six months' vacation, which he spent mostly in Italy.

WILD GAME IN VENEZUELA

Jaguar, Many Varieties of Wildcats, Strange Birds and Snakes Are Plentiful.

"Venezuela offers a better opportunity for the seeker of wild game than any other country in the world, perhaps," said Ralph Totten, recently consul of the United States at Maracaibo, Venezuela. Mr. Totten, who is a Tennesseean, has been in the consular service for three years and has been stationed in Maracaibo and Santo Domingo. He is on his way to his new post at Trieste, Austria.

"It has always been a source of wonder to me that more Americans fond of hunting have not gone to Venezuela, where, along the Amazon and in the vicinity of Lake Maracaibo, more varieties of wild birds and small game can be found than perhaps in any other place on earth. So far as I know there have been only two Americans who have hunted in that country. One of them was Caspar Whitney, the naturalist and writer, who went there to kill a jaguar, a species of the tiger family.

"The jaguar is probably one of the most powerful members of the cat family. He has tremendous strength in his forelegs, and with a stroke of his paw can kill an ox. There are all varieties of the wildcat family in Venezuela, and they can be found almost any place in the country outside of the cities.

"Everyone knows of course that myriads of all varieties of the parrot family and monkeys can be found there. There are dozens of different kinds of parrots. Among them is the largest parrot in the world—the macaw—which measures several feet in length. These birds are black, with bright red heads and tails, and wings tipped with red. A more beautiful bird I never saw. They fly in pairs and a peculiarity of the species is that while flying they hook their bills together.

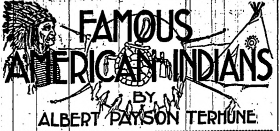
"Along the Amazon and Lake Maracaibo, which, by the way, is as large a body of water as Lake Erie, there are all varieties of large snakes. The boa constrictor is a native of that country. The anaconda is another huge reptile that is met frequently. Deer abound in Venezuela and are of all kinds."

"Stint" and "Stunt."

Stint is a good word as a noun. As a verb it means something not quite so pleasing. Do not confound it with stunt, however. A stunt is something quite useless. It is the horse-play of the mountebank, and has nothing in common with honest, productive labor. A stint is the warning to the wise that something demands to be accomplished; a goad to the laggard that time is on the wing.—Atlantic.

New Life-Preserver.

A new life-preserver, which has been successfully tried, may be introduced into the German navy, writes the American consul from Brunswick. The apparatus, which weighs 5½ pounds, consists of two swimming cushions bound together by straps. The cushions lie upon the breast and back. The apparatus is provided with a small lamp fed by a battery.



FAMOUS AMERICAN INDIANS

BY

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

Tammany

Tammany—Indian war chief, sagamore, sachem and friend of the white man—is best remembered today by the society that bears his name. But he was famous a century before Tammany Hall was built.

Historians were few and amateur romancers were many in the Pennsylvania wilderness of olden times. So for one true story of the great Tammany there are 20 fanciful legends. And oftentimes it is hard to separate fact from fancy in telling of the old sagamore's career.

Tammny was ruler of the Delaware Indians early in the seventeenth century and was leader of the Lenni-Lenape confederation of New York and Pennsylvania tribes which in those days waged eternal warfare against the fierce "Six Nations" and the savages who lived on and around Manhattan island. He was a king, rather than a chief, and ruled his wide domain wisely. In various native dialects he is called Tamenand, Temane, Taminent and Tammany. His huge "palace-wigwam" is reported to have stood upon the site of Princeton college.

Welcomed William Penn.

When William Penn and his fellow Quakers landed in Pennsylvania, with a charter to settle that region, it was Tammany, according to most accounts, who first greeted the great Englishman and who made him and his companions welcome guests of his "nation." Tammany it was who smoothed the way for the newcomers and induced the neighboring tribes to receive them peacefully. He is said to have been a party to Penn's celebrated treaty with the natives, and to have cemented so close a friendship between Quakers and red men that, while English-Indian wars waged constantly in nearly all the other colonies, Pennsylvania was immune from bloodshed.

So mighty was Tammany and so deeply revered that his tribesmen in later years were wont to bestow his name upon any person on whom they wished to confer special honor. The Indians looked on him as a sort of god and would travel hundreds of miles to bring him their troubles for adjustment. It is probably to some of these worshipping Indians rather than to any really authentic facts that we owe the following tale of Tammany's prowess, a story that used to be told and retold at a thousand native campfires:

The "Evil Spirit" (or some powerful and malicious Indian chief who became known by that name, because of his crimes) coveted the wealth and peace and easy life of Tammany's dominions, and sought to gain foothold there. Tammany knew that if the "Evil Spirit" should once establish a home in Pennsylvania the justice and kindly feeling that had been so carefully fostered among the local Indians must give place to strife and sin. So he forbade the "Spirit" to set foot in the realm. The "Spirit" insisted, and Tammany had to use force to check his advance.

Battle With "Evil Spirit."

A long and terrible battle ensued, lasting several months and dyeing the green forests red. At last Tammany overcame his foe and drove him forth in utter defeat. The "Evil Spirit" fled to Manhattan island, where the godless natives received him enthusiastically and made him their ruler, begging him to remain among them forever.

The many reports of Tammany's wisdom, of his goodness to settlers, etc., led later admirers of him, in Revolutionary times, to refer to him as "St. Tammany," and to call him "the patron saint of America." His name was placed on some calendars and his festival celebrated on May 1. From "St. Tammany" a New York political association (founded just after the inauguration of President Washington) took its name. Its first meeting was held May 13, 1789. In memory of its namesake's Indian rank the officers were known as "sachems." A "Tammany Society" was also founded in Philadelphia and on its outings strove to reproduce the "local color" of the great chief's times and customs.

Ellskwatawa

A townful of Shawnee Indians, clad in weirdly fantastic mourning, howled the death-dirge about a great wigwam one day in 1825. In the wigwam lay a hideous, one-eyed man, whose name had long been known and hated by every white settler in the west. He was Ellskwatawa, the "Prophet," brother of the famous Tecumseh and deadly foe to the United States government.

A few days before this scene of noisy mourning the fifty-year-old prophet had been in the act of lighting his pipe when he sank to the ground, lifeless. His followers had been horror-struck. For they had deemed him immortal. His death meant the loss of their wisest, most powerful leader. They laid the body in state upon a pile of furs in the wigwam and began the death dance. When the dancing and feasting were ended the tribe marched in sad procession to the prophet's bier to carry him to his grave. As they neared the pile of furs the silent figure upon it suddenly sat up.

A Weird "Miracle."

"I have been in Paradise for three days," calmly remarked the supposedly dead prophet, as his frightened tribe-folk shrunk back in horror. "I have talked face to face with the Great Spirit and have brought you a message from him. Call the nation together that I may impart the tidings to all."

When the awed "nation" had assembled the prophet proceeded to deliver his "message," which included a command that the Shawnees cease from lying, stealing and drunkenness, and which in various points strengthened the prophet's authority over them. This was but one of many similar tricks by which the one-eyed genius held his people's allegiance and roused them to a frenzy of loyalty toward himself.

The prophet led a strange, adventurous life, many of whose incidents can scarcely be explained by natural causes. As brother of the mighty Tecumseh, he won war fame and wealth. He helped Tecumseh by overawing the Indians with "miracles." Between them the brothers swayed nearly all the western tribes. In 1808 the prophet secured a large tract of land where the Tippecanoe and Wabash rivers join, and he rallied to his standard more than a thousand braves of different neighboring tribes. To his followers he was more than a mere leader. He was also their "medicine man" and supernatural master. Yet, despite all this, he governed so badly that soon all but 300 of his men deserted. Nothing but Tecumseh's aid prevented the remainder of the band from scattering.

But even Tecumseh could not save his brother's land. For in 1809 the government, through Gen. W. H. Harrison, bought from the Indians a huge tract of territory that included all the prophet's domains. Tecumseh sought in vain to combat this purchase. Failing, the two brothers set to work combining all the western tribes into a league to destroy the white men.

The climax was reached at the battle of Tippecanoe, in November, 1811. Tecumseh had gone southward to enlist new tribes for the league. In his absence the prophet was keeping the local Indians in a fever heat of warlike fury. Harrison, with 800 soldiers (mostly militia) marched to Terre Haute and thence sent a declaration to the prophet. The messengers were insulted and driven back. Then Harrison advanced upon the prophet's town, camping for the night a short distance from it.

The Battle of Tippecanoe.

The prophet ordered his men to make a midnight attack. But Harrison was ready for them. All night the battle waged. The prophet himself did not fight. He sat in safety on a distant hilltop, weaving "magic" spells and chanting war-hymns. At daybreak the Indians fled in wild confusion. Sixty white men and forty savages were found slain upon the field. Harrison pressed on to the prophet's town, found it deserted and burned it to the ground. The prophet had fled in safety, but his defeat had forever wrecked the combination of tribes he and Tecumseh had planned against the government.

The prophet fought for the English against our country in the war of 1812, and for his services received a pension from the British government. On this he lived comfortably in Canada until 1826, surrounded by a band of his admiring tribesmen. Then he came back to the United States and settled to the west of the Mississippi. The date and manner of his death are shrouded in mystery.

Causes of Bad Spelling

Authority Is Bitter Against Present Methods in Vogue in Public Schools.

Mr. Forrest Morgan in a spirited protest against "simplified spelling," writes to the Springfield Republican to place the blame for bad spelling where in his opinion it belongs. Mr. Morgan denies emphatically "that the present spelling is responsible for most of children's slow learning and bad spelling of words. There is not one per cent. of truth in this. Much of it at present is due to the incredibly imbecile system so widely prevalent, of teaching words without the alphabet, producing millions who cannot use a dictionary or a catalog or an index to a concordance because they do not know the order of the letters—witness any library school; more to the disuse of spelling lessons and competitions; the rest is nature in all countries and times, and is just as true of foreign children with their own languages as of ours. They and we alike mishandle the normal words every bit as badly as the abnormal, whose number is dreadfully exaggerated. And any one who will teach children to spell analytically, by sounds of letter, to build up words with, will find the child swiftly learning to spell the few anomalous words and "sense" the exceptional usages with actual zest, as a mental play. I have tried it over and over."

Heavy Weights Transported.

At Swinton, near Manchester, England, many years ago, during a deluge of rain, lightning suddenly filled a brick building, in which coal was stored, full of pestilential, sulphurous vapor. Suddenly the building, the walls of which measured nearly a foot in thickness, was torn out of the ground, the foundation being nearly two feet deep, and transported in an upright position to a distance of nearly 33 feet. The weight moved was estimated at more than eleven tons.

If You Have a Sickly Youngster Try This Free

The family with young children that is without sickness in the house now and then is rare, and so it is important that the head of the house should know what to do in the little emergencies that arise. A child with a serious ailment needs a doctor, it is true, but in the majority of instances, as any doctor knows, the child suffers from some intestinal trouble, usually constipation.

There is no sense in giving it a pill or a remedy containing an opiate, nor is flushing of the bowels to be always recommended. Rather give it a small dose of a mild, gentle laxative, tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which, by cleaning out the bowels and strengthening the little stomach muscles, will immediately correct the trouble.

This is not alone our opinion but that of Mrs. N. H. Mead of Freeport, Kans., whose granddaughter has been taking it successfully and of Mrs. J. R. Whiting of Lena, Wis., who gives it to her children and takes it herself. It is sold in fifty cent and one dollar bottles at every drug store, but if you want to test it in your family before you buy it send your address to Dr. Caldwell and he will forward a supply free of charge.

GOING AFTER WINTER EGGS

Few Simple Suggestions on Care and Feeding That Will Bring Good Results if Followed.

(By W. W. STORMS.)

The laying hen is usually searching for what she needs to make eggs. She takes what she wants in the way of food and lets the rest alone.

If you compel her to take what she doesn't want or take nothing, why of course she will take what you provide, rather than starve to death, but she won't lay as many eggs.

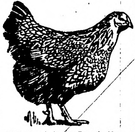
Therefore, we like the hopper method of feeding. We always provide a self-feeder hung on the wall just high enough so the hens can eat what they want without wasting it on the floor.

A better method is to provide a platform 16 inches or so above the floor, so the fowl can jump up and down for the feed and water they desire, and then go back to the litter to work for the grain that is scattered in it.

In one apartment of the self-feeder is grit; another, charcoal; another, oyster shells; another, equal parts of finely cracked corn, wheat, barley and oats; another, beef-scraps; in still another is placed dry bran.

You might think that the hens will eat too much, but they won't; they will eat only what they want.

Scatter the whole grain, such as wheat, barley and corn in the litter.



This Hen Laid 198 Eggs in Year.

Feed them whole corn at night, especially on cool nights. They need a cropful to keep up the bodily heat overnight.

Give them table-scraps and green food at noon. For green food we use cabbages, mangel-wurtzels, sugar-beets, chopped apples, etc. Onions are also relished, but they are liable to flavor the eggs.

Fowls should have plenty of fresh water, and we never warm it. They like a cool, fresh drink the same as we do.

Provide a dust-bath so they may help to rid themselves of lice. Use plenty of liquid louse-killer and keep the whole pen scrupulously clean.

If a variety of food is given there is no need of fear about plenty of eggs. Do not feed whole grain in hoppers. Only the ground food, beef-scraps and bran is fed there.

HOUSE FOR GROWING CHICKS

Good Serviceable Shelter May Be Made on the Colony Plan by Altering Big Packing Case.

Houses are needed for the chicks that are too large for the brooder. A cheap, serviceable house may be made on the colony plan by altering a good sized packing case. The top and one side are removed and a slanting roof is built; the whole box is covered with tarred paper. The front should be the size of the case, so that it can be taken out for the purpose of cleaning. It may be fastened in position by hooks or buttons.

These coops are easily handled and can be moved from place to place with slight trouble. The total cost would not be more than fifty cents. The floor should be kept sprinkled with a small quantity of well slacked lime and some broken straw for the chicks to roost on at night.

The colony house in position, see that the chicks have a good supply of grit, charcoal and fresh water. A good deal depends on one's self how the chicks turn out. If neglected and all kinds of waste food that has become sour is thrown to them and allowed to remain, poor returns must be expected.

In starting with poultry it is ever well to remember that chickens require the best of attention from shell to maturity if good results are to be obtained.

How often have we seen a beginner hatch out chicks by the hundred and at the end of the season what has he—a few miserable looking bunches of feathers hovering around, eaten up with vermin and filth through lack of energy and a love for the undertaking. If chicks are worth hatching at all they are worth caring for well. A few colony houses will last for years and will accommodate a large number of chicks. Chicks that are allowed to crowd together in small coops all summer seldom do well.

Asparagus Chickens.

In market quotations the term "Asparagus chickens" is often used, and not understood. It refers to chickens large enough to broil with early asparagus. They are usually hatched in late July or August, pushed along till November, and then killed and put in cold storage for the winter. They are taken out and eaten in the spring.

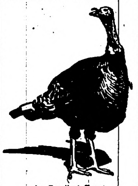
Salt Aids Hen.

A little salt on the food for the hens is an aid to digestion and keeps them well and vigorous.

RULE FOR FATTENING TURKEY

Do Not Confine in Fattening Pen, but Give Liberal Grass Range and Feed Well.

Here is an old rule for fattening the Thanksgiving turkey: Do not confine in fattening pens, but give a liberal grass range. They fatten better if not closely confined. Give them all they will eat four times a day. Keep them on the fattening ration for about three weeks, when they should be in prime market condition. Do not feed for twenty-four hours before killing, says a writer in the American Poultry Journal. First three feeds daily should be cooked potatoes made into a crumbly mash with cornmeal scalded with skim-milk and water. Fourth or last feeding for the day should be a full feed of whole corn with a little buckwheat given every few days for a change. Give at each feeding all they will clean up in twenty minutes. Do not leave food standing before them. Give first feed as soon as it is daylight in the morning and give last feed at night just before roosting time. Supply charcoal, crushed shells and gravel. Give both milk and water for drink. This ration dates back to the "early days." If you try it, please report results. Another ration, of about the same period, is practically the same, except that the nut meats of chestnuts and sweet acorns are added to the night ration of corn for the last ten days of feeding.



An Excellent Type.

HOUSE WITH MUSLIN FRONT

Neat, Comfortable and Thoroughly Comfortable Building Can Be Constructed Cheaply.

The illustration gives an idea of the neat, comfortable and thoroughly convenient henhouse I built. Living in a mill town I make use of the "cop yarn heads." These boxes are well made, 25x28 inches in size, and in great demand at three cents each, says a writer in the Farm and Home. This house is 60 feet long, ten feet deep and seven feet high, divided into seven compartments each capable of holding 25 hens.

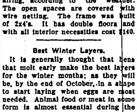
House for Winter Layers.

The front as well as all partitions are of unbleached muslin; no glass about the house. Every day the doors are opened for a long or short airing, according to the weather. The open spaces are covered with wire netting. The frame was built of 2x4's. It has double floors and with all interior necessities cost $140.

Best Winter Layers.

It is generally thought that hens that molt early make the best layers for the winter months; as they will be, by the end of October, in a shape to start laying when eggs are most needed. Animal food or meat in some form is almost essential during the molting season; many fanciers also give an occasional feed of linseed oil meal with excellent results.

POULTRY NOTES



A few undesirable eggs will lower the price of a whole crate.

The egg should be perfect in shape, with fresh, clean appearance.

Fowls that are still heavy in molt should be given a rich oil ration.

The money in the poultry business is made most often from the eggs.

Wheat, coarse cracked corn, and oats are the ideal summer feeds.

Feeding too much corn and barley is responsible for much liver trouble.

The breed and strain have something to do with the size of the eggs.

If certain fowls do not respond to good treatment, kill them or sell them at once.

Turkeys should be raised on fresh ground each year. Diseased birds should be burned.

Full fed hens, having a well balanced ration, will lay larger eggs than hens on stinted feed.

Look after the roofs of the houses that they will not leak when the fall and winter rains come.

Care is necessary to maintain the flavor in a choice egg when it is not eaten as soon as laid.

Some strains of Plymouth Rocks are particularly noticeable for the large size of their eggs.

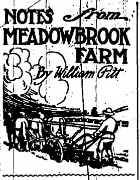
Hens with plenty of exercise and comfortable surroundings lay heavier eggs than those in restricted quarters.

Lack of grit and green food causes sluggish action of the gizzard and intestines. Therefore, give plenty of green food.

While it may not be possible to entirely free the fowls from lice, they may be kept practically free with proper care and attention.

NOTES from MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt



Pure water is essential.

The season for culling the flock is at hand.

Weeds and strawberries are incompatibles.

Starter for butter may be propagated from day to day.

Do not be stingy in the use of clean straw for bedding.

The sheep is more at home on the open prairie than among the fences.

Remove the seeds from the pumpkins before feeding them to the cattle.

Where butter has not the natural yellow color, it is well to use coloring matter.

The best time to cut the tails as well as castrate is when the lamb is a week old.

Cull out the hens carefully, and do not keep more than you have room and feed for.

Sheep return to the soil 80 per cent. of fertility of food eaten. Sheep manure is valuable.

A great deal more money is usually spent in wintering farm work horses than is necessary.

Should maggots get in the animals' wounds, kill them by a light application of chloroform.

Whole grain makes best feed for sheep. Cleanliness, pure water and salt are a necessity.

Provide the hogs a wallow. Nothing serves this purpose better than a stream of running water.

If the pig is stinted in its food at any stage of its life, it can never become a perfect pork-producer.

As new oats come in, give the cows some of them each morning and evening cut green as a soiling crop.

It pays to maintain a heavy flow of milk, even if expensive feeds must be given the cows at certain seasons.

Stock beets planted on rich soil in drills and well cultivated often yield from twenty to forty tons per acre.

Use clover and alfalfa hay, supplemented with roots or ensilage for succulence, if you want an excellent ration.

Corn that yields well in one locality will often make an entire failure in another locality where conditions are different.

Probably the poultry plant on the average farm is usually the poorest equipped and poorest planned department on it.

Remember when you plow in the orchard that the roots are very near the surface. Three inches is plenty deep enough.

Many an animal sold for a high price because of its pedigree, should go to the butcher's pen instead of at the head of a herd.

If ewe's udder is hard or show tendency to garget, use unsalted lard, give it vigorous rubbing and give animal good dose of salts.

The nature and conditions of the soil in which tomatoes are grown has much to do with the size of the crop and health of the plants.

Tankage, a by-product of the slaughter houses, is a wholesome feed for all kinds of live stock, but its greatest value is for hogs.

Patches of roots should be annually grown for the winter food of swine. It will prove a valuable aid in producing good, fat winter porkers.

As a silo will last many years it is not wise to use material in building that will soon decay or is apt to warp or shrink, and thus throw the silo out of shape.

Young colts that are put in the stall and given all the hay they will eat soon become pot-bellied, their hair grows longer and harsher and some of it stands the wrong way.

Usually it is not advisable to pasture new seeding, but often weeds can be destroyed by giving sheep the run of the fields for a few days without material injury to the seeding.

The turkey is a native of America, and, like the Indian and buffalo in their wild state, cannot stand civilization and in their domestic state will only thrive under certain conditions.

Where there is an abundance of good well-cured alfalfa hay, it is almost impossible to select a concentrate to go with it that would not make an acceptable ration to the cow.

The fall, after all of the garden plants have been killed, is the best time to clean up the trash in the garden and burn it to prevent insects from spending the winter [illegible]

Look out for draughts.

Plant legumes in rotation.

Roots should be cut or sliced before feeding.

When marketing lambs leave the culls on the farm.

Sheep more than any other stock relish a change of pasture.

There is no danger of the production of hogs being overdone.

As the sheep bites close, they will eat down weeds to the roots.

In order to have good sized sheep grow them rapidly while young.

Clover or alfalfa seem to contain just what the dainty cow needs.

The total value of farm property in the United States is $40,000,000,000.

Corn contains 86 per cent. fat and heat elements, hence is no egg food.

Ducks do not continue as profitable breeders much beyond the fourth year.

Alsike clover seed cannot be separated from timothy because of its size.

Cool the new cream to the same temperature as the old cream before mixing.

Always if possible remove the sow from the pigs and not the pigs from the sow.

For draft work the mule is valued higher than the average horse, in nearly every instance.

Farmers who are going to feed live stock through the winter should try to have the best possible.

Rutabagas are very satisfactory root crop for winter, yielding as high as 15 tons to the acre at times.

If necessary to assist the ewe in delivering, use vaseline on your hands before commencing the operation.

Woven wire is used a great deal for re-enforcing concrete and in some cases old barbed wire is also used.

Watch out for ticks on the ewes, it does not pay to raise them and you better watch out for them. It pays.

Farmers will soon be feeding new hay and new grain. Change from the old to the new should be made gradually.

Many farmers make a practice of turning lambs into the corn field in the early fall to gather up all the weeds.

The proper treatment of barb wire cuts on horses will mean fewer blemishes and less serious consequences generally.

In feeding fattened stock and dairy cows, gain and profit come in proportion to the amount of food the animals put to use.

A small quantity of linseed meal fed in the milk will balance up the ration and make it practically as good as the whole milk.

Sheep-farming has been practiced since the earliest times, and is one of the most profitable branches of the live stock industry.

It is doubtful if any other one factor contributes more to the aggregate number of bad eggs on the farm than the lack of a sufficient number of properly located, clean nests.

If a big bunch of young pigs is allowed to sleep together in cramped quarters, in cold weather, they will pile up, and the under pigs will suffer. Easy to separate them into lots of eight or ten each.

Tuberculosis in live stock is the same thing as consumption in human beings. There are many ways of spreading it, but the easiest way and the most common is through the droppings of diseased animals.

A sow pig, farrowing at one year old, will, if she and her offspring produce the average number of animals, round up a herd of 500 at the end of the fourth year—provided there are no slips, no death, no runts.

During the year 1909 there were 4,473,000 more hogs killed in this country for food purposes than all other animals combined, including beeves, calves, sheep and lambs, goats, kids, etc.

The good gardener will be as careful to keep weeds from going to seed in the garden from now on, as he was to keep them from growing earlier in the season. This means a clean garden next year.

Alfalfa is a very good feed for horses provided it is fed properly, although it is not considered as valuable for road horses as for working horses.

Corn may be the cheapest ration, so far as dollars and cents are concerned, in its market value, but it undoubtedly is a dear egg food, for it cannot produce what is wanted.

Experiments have shown that stubble burning not only decreases the amount of humus returned to the soil, but also accelerates the exhaustion of that already present in it.

In hogging down corn, fence off only a limited area at a time, as the hogs will eat more of the stalks and other herbage on the ground, and they will not waste as much of the grain.

Many farmers in the corn belt sow rape with the grain to furnish additional feed since this affords an abundance of succulent forage late in the season at [illegible]

Daniel Fahrenheit.

In view of the abnormal weather which we have had this summer we think a tribute of respect should be paid to the memory of Gabriel Daniel Fahrenheit, who was born on September 16, either in 1736 or 1740, it is hard to say which. Before his day several attempts had been made to measure the heat level, not the heat, by tubes containig oil of spirits of wine, but it lay with a bankrupt merchant of Dantzig to show how the feat could be successfully accomplished.

The first thermometers were made with spirits of wine; but the ingenious Gabriel soon adopted mercury as his medium, and so it has remained to this day. His instruments speedily became known throughout the world, and though a more rational method of graduation has since been adopted, the popular mind still clings to the Fahrenheit scale. Our own Royal society thought highly of this humble inventor and acknowledged his genius by making him one of its fellows. To the "Transactions" of the society he contributed several papers.—Pall Mall Gazette.

LOP-SIDED CONTRACT

Husband Now Sorry He Signed Paper to Get Wife to Return.

Every Privilege Is Given to Woman, Even to Entertaining Former Gentlemen Friends, While He Becomes Slave.

Kansas City, Mo.—S. A. Dickson has repudiated the most unique marriage contract ever entered into in the history of Kansas City. The document was drawn up by his wife and gave her every privilege, even to the adoption of affinities if she cared so to do. The Dicksons quarreled a few weeks after their marriage, eighteen months ago, and, Dickson says, under duress of intense love, he signed what he now admits was a very foolish contract to get his wife to return to him.

Details of the marital troubles of the Dicksons were made public the other day in a deposition filed in the circuit court in a suit for divorce filed by Dickson. Dickson admitted he was compelled on several occasions to go on bended knees to his wife and ask her forgiveness. His reward was not forgiveness. He merely was allowed to bask once more in the light of her beauty, to give her his salary each week and subsist on the crumbs of affection she chose to give him.

Mrs. Dickson lives at No. 1120 Tracy avenue, this city. Eighteen months ago they were married. Three weeks later they separated. The husband in his deposition says the separation was due to the fact that she continued to be a friend of men with whom she went before their marriage. Mrs. Dickson says the reason was that her husband was too exacting and jealous without cause.

Last March, upon the earnest solicitation of the husband, a reconciliation was effected, but not until the wife had exacted a written statement from her husband, pledging her independence and promulgating herself as boss of the home. The woman dictated the statement and Dickson signed it. She made no promises. Here is the pledge Dickson took:

To whom it may concern:

I, S. A. Dickson, do hereby agree to all and everything herein mentioned. I agree to allow my wife, T. C. Dickson, to do just as she feels inclined to do, and to feel just as free to come and go and to visit and to go with whom she feels inclined without giving or showing any jealousy to her for such acts on her part, nor watch or condemn her for so doing.

If she will return and live with me once more I will not interfere with her in any way whatever. I wish her to feel just as free to come and go as the day she was born. I will be good and kind to her and give all my earnings unto her. She is to keep them as she sees fit and best. If we should put any of it in the bank, it will be so placed as to require the signature of both of us to draw it out. If I fail to live up to this agreement, I will allow her to have a legal separation, if she so desires. I further agree to make her the legal heir to all my life insurance, or whatever may accumulate in the way of property through our association.

A few weeks after this the Dicksons resumed marriage relations. Before this, Dickson testified, his wife had permitted him to come and visit her a day each week or two, and on each visit he turned over a part of his salary to her. Dickson donned the apron and went into the kitchen after the reconciliation. While he washed the dishes, he said, his wife would talk over the 'phone to gentlemen friends. The telephone was in the next room and the door would be open between the two rooms.

Effects of Chewing Gum.

New York.—Mrs. Lena Stevel was chewing gum in her home, 327 East Ninety-eighth street, when suddenly she shrieked, then gasped. Her family gathered about her, but she could not speak, simply pointing to a place where a false tooth was missing, and then to her throat.

An ambulance in charge of Dr. Stole raced from the Presbyterian hospital.

"Swallowed your tooth?" asked the doctor.

Mrs. Stevel made a great effort and replied:

"I certainly did, and it's gone down, chewing gum and all."

She was taken to the hospital.

Hope to Find Origin of Life.

Baltimore, Mr.—"No man dares to say that the secret of the origin of life will be discovered, yet scientists are working hopefully toward the unraveling of the mystery."

MOTORMAN SEES MANY BUGS

Army of Potato Beetles Halts Street Car Many Minutes at North Rehoboth, Mass.

Providence, R. I.—"What in thunder?" exclaimed a motorman on the Taunton & Pawtucket street railway as his car came to a sliding stop at the foot of a hill in North Rehoboth with the power on and the wheels spinning at top speed. Then he stared with fascinated gaze at a wide yellow streak waving across the road ahead of him and felt of his head.

"Don't turn off the power, Charley; keep the wheels turning so's they can't invade the car," shouted the conductor.

"So's what can't invade the car?" queried the motorman. "You don't have to go batty just because I'm seein' things."

"You're not seeing things, Charley. Them's potato bugs on a migration."

"Sure enough," the motorman acquiesced, gazing at the moving mass. "Gee, just look at the way they dig the grass out by the roots! That's the cause of all the dust, too, isn't it?"

As far as the curious pair and the passengers could see was one moving mass of potato bugs. They kept going by for nearly an hour, it is said, polishing pebbles on their way, scratching bark off trees, and actually running to each other's defense and clinging to the legs of birds when attacked.

Finally, the motorman managed to get his car started over the slippery insect mass by using sand. When he reached the barn he put in a requisition for a large can of paris green.

POSE WHILE ASLEEP

English Society Adopts Fad Started by Austrians.

Latest Craze Is Being Photographed While Asleep—Idea Comes From Austria, Where It Is Already Very Popular.

London.—The latest society craze is being photographed while asleep.

The idea comes from Austria, where it is already very popular, but it has spread to London, and inquiries may show that photographers have begun to follow the fashion or are prepared to do so.

One well-known woman professional photographer recently caused a small sensation by an exquisite picture of a group of sleeping children which she took, and other specialists in portrait work are endeavoring to emulate her, not only in pictures of sleeping children, but in pictures of oblivious grown-ups

Discussing the subject, Mr. George Henry, the well-known portrait painter, said he could not understand why anyone whose waking expression is pleasant should want to be photographed asleep.

"Still, there are some people whose faces look better in repose," he agreed. "There is no expression to be obtained from the eyes of a sleeping person, of course, but there may be something undesirable banished from the face.

"Many people go through life with a set expression—a 'purposeful mask'—on their faces, but when asleep they forget that set expression and you catch them as they really are.

"The chief difficulty in getting a sleeping photograph is, I imagine that no one—or few people—can go to sleep at will. They may close their eyes and pretend to be asleep, but that does not give them a natural sleeping look."

"I do not say that you will get a true likeness of a person when asleep, but you will certainly get a very interesting one," said a well-known sculptor. "The comparison between a 'waking' and sleeping portrait of the same individual should be very interesting.

"The stress of modern life and conditions generally line and mark people's faces, but sleep blots out much of this facial disfigurement, and that is one great reason why women especially should go in for sleep photography. Children, too—although not, of course, for the same reason—ought to be ready and beautiful subjects."

Takes Mail Order Wife.

Evansville, Ind.—Henry Clay Long, a farmer near Fairfield, a few weeks ago advertised for a wife. More than 500 women answered the advertisement and Long finally has selected Miss Bessie Southard of Centertown, Ky., said to be the belle in that section. She arrived at Fairfield the other day and became Mrs. Long. When Miss Southard departed from Kentucky the whole population followed her to the station and showered her with best wishes.

TO MAKE SIBERIA A COLONY

Russian Government Plans to Lessen Emigration to America by Renting Lands to Natives.

St. Petersburg.—If a bill which the Minister of Agriculture is introducing into the Douma during the approaching session becomes law, Siberia will cease to be a Crown possession, and be promoted to the rank of a colony.

Siberia's peasant population is in exactly the same position as before the abolition of serfdom; it has never received the land on which it works. Therefore, the 4,786,730 English square miles which it contains forms an enormous Crown estate, rented to colonists and natives. As the total population of this vast district is only seven millions, and the natural resources considerable, the new bill proposes to introduce a system of so-called "individuality and land ownership"—i. e., to sell land to private persons in lots of various sizes, and to allow land now being worked by colonists, natives and settlers to become the personal property of those who are working it.

Title deeds will be issued to the owners, who cannot take possession thereof till their candidature is approved by the local agricultural authorities and the Agriculture commission, appointed to consider claims. This experiment is to be tried in the four western governments and in the districts of Bajkal, Amur and Primorskaya. The remainder, or more than half the total area, will remain in the Crown's possession, to be gradually sold in small lots to colonists.

Emigrants, who fight shy of Siberia owing to the heavy taxation, bad communication and climatic drawbacks, will be given many facilities and encouragement to go there instead of America. The taxes will be reduced to a minimum and special grants of grain will be given to newcomers, and facilitate for obtaining agricultural implements on long credit terms will be made. The completion of the Amur railway and the double-tracking of the Siberian settlers from those parts of European Russia, where the land famine is most felt.

RULES HUSBAND COMES FIRST

Massachusetts Court Upholds Man's Right to Umbrella if but One in the Household.

Northampton, Mass.—In district court the other day Henry Johnson, carpenter at the State Agricultural college, was charged with assaulting his wife. Wife, son and daughter testified against him. Johnson said the incident occurred on a recent rainy day. There was but one umbrella in the house and a dispute arose whether he or his wife should have it. Johnson said his wife took possession of the umbrella and he used no more force than was necessary to wrest it from her. As there was but one umbrella it seemed to him only fitting that as the head of the family he should have first claim upon it. The court held that Johnson acted within his rights and acquitted him.

In Minnesota.

Important Happenings of the Week Briefly Told.

Two Harbors.—Loggers are sending many men to the woods to open camps and the outlook is for a good-sized cut.

Pipestone.—The contract for seining the rough fish from Lake Shetek has been let to A. Margulis of St. Paul on his bid of $1,900. He will use 190,000 feet of net in the work.

Duluth. — John Frank Treat, of Fargo, N. D., imperial potentate of the Order of the Mystic Shrine, was the guest of honor here at a ceremony in which 43 candidates were initiated.

Faribault.—The cornerstone of the postoffice building will be held under the auspices of the grand lodge of Masons, assisted by the local Masonic lodge and other fraternal societies.

St. Paul. — Peter Juhl, murderer of Detective Fraser of the St. Paul police, pleaded guilty before Judge Orr and was sentenced to life imprisonment in Stillwater prison.

Two Harbors. — Ore shipments through this port are gradually dropping off and the outlook is for an early close. Lumber shipments to lower lakes have been lighter than usual this season.

Owatonna.—Owatonna is making elaborate plans for the entertainment of the members of the Norwegian Sognatalet, which will soon convene in this city. Some noted Scandinavian musicians are expected to attend.

Litchfield.—Manager H. L. Halverson of the Meeker County Farmer's Shipping association reports that since its organization, three years ago, 206 cars of stock have been shipped, for which the farmers received $230,981.

Ely.—The Section 30 Mining company had begun shipping again after a suspension of several months, and 60,000 tons will be moved to the head of the lakes in the next few weeks. Section 30 has nearly doubled its output of 1911 over 1910.

Bemidji.—Bemidji is again in the limelight of superiority, through the fact that three carloads of selected white pine timber, sawed at the local sawmill of the Crookston Lumber company, has been consigned to a dealer at Manchester, England.

Northfield. — St. John's Lutheran church of this city has made plans for the erection of a new church building early next spring. A fund of $18,000 has been raised. The church will seat 800 and will contain recreation and Sunday school rooms in the basement.

Owatonna.—A. L. Ober, of Chatfield, to whom a franchise was voted some time ago, announces that he will now build another electric plant in Owatonna, supplying power from the Zumbro river to Byron, Rochester, Dodge Center, Kasson, Claremont and Owatonna.

Lindstrom.—John Johnson, a farmer, brought to market a load of potatoes which contained sixty bushels and brought $36. There were 3,600 potatoes, an average of sixty potatoes to the bushel, and each brought 1 cent. The load was raised on one-fith of an acre.

Moorhead.—Frank M. Rice, farmer, accused of having taken part in a fake hold-up near Moorhead, by which R. M. Patterson was robbed of $890, was indicted by the grand jury on a charge of grand larceny in the first degree. Howard Lindley confessed that he had held up Patterson, and incriminated Rice. Rice was Patterson's employer and had paid him the $890 the day of the alleged hold-up. The money was recovered.

Albert Lea.—The annual meeting of the Minnesota Butter and Cheesemakers' association will be held in this city Dec. 12, 13 and 14, and plans are in progress for the entertainment of the men who bring the cups in world's contests for the best butter. The indications are that the attendance will be large. The state co-operative creamery of that city, the only one in the world operated by a state, will be one of the drawing cards.

Moorhead.—The grand jury in district court preceding the holding of the regular October term of court, brought in indictments against John M. McGinley and John Drexel. McGinley is charged by the grand jury with murder in the second degree and manslaughter in the first degree. McGinley is accused by causing the death of a missionary named Quinn, by striking him over the head with a cane. Drexel is charged with forgery and grand larceny, both of which crimes, it is alleged, were committed in Barnesville, Minn.

George P. Grout, assistant professor in the dairy division of the animal husbandry department at the agricultural college of the university, has submitted his resignation, to take effect as soon as his successor can be chosen. Prof. Grout will take charge of the Jean Du Luth farm at Duluth. Mr. Grout is the sixth man to leave the department within a comparatively recent period for other more lucrative fields. D. A. Gaumnitz, W. F. Handschin and Prof. Harry Snyder are others who have gone into business or taken positions as instructors elsewhere.

Staples.—The Central Minnesota Dairymen and Buttermakers' association will hold a meeting at Bertha Oct. 26. John M. Lindberg of North Branch, Minn., will speak on "Paying for Quality Cream," and Peter Miller of Morris on "Cheap Production of Butter Fat."

Minneapolis. — E. G. Barnaby, senior partner of E. G. Barnaby & Co., clothiers, and one of the best known of Minneapolis merchants, died after an illness of several months. He was 73 years old and had been a resident of Minneapolis for thirty-three years.

Winona.—Fred Oech, a well-known farmer of Winona county, has demonstrated what can be done in the way of raising fodder on the farm when the hay crop fails. He planted among his standing corn rutabagas, rape and turnips, and has obtained a splendid yield from the twelve acres. The heavy rains contributed largely to the yield.

East Grand Forks.—Accidental death was the verdict returned by the jury that heard the evidence bearing upon the killing of Charles Neri, the man who claimed to have been thrown from the third story window of a local hotel.

Eddie Gillette, the star left halfback of the Wisconsin University football squad, who strained a ligament in one of the early scrimmages with the reserves, has fully recovered.

Offer $7,500 for Chess Match.

So eager are the chess players of the Latin races to bring about a meeting for the world's championship between Jose R. Capablanca of Cuba, winner of the San Sebastian tournament, and Dr. Emanuel Lasker, the title holder, that Buenos Ayres has come forward with an offer of $5,000 and $2,500 for the loser if such a match is played in the Argentine Republic. However, Dr. Lasker has declined, and his reason is unique. If play takes place in a Spanish-speaking country, says the champion, "national sympathy" will lean heavily in favor of Capablanca.

RAN UP AGAINST PILLSBURY

Baron Hengelmuller, Austrian Diplomat, Learned Afterwards Why He Lost at Chess.

Baron Hengelmuller, the Austrian diplomat, a man famous for his chess ability, one day at a house in Washington met a young man whose name he did not catch when the introductions were made. Chess was the topic of the conversation by all those in the company, and presently the young man suggested diffidently that he would be highly honored if the baron would play a game with him.

The baron consented. They sat down. After a few moves the baron looked up from the table check-mated and found the young man reading a paper. The chessmen were placed again and, after not so many moves as before, the baron looked up to find the young man reading the paper and himself checkmated.

After his dinner the baron came back. He wanted another game, being somewhat chagrined at the ease with which he had been beaten. As he came in he found the young man who had played with him that afternoon blindfolded and playing against sixteen opponents at the same time. The young man was Pillsbury.—Saturday Evening Post.

FORWARD PASS STAYS

This Play Expected to Be of Great Importance.

For Those Teams Which Have no Field Goal Men the Tossing Becomes More and More Essential—Rule Changes.

Forward passing is likely to be even more important in football games this year than ever before, according to many critics, and will be the mainstay of a great many teams. Those squads which have field goal kickers of more than usual ability will be able to husband their forward pass plays against weaker opponents, relying upon the ability of their kickers to give them victories. For those which have no field goal men, however, the tossing becomes more and more important, and the coaches who have these teams will have their work cut out for them in constantly developing plays with which to mystify their opponents.

Only one important rule has been made since last season, and this was male with a view of rendering the forward pass a more practicable play. Under last year,s rules, the forward pass had to be made from a point at least five yards back of the line of scrimmage and if uncompleted was brought back to the point from which the pass was made, the uncompleted pass counting a down.

Under the revised rule instead of taking the ball back to the place from which the pass was made the oval is brought back to the place of the previous down. As the rule specifically requires at least five yards back of the line scrimmage and as the point from which the pass was made last year averaged at least ten yards back of the line, it will be seen that in framing the new rule the framers of the code removed a great ground loss penalty.

It was expected last season that the restrictions on the length of the forward pass would result in making the play a short lob instead of a long overhead throw, but this was proved to be wrong, for the one variety of pass was used with as much execution as the other.

The code declares the ball shall be considered dead when it passes a line 20 yards in advance of the line of scrimmage, but as the pass is usually made from a point at least eight yards back of the line of scrimmage the total forward progress of the ball is from 28 to 30 yards, and even with a more generous rule it is doubtful if tosses of more than this distance would be attempted.

In the great majority of cases long passes are shot out toward the ends rather than directly over the line, and it is seldom a pass is caught more than ten yards beyond the line.

Both the long and short pass have their good features to recommend them to coaches, and it is difficult to decide which is the preferable. Neither would be of any use were they not run in a deceptive manner, depending for their effectiveness upon their unexpectedness. It is a poor team that could not stop a forward pass when one is expected, for where there are six men of the offensive team eligible to receive the pass there are 11 on the defense. In addition to this, the offensive man first touching the ball must recover it, while if a ball is touched by an offensive player all 11 of the defending side are thereby made eligible to scramble for it.

SOCIALISTS FAIL

CANDIDATE'S VOTE SHORT OF MAJORITY, AS SHOWN BY COMPLETE RETURNS.

HAVE TO TRY IT AGAIN

Two Men Will Therefore Compete for Office at Polls in December—Many Women Being Registered.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Complete returns from the primary show the failure of the efforts of the Socialists to capture the mayoralty by a majority vote, and thus obviate the necessity of going before the people again on Dec. 5 at the regular election. Mayor George Alexander, "good government" nominee, and Job Harriman, Socialist, will compete in a two-man contest for the office in December.

The returns show the primary vote to have been as follows: Harriman, 20,157; Alexander, 16,700; Mushet, 8,168; Gregory, 327; Becker, 59. Harriman's plurality was 3,367. His vote fell short 4,188 of a majority over all which was necessary for election.

The Socialist candidates for the city council and all except two for the board of education will have their names on the regular ticket. The Socialist candidates for city auditor and city assessor will have to contest with the opposition at the regular polls.

Impartial leaders say the question in the coming campaign that is agitating all factions is "what will the women do?" There are now approximately 26,000 women registered in Los Angeles and by Nov. 9, when registration closes for the fair sex, it is believed that 40,000 will register.

Herculean efforts have been and are being made by the Socialists to enroll as many working women as possible. Socialist leaders claim 90 per cent of these will vote for Harriman.

Seemingly recognizing that their only hope of offsetting the "women labor vote" lies in the registration of women in the residential districts, the "good government" forces have sworn in hundreds of deputies, who will at once begin a house to house canvass.

TO CANCEL ORE LEASE.

Steel Corporation Also Recommends Reduction in Freight Rates.

New York, Oct. 27.—At a special meeting the directors of the United States Steel corporation decided to cancel the corporation's lease of the Great Northern ore properties. The directors also adopted resolutions recommending to the directors of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company a reduction in freight rates on iron ore from points in the Mesaba range to Duluth to a figure not exceding 60 cents a ton, and to Duluth & Iron Range Railway company a similar reduction on the iron ore rate from the Vermilion & Mesaba Iron range to Duluth and Two Harbors, Minn.

Besides recommending to the two railroad companies the reduction in rates, the resolution embodied the following clauses:

"That all points upon said range" (in the case of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad company the word 'ranges' is used) "reached by the lines of said company, be included in establishing freight rates upon iron ore from the mines to Duluth."

The basis of reduction, according to the resolution is to be the gross ton, 2,240 pounds. It was denied that the resignation of William Ellis Corey as a director in the corporation was received. J. Pierpont Morgan attended the meeting.

STATE WANTS ITS TAXES.

Itasca Logging Road Said to Owe Commonwealth $12,499.

Deer River.—The fact has been established that the Minneapolis & Rainy Lake railroad, known as the Itasca logging road, has kept no record of cars received from the Great Northern, consigned to the Deer River Lumber company and the Itasca Lumber company, and that these companies were given a rate of 50 to 66⅔ per cent of the published freight rates.

There has been withheld from the state $12,499.12 in penalties and back taxes for the period of six years.

A draft for this amount has been drawn on the company by State Auditor Iverson and turned over to the state treasurer's office. This is claimed by the state in accordance with the gross earnings tax law.

The road runs from Duluth to Big Fork and Stanley, on two branches. For some time independent loggers have alleged that freight rates were prohibitive. Deputies from the public examiner's office went over the books of the road here and at Minneapolis and disclosed the fact that no record of the majority of cars consigned to the company was kept after being turned over by the Great Northern.

WIFE AND CHILD BURNED.

Farmer Near Granite Falls Saves Youngest After Stove Explosion.

Granite Falls.—The farm house of Ole Johnson, two miles down the river, was destroyed by fire, and his wife and one child were killed by the flames. Mr. Johnson says he had been trying to start a soft coal fire in the kitchen stove, and as it would not burn readily he went out after some kindling.

While he was away he heard an explosion, and, looking up, saw the entire lower part of the house ablaze. Rushing to the house he succeeded in getting out the youngest child, but his wife and the older child had been left in the kitchen and it was impossible to enter this room on account of the heat.

After the fire had consumed the house pieces of the stove were found scattered about the room and some pieces were found in other rooms, and it is evident that after her husband left the house, the woman thought she would aid in starting the fire by pouring kerosene on the hot coals.

DIVORCE BILL SET ASIDE.

Former Minnesota Banker Said to Be Liable to Arrest for Bigamy.

Salem, Ore.—The report is gaining circulation that J. C. Evans, cashier of the closed First State Bank of Philomath, Ore., now under arrest on charge of false statements of the bank's condition, is a man from Felton, Minn., who, under the name of Charles Evans, has been involved in divorce litigation in Clackamas county and in the supreme court for four years, and who now stands, by reason of a decision of the supreme court, subject to arrest on the charge of bigamy.

Affidavits on file say that Evans and his first wife were married in Columbus, Ohio, in 1889. They were interested in a small bank in Felton, Minn., where his wife gave him $500 to invest.

According to the affidavits, she remained in Ohio with her mother, who was ill, until she could get away, then she went to Minnesota to find Evans living with a girl.

Evans said the girl was an orphan to whom he had decided they would give a home. To strangers he would introduce her as his daughter. Soon his wife objected to the girl and ordered her away. This led to the elopement of Evans and the young woman. Scandal was rife over the affair and people of Felton egged Evans, according to the affidavits.

Later in 1905, Mrs. Evans alleges she heard her husband was in Rainier, Ore., with the intention of starting a bank and that he had changed his name to "J. C. Evers." No trace was found of him until 1910, when Evans obtained a decree of divorce at Oregon City.

Attorneys of Portland were engaged by Mrs. Evans to break the decree, which they succeeded in doing.

CANADA'S IMMENSE WHEAT FIELDS.

THE ATTRACTION FOR THREE TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAYS.

Last August there visited the Canadian west the vice-president of the largest individual hardware company in the United States. As his firm have a turnover of millions, and deals extensively with farm implements, this man took a deep interest in crop conditions in Canada, and on his return he embodied his findings in an article for the Hardware Reporter. This article should be of special interest to farmers.

The writer speaks of the importance of the spring wheat crop of Western Canada. He might also have spoken of the importance of the oat crop and also of the winter wheat crop, as well as barley. Winter wheat during the past few years has been a great success, and experiments have shown that it can be grown with success in almost any portion of the three provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. But apart from this, the spring wheat crop is the one generally grown, and all who know anything of grain, anyone who has had anything to do with markets, knows or has heard of the high character of this cereal and the splendid yields that are annually produced. Reproducing from this article:—

"In a land of such great sweep, and of such difference in soil and climate, there are many resources, but none are at present of the same overwhelming importance as the spring wheat crop. In the interminable prairie stretches of the northwest provinces it is the one absorbing topic of interest and of conversation during its growing and its harvesting, for upon its success or failure hangs the weal or woe of a large part of the Dominion. Its influence extends far down into the United States, drawing thousands of farmers northwards with the lure of cheap lands, but likewise beyond the great lakes, even to the easy going maritime provinces, calling the flower of their young men to its opportunities. Development in these prairie provinces goes on at high pressure for everything hangs on the outcome of spring wheat. Success has emboldened the raisers of this one all-important crop, and each year there is further incursion into those northern fields that only a short time ago were regarded as Arctic wastes. The Canadian Northwest seems to be one of those modern agricultural examples set forth to drive the final nail in the coffin of that ancient Malthusian delusion that population tends to outrun the means of subsistence, since the only fear now among Canadian economists is, as to the danger of overstocking the wheat market. Only about two and one-half per cent of possible arable lands in the northwest provinces is now under cultivation, and this year the crop promises to be close to 200,000,000 bushels, so that your imagination and your arithmetic can easily supply the answer as to the possible or even probable outcome."

During the months of July and August the weather was unfavourable and the production of a 200 million yield of wheat will not likely be realised, but even with this, the threshing reports coming to hand show that the crop will be a splendidly paying one.

The Bishop and the Boy.

The late Bishop Williams of Connecticut was very fond of children, and it was always a joy to us youngsters when he came for his visit to my father's parish. His anecdotes and stories enlivened the whole household. Once when he was staying with us he told the following story:

"One Sunday morning, just after breakfast, I repaired to the rector's study, where I was soon followed by his little four-year-old son, who climbed up on my knee and began to talk. Suddenly the little fellow looked up into my face and said: 'Bissop, do 'oo want to see my piggy book?'

"'Yes, indeed,' said I. So the child slid down and started to get the book. When half-way across the room a sudden idea seemed to strike him, and, running back, and putting one hand on my knee, he looked up in my face, and shook him little forefinger at me, whispering: 'Bissop, it's Sunday. We must do sis on se sly!'"—Harper's Magazine.

The Canadian elevators are full and refuse to accept any more grain. The Canadians of the west would like to use the elevators on this side of the line, but the Canadian east prefers this grain should rot. It used to be that way in the United States.

When one sees who and what are back of the opposition to the initiative, referendum, recall, state conservation, and a clean up program, he becomes convinced that such a program must possess unusual merit to awaken such unusual opposition.

Farm, Stock, and Home asks why the government, instead of fighting the consolidation of business, should not lead a hand toward consolidating business cooperatively for the benefit of the people. Such action would be in harmony with and not counter to the great industrial currents of the age.

How many poor children might be housed and fed for the period of their childhood from the funds that changed hands on the recent effort of the Athletics and the Giants? This is not to be understood as a slam on the great national game, but it would be a nice fad to devote the winnings to promoting good and humane projects. It would take a lot of the curse off gambling.—Duluth News Tribune.

President Taft, in his speech at Chicago Tuesday, admitted the possibility of republican defeat in the coming national election. This and other signs of the times are taken to mean that the "interests" are preparing to leave the republican party to its fate and try to nominate and elect a democrat whom they can control, to the presidency; Mr. Taft having satisfied himself that he cannot be reelected.

Big Business Loses Control

The trust prosecutions are epochal and vastly significant in one way, even if, as many believe, the law on which they are based is wrong and though direct benefit to the people from these prosecutions will be wholly lacking

These prosecutions show that the control of the people's government is passing out of the hands of Big Business, and, if not directly into the hands of the people, still into the hands of those who know that the people refuse to be burdened longer with the oppressions of government fostered financial conspiracies to plunder the many for the enrichment of the few.

If, as a strong independent section of the people seems coming to believe, action along the lines of the Sherman law is not going to produce the needed results of lower prices, and such relief can come only from rigid regulation of capitalization and profits, the situation will right itself as that sentiment takes more tangible form. The matter of real importance is that the government is ceasing to foster the trusts, and that the will and need of the people is being recognized.—Duluth Herald.

Delay Is Defeat

The decision of the United States Supreme court in the case involving a dispute between federal and state control of railroads as to the enforcement of safety appliance laws gives scant comfort to those who still hope that Minnesota may win in the pending rate cases, where much the same question is involved.

In both cases the issue is whether the states can regulate railroads within their borders when the regulation affects interstate traffic even indirectly; and the court held yesterday that they cannot. So far as safety appliance legislation is concerned the decision completely wipes out state control and puts the railroads of the country, beyond dispute, under the federal law. It is putting it too strongly to say that this decision precludes a favoring finding in the Minnesota rate cases, but that it does materially lessen a hope of victory for Minnesota that was none too bright before is beyond dispute.

This simply adds emphasis to the view that it is folly for this state to delay needed action as to railroad taxation while it waits for the decision in the rate cases. To wait means to delay until it will be too late to hold an extra session; and that, of course, is the object of those who are urging delay.

Railroad taxation is, beyond controversy, in the control of the state. The courts have finally and definitely so held. Railroad taxes in Minnesota are ridiculously low. The state tax rate is ridiculously high, the highest in forty years. If the railroad taxes are not increased the state is likely to be embarassed seriously, even with its proposed high tax rate. If they are not increased at an extra session they can not be increased for two years, and the increase for two years will be lost forever. If they are increased at an extra session the increase for the two years that will be gained will repay the cost of the session a hundred times over.

Governor Eberhart should call an extra session for next January. He has promised to call it anyway for reapportionment, and the situation demands that he call it for an increase in railroad taxes as well.—Duluth Herald.

Thoughts on Sleeplessness

Sleeplessness, common to the American race, is chiefly caused by the great national habit of coffee drinking. A nation soaked with caffeine could hardly be expected to be a race of good sleepers like the Germans, who drink little coffee or narcotic of any kind. A sufferer has written the Ladies' Home Journal that she has been relieved by eating a raw onion sandwich before going to bed. It was probably not the sandwitch, but the glass of golden grain belt beer with which she accompanied it that did the work for her. Order of Alex Thompson, Crookston or of your dealer.

THIS IS TO LOVE.

AT last I've found a kindred one
Who understands my every mood.
My soul, my open heart are his;
My every prayer to him I give.
He loves me for my deeds undone,
My inner self, my hidden good.
This is to love—to live!

MY better nature swiftly ran
To lift my soul up high to him.
An angel I became—O God!
He is not true! I wildly grieve—
"I will, I will unlove this man!"
"Too late," cries quick conviction grim.
"This is to love—to live!"

—Jeannette Robinson Murphy.

REINCARNATION.

IN lonely ways of dim forgotten lands,
Ah, do you not recall how once we went?
Did we not gaze and hold each other's hands
In utter ecstasy of sheer content?
As for what we said—we said but nothing;
The naked truth was ours, that needs no clothing.

Strange flowers were near us—nameless to me now—
And strange old cities—were they quick or dead?
We met—we two—the when or why or how Matters no more. That golden hour is fled,
But ineffaceable its glory lingers
As melodies survive their primal singers.

And you? The moment eyes encountered eyes
Yours were alight with memories and with dreams.
You are mine, all mine; you know it. Oh, be wise
Ere over all our past and present streams
And snaps our secret chains of joy and wonder
And whelms and whirls us, impotent, asunder.

Listen. In visions I will come tonight
And seek with you those old mysterious lands;
And we shall see in the gray, uncertain light—
Do you remember?—where the temple stands,
The desolate temple of some faith unknown,
The sunset fading on its solemn stone.

And we shall never leave those lands again,
But all that should have been for us shall be;
Reality forgone, dreams shall remain,
And sweet oblivion cover you and me.
Dare all, renounce all—come! * * * I do not doubt you—
I who have waited centuries without you.

—Pall Mall Gazette.

A London paper records a remarkable case of this kind in 1817, when Lady Mary X. married Mr. Mudford, a London attorney.

Lady Mary was a girl of peerless charms, the most beautiful of all the court ladies and the favorite toast of the world of aristocrats. She might—for her birth and fortune were almost equal to her beauty—have chosen her husband from among dukes, and even more than one royal prince sought her hand in vain.

To the consternation of society, she married Mr. Mudford, not only "a pettifogging attorney," but a man of almost unnatural ugliness of face and with a deformed hand and foot. Singular, too, as it may appear, her married life was one of unclouded happiness, and to her dying day, nearly forty years later, she never seemed to have a moment's regret for her choice of a husband.

Still more remarkable was the story told of a most beautiful heiress with an attachment for one of the freaks of a traveling show, and she persisted in marrying him in spite of all the efforts of her friends and relations. This singular object of her affections masqueraded under the title of "the man monkey, or the ugliest man in the world," and he had an excellent claim to the title.—Exchange.

A Gift with a Thought in It

What other Christmas present costs so little and means so much as a subscription to The Youth's Companion—fifty-two weeks for $1.75? It is a gift which benefits not only the one who receives it, but every member of the same household.

With many Christmas presents the sense of novelty wears off by the week's end, but The Youth's Companion is as new and sought after the fifty-second week of the year as the first. It is elastic in its adaptibility, too; for it does not matter whether the present is for a boy or a girl, young married people, sedate couples, grandparents—there never was one yet who did not set store by The Youth's Companion. You cannot make a mistake if you give The Companion—and it is only $1.75 a year now. On Jan. 1, 1912, the price will be advanced to $2.

The one to whom you give the subscribtion will receive free The Companion's calendar for 1912, lithographed in ten colors and gold, and you, as giver of the subscription, will receive a copy of the calendar.

Zaiser-Mussey

A wedding of considerable local interest is that of Miss Lorena M. Zaiser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Zaiser of this city, and Mr. Homer F. Mussey of Thief River Falls.

They were married at 8:30 o'clock Monday evening, October 23. The wedding occurred at St. Barnard's Catholic church at Thief River Falls, Rev. Fr. Adolph officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Mussey will reside at Thief River Falls, Mr. Mussey being the junior editor of the Thief River Falls Times. Both of the young people are well known in Red Lake Falls and their friends are glad of the opportunity to offer congratulations and best wishes.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

EATING AN APPLE.

What You Take Into Your System With the Fruit.

"Do you know what you're eating?" said the doctor to the girl.

"An apple, of course."

"You are eating," said the doctor, "albumen, sugar, gum, malic acid, gallic acid, fiber, water and phosphorus."

"I hope those things are good. They sound alarming."

"Nothing could be better. You ate, I observed, rather too much meat at dinner. The malic acid of apples neutralizes the excess of chalky matter caused by too much meat and thereby helps to keep you young. Apples are good for your complexion. Their acids drive out the noxious matters which cause skin eruptions. They are good for your brain, which those same noxious matters if retained render sluggish. Moreover, the acids of the apple diminish the acidity of the stomach that comes with some forms of indigestion. The phosphorus, of which apples contain a larger percentage than any other fruit or vegetable, renews the essential nervous matter of the brain and spinal column. Oh, the ancients were not wrong when they esteemed the apple the food of the gods—the magic renewer of youth to which the gods resorted when they felt themselves growing old and feeble. I think I'll have an apple," concluded the doctor."—New York Tribune.

Strange Lapse of Memory.

Cases of forgetfulness on matters of interest are on record. While Dr. Priestly was preparing his work entitled "Harmony of the Gospels" he had taken great pains to inform himself on a subject which had been under discussion relative to the Jewish Passover. He wrote out the result of his researches and laid the paper away. His attention and time being taken with something else, some little time elapsed before the subject occurred to his mind again. Then the same time and pains were given to the subject that had been given to it before, and the results were again put on paper and laid aside. So completely had he forgotten that he had copied the same paragraphs and reflections before that it was only when he had found the papers on which he had transcribed them that it was recalled to his recollection. This same author had frequently read his own published writings and did not recognize them.

HER BODY FOUND IN TRUNK

Woman Ends Life in Remarkable Manner.

A most extraordinary suicide occurred at Rochester. Mrs. Nellie Cook Purcell, a beautiful woman of twenty-nine, whose former home was in St. Paul, killed herself at the home of her sister by covering her face with a handkerchief saturated with chloroform and then curling up in a large trunk, the lid of which she tightly closed that all air might be excluded.

Mrs. Purcell had been in the state hospital at St. Peter and Rochester about three years, but some four months ago was discharged as cured. She had been divorced from her husband at St. Paul several years ago.

BLOWN UP BY DYNAMITE

Homesteader Sits on Box of Explosive and Sets Off Fuse.

Claus Carlson, a homesteader, twenty-eight years old, living north of Deer River, Itasca county, committed suicide by sitting on a box of dynamite and setting it off in a tent back of his house, where a lumberman's outfit was kept. Fellow workmen heard him say as he was setting the dynamite off, "Run for your lives, I am going up."

The camp was badly shattered and the men inside barely escaped. The body was blown fifty feet and badly mangled. Carlson received a letter from Sweden recently that his sister committed suicide in a similar way.

IT'S SO

TOWER OF BABEL.

Traditions as to the Height of the Famous Structure.

The actual height at which the last stone of that famous structure, the tower of Babel, rested cannot, on account of the remoteness of the times at which it is said to have existed, ever become more than a matter of merest conjecture. Herodotus, who lived about 1,700 years after that "great spiral way to heaven" is said to have been attempted, says that he saw at Babylon a structure consisting of eight towers raised one above another, each seventy-five feet in height, but whether this ruin was the remains of the tower of Babel it was even then impossible to ascertain. Herodotus, usually minutely exact in his writing, leaves us in ignorance as to how the upper level of each of these seventy-five foot towers was reached from the level below.

As might be expected, even in tradition, a wide difference of opinion exists as to the height of the tower. Most orientalists maintain that God did not put a stop to the work until the tower had reached a height of 10,000 fathoms, or about twelve miles. In Ceylonese tradition it is said to have been as high as 20,000 elephants, each standing one above the other. St. Jerome asserts on the authority of persons who had examined the ruins that it did not reach a height exceeding four miles. Other statements are still more extravagant.—London Saturday Review.

Splendid Crops

In Saskatchewan (Western Canada)

800 Bushels from 20 acres of wheat was the thresher's return from a Lloydminster farm in the season of 1910. Many fields in that as well as other districts yielded from 25 to 35 bushels of wheat to the acre. Other grains in proportion.

LARGE PROFITS are thus derived from the FREE HOMESTEAD LANDS of Western Canada.

This excellent showing causes prices to advance. Land values should double in two years' time. Grain growing, mixed farming, cattle raising and dairying are all profitable. Free Homesteads of 160 acres are to be had in the very best districts; 160 acre pre-emptions at $3.00 per acre within certain areas. Schools and churches in every settlement, climate unexcelled, soil the richest; wood, water and building material plentiful.

For particulars as to location, low settlers' railway rates and descriptive illustrated pamphlet, "Last Best West," and other information, write to Sup't of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to Canadian Government Agent.

FJORDS OF NORWAY

Torghatten Is a Perpendicular Giants' Cauldron.

Natural Tunnel Bored Through Great Rock During Glacial Period—Looks as Though Chiseled by Hand of Man.

Christina, Norway.—Like huge serpents of clear sea water the fjords of Norway wriggle miles inward into the land and offer to the eye some of the most picturesque landscapes in the world. At times the channel narrows between sheer cliffs to the width of a tourist steamer and then it suddenly broadens out into an island lake bordered with meadows and deep green pine forests. Farther north glaciers and snowfields come down almost to the water's edge and nature is barren excepting where a few hardy plants struggle for a bare existence. According to geologists these intricate fjords were formed by the movement of ice in the glacial period. One mass of ice spread from Russia across the Baltic sea and Sweden to the valleys of Norway; the other pushed eastward from the Atlantic and it was in these fjords, then high-lain valleys, that the two frozen waves fought against each other, wearing away soil and strand until, when the ice melted, the valleys had disappeared and fjords had taken their place. But gigantic rocks and peaks which had resisted the friction of the glaciers remained.

There are at least 150,000 of these islands, some of them over 3,000 feet in height, and their grotesque shapes are not the least attractive feature in the weird panorama of broken sea and land. The most famous is the Torghatten, about five miles to the north of the Bindalsfjord in Nordland. Its shape, as indicated by its name, is that of a Norwegian market hat floating on the water and attaining a height of over 800 feet. What gives it its unique character, however, is a natural tunnel bored through it during the glacial period. As this tunnel is 400 feet above the level of the sea some idea can be formed of the extent to which the soil was worn away. In reality this strange hole is a perpendicular giant's cauldron in which stone, ice and water churned and swirled until they had perforated the rock in their frantic Arctic struggle and gained an outlet for the impatient masses behind. So perfectly did they carve the tunnel that in parts it almost looks as though it had been chiseled by the band of man. On the eastern side it is only 64 feet high, increasing to 250 feet on the western. Its length is over 500 feet, the walls are almost perpendicular and the floor covered with the debris of ages and with remains of the last struggle, just before wave and ice retreated. Gazing through it from the western extremity the spectator is rewarded with a peculiarly framed panorama of blue water, rugged coast and jagged islands, with perhaps a quaint Norwegian fishing smack silently pursuing its way southward.

WAS BITTEN BY 2,000 DOGS

Denver's Dog Catcher Holds a Record but Is None the Worse for His Experiences.

Denver, Colo.—Two thousand dogs have now had luncheon off Herman Carn, the official dog catcher of Denver, the last to take advantage of his generous girth being a hungry Newfoundland dog which embroidered his initials on Carn's back recently. Following his usual custom, Carn bathed the wound with carbolic acid, and then started off to provide a banquet for some other dog.

Carn has been in charge of the bowwow bureau for years and picks up on an average of 10,000 stray dogs every year. At first he tried to keep track of his bites by making an entry in a book, but they came so fast that he had to buy an adding machine. Save for a couple of serious punctures in his nose, inflicted by a peevish pup, Carn's exterior appearance does not differ from that of the ordinary dog catcher.

It is not until he disrobes, as he did one day recently at the request of the city officials, that the extent of his patriotic services become apparent. His exquisitely carved anatomy is a splendid tribute to the artistic marksmanship of the canine family. His legs look like perforated music rolls, while his back resembles a cane bottom chair.

Dog's True Heaven.

Wonderfully trained sympathetic and smart dogs are the dearest companions of almost every German student who has the money to afford one or more. These can be seen in the university towns fantastically outfitted with the student corps color, in ribbons or wearing the tiny monkey student cap on doggie's head. Often are dogs sent on all sorts of chores, carrying a basket of eggs, bread or butter, a bottle of brandy, dressed chicken, etc. Outside of too many labor stunts—often grievous drudgery—Germany is the dog's true heaven.

Musician Wanted.

In a parish in Wales where very little English was spoken a general meeting was held to consider the desirability of putting a chandelier into the schoolroom. Every one seemed in favor of the idea.

"Do you think we ought to have one, Mr. Davis?" said the schoolmaster to a venerable parishioner.

"I agree to it," was the reply; "but there is one thing I wish to know. If we have a—a—"

"Chandelier," said the schoolmaster, helping him out.

"If we have a chandelier," the old man continued, "who is going to play it?"

THE TEA PENALTY.

A Strong Man's Experience.

Writing from a busy railroad town the wife of an employe of one of the great roads says:

"My husband is a railroad man who has been so much benefited by the use of Postum that he wishes me to express his thanks to you for the good it has done him. His waking hours are taken up with his work, and he has no time to write himself.

"He has been a great tea drinker all his life and has always liked it strong.

"Tea has, of late years, acted on him like morphine does upon most people. At first it soothed him, but only for an hour or so, then it began to affect his nerves to such an extent that he could not sleep at night, and he would go to his work in the morning wretched and miserable from the loss of rest. This condition grew constantly worse, until his friends persuaded him, some four months ago, to quit tea and use Postum.

"At first he used Postum only for breakfast, but as he liked the taste of it, and it somehow seemed to do him good, he added it to his evening meal. Then, as he grew better, he began to drink it for his noon meal, and now he will drink nothing else at table.

"His condition is so wonderfully improved that he could not be hired to give up Postum and go back to tea. His nerves have become steady and reliable once more, and his sleep is easy, natural and refreshing.

He owes all this to Postum, for he has taken no medicine and made no other change in his diet.

"His brother, who was very nervous from coffee-drinking, was persuaded by us to give up the coffee and use Postum and he also has recovered his health and strength." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

RECALLS INDIAN ATROCITIES

Monument Adorned With Hieroglyphics Tells Tale of Whites Carried Away Captive.

Reading, Vt.—Near the main road leading from Weathersfield to Reading, a passerby may observe two monuments adorned with Indian hieroglyphics.

The larger of the two contains the following inscription: "This is near the spot where the Indians encamped the night after they took Mr. Johnson and family, Mr. Labarree and Farnsworth, August 30, 1754." The two monuments were erected in 1799 by Mrs. Johnson and her fellow prisoner, Mr. Labarree, to commemorate the dreadful march with the Indians from Charlestown, N. H., over to the Otter creek, then to Lake Champlain and Canada. The details of that march are dramatic.

Midway between daybreak and sunrise August 30, 1754, Lieutenant Johnson, wife and four small children, with other prisoners, were captured and forced on the march. Captain Straw pursued the Indians across the Connecticut and fought with them near the General Lewis Morris place in Springfield, but did not release the captives. They were twenty days in reaching St. Francis, Canada, where they remained as captives three years.

THE BIRTHPLACE OF JOHNSON

This Historic and Crude Old Building Is Still Standing In Raleigh, N. C.

Raleigh, N. C.—This old and simple building, erected sometime during the latter part of the eighteenth century, still stands in Raleigh, a historic building, attracting the interest of strangers, and held sacred in the hearts of Americans. Within its rough and crude walls, in 1808, the eyes of Andrew Johnson first saw the light of day.

Looking today upon the simplicity of this structure, we are reminded of him whom it once sheltered. Plain, even homely, yet so staunch as to withstand the shocks of storm in summer and winter through all these years, even as he withstood the jibes and sneers of his enemies during the strenuous period in which he held the helm of the ship of state.

Hampered with the illiteracy, common with those of humbler origin at that time, even unable to sign his name until after ripe manhood; yet, with the grim determination of his race, he surmounted all obstacles, till he stood upon the highest point to which the American, politically speaking, can obtain.

GIRL ORDERS BABY SISTER

Little Tot Calls at Doctor's Office and Says It Is to Be Sent Immediately—Tells Mother.

Winsted, Conn.—Amy Bull, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Bull of Center street, called at the office of Dr. D. D. Reidy on Elm street and inquired if the doctor was home. She was informed that he was not and asked if there was any word she wanted to leave for the doctor.

"I want to leave an order," the child replied. "Tell the doctor to bring me a baby sister at once. They have got one in the next house, and I want one. You won't forget to tell the doctor, will you?"

Assured that the doctor would get her order, little Miss Bull continued on her way to High street to visit friends. Upon her return home Amy informed her mother that she had stopped at the doctor's office and added:

"I left an order for a baby sister."

The Test of a Man.

Giving evidence at an inquest at Yarmouth, a market stall carrier declared he could take ten pints of beer before breakfast and get home all right. The coroner told him he ought to be ashamed to say so and the witness replied that a man who could not take four or five pints was no man at all.—London Evening Standard.

LITTLE RUSE DIDN'T SUCCEED

Youngster's Scheme Was All Right, But Economical Father Was a Match for Him.

The proprietor of the most prominent hotel in the town of S——, Ky., is a man of a very economical nature, in fact he is an extremist in this feature. He has a six-year-old red-headed son that didn't inherit his fother's economical disposition. Recently the son was very much in need of a five-cent piece for soda water purposes. He went into the dining-room, where he was free from observation, and removed his shoe shrings and placed them in his hip pocket for future reference. Returning to the office he approached his father and said:

"Pa, give me a nickel to get me a pair of shoe strings."

His father glanced down at his son's shoes, then turning around approached the office safe and opened it in silence. He took out the cash box and raising the lid extracted a pair of new shoe strings, which he handed to his son without a word. The youngster took the strings with a crestfallen air and then to the amusement of the onlookers, exclaimed:

"Stung again, by granny."

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more." (Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 18 K, Boston.

Literary Criticism.

They were discussing a certain authoress at dinner, and a well-known critic raised a laugh by remarking: "Well, her hair's red, even if her books are not."

The mild young man in the corner made a mental note fo the sally for future use, and at another party shortly afterward he carefully guided the conversation into literary channels, Tit-Bits informs its readers. Fortunately, some one mentioned the desired name, and he triumphantly cried out: "Well, she's got red hair, even if her books haven't!"

Astonished the "Cop."

Police Lieutenant "Barney" Kelsher always has a new story to tell.

"Two of our 'finest' were walking along Broadway not so long ago," began the lieutenant, unfolding his latest offering, "and their attention was attracted to the bronze figure of an ape standing upright in the window of a large jewelry store.

"'What kind of an animal is that supposed to be?' asked one of the other.

"'You surprise me with your thickness,' returned the second cop. 'That's a gorilla. Never heard of them before?'

"'Sure, and I read about them in the histories,' he answered. 'My, what a lot of damage they did during the Civil war! How did a general ever make those things mind him?'"—New York Sun.

More English Humor.

The first night Walter Kelly, known to vaudeville as the "Virginia Judge," walked up the Strand he complained to his English companion that the famous street in London was dark at nine o'clock. "Why," said he, "at this hour Broadway is as bright as day. There is one sign alone, 'The Chariot Race,' in which there are 50,000 electric lights." "But I say, old top," said his English friend, "wouldn't that be rather conspicuous?"

Toasting the Teachers.

There was a meeting of the new teachers and the old. It was a sort of love feast, reception or whatever you call it. Anyhow, all the teachers got together and pretended they didn't have a care in the world. After the eats were et the symposiarch proposed a toast:

"Long Live Our Teachers!"

It was drank enthusiastically. One of the new teachers was called on to respond. He modestly accepted. His answer was:

"What on?"

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, their heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which contains no dangerous narcotics nor alcohol.

The ingredients, as attested under oath, are Stone root (Collinsonia Canadensis), Bloodroot (Sanguinaria Canadensis), Golden Seal root (Hydrastis Canadensis), Queen's root (Stillingia Sylvatica), Black Cherrybark (Prunus Virginiana), Mandrake root (Podophyllum Peltatum), with triple refined glycerine, prepared in a scientific laboratory in a way that no druggist could imitate.

This tonic contains no alcohol to shrink up the red blood corpuscles; but, on the other hand, it increases their number and they become round and healthy. It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anemic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing. Stick to this safe and sane remedy, and refuse all "just as good" medicines offered by the druggist who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do you half as much good.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

VOLUME XXXI. | ST HILAIRE, MINNESOTA, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1911. | NUMBER 18.

NORTHROP NAMED

PRESIDENT EMERITUS IS SUGGESTED FOR REPRESENTATIVE-AT-LARGE.

APPRECIATES THE IDEA

Need for Much Work in Congress at Present Time, but Doubts Whether He Could Be of any Service.

Minneapolis.—When asked whether he would allow the alumni of the University of Minnesota to place him in nomination for representative at large, as reported in Minneapolis they intend doing, if he was willing, Dr. Cyrus Northrop, president emeritus of the university, said:

"This question does not have to be decided at once. I haven't given it any thought. It would, however, be a great deal against my inclination, and the only thing that would induce me to accept such a proposition would be the thought that I could do good. And I doubt whether this is possible.

"I realize that there is need for much work in Congress at present, and I appreciate the trust reposed in me by those who have nominated my name for the position."

Further than this, Dr. Northrop refused to discuss the matter.

Many prominent citizens of the state have been mentioned for the honor. As the next Legislature will reapportion the state into ten congressional districts, the representative at large will only serve for one term.

Dr. Northrop, while a professor at Yale, took an active part in politics and was a good campaigner for the Republican party. He maintained a non-partisan attitude while president of the University of Minnesota, and the first politcal speech he had made for twenty-seven years, it is said, was at the Minneapolis Auditorium the evening of Oct. 24, when he introduced President Taft. At a banquet of the German Pedagogical society in Minneapolis on the evening of Oct. 27, Dr. Northrop gave his views on the question of the recall, the initiative and the referendum.

DEDICATE BIG WATER PLANT.

Governor Eberhart Attends Granite Falls Exercises—Editors Organize.

Granite Falls.—The citizens of Granite Falls held exercises dedicating the new municipal electric light and power plant and county bridge just completed. The bridge was erected at a cost of $16,000 and the power plant cost more than $46,000, exclusive of the water works system.

Governor Eberhart attended and addressed an audience which taxed the capacity of the opera house. He spoke on the utilization of the state's resources and dwelt particularly on conservation and agricultural and manual training in the schools.

His address was the subject of much favorable comment. The city also entertained the editors of the Seventh district. About forty were in attendance.

An evening session was held at which addresses were made by Governor Eberhart, Congressman Volstead, Lieutenant Governor Gordon and others. A banquet followed. The editors perfected a district organization. H. E. Hoard of Motevideo was elected president; J. Brylindsen of Canby, vice president; Theo Christianson of Dawson, secretary, and C. A. Bennet of Granite Falls, treasurer.

DISMISSED, IS REARRESTED.

E. E. Geralds Now Faces Municipal Charge of Third Degree Arson.

Bemidji.—Within less than an hour after his case was dismissed in district court on a charge of arson in the third degree, alleged to have been committed at Black Duck April 19, E. E. Geralds was rearrested on a municipal court warrant charging him with the same offense. The case against his twin brother, Edwin Geralds, also was dismissed, but he was not rearrested.

E. E. Geralds at once was arraigned before Municipal Judge Simons, who continued his case until Nov. 13, despite a protest for immediate hearing. Geralds furnished a $5,000 bail bond.

Assistant Attorney General Janes and E. E. McDonald appeared for the state and George H. Spear of Grand Rapids for the defendant.

The charge of perjury against Ole Ferguson of Deer River, upon request of the state and unobjected to by Attorney A. A. Andrews for the defendant, was put over until the February term of court. The charge of misdemeanor against Dr. D. F. Dumas, growing out of the Puposky affair and on which the Cass Lake mayor is held in bonds of $1,000, also went over until February.

PLAN NEW RURAL HIGHWAYS.

Winona County Officials Preparing Now for Work Next Spring.

Winona.—The State Highway commission and county officials will make an effort to get in touch with prospective bidders for the construction of the three state rural highways to be constructed under the Elwell law in Winona county within the next few weeks, according to an announcement made by Deputy State Engineer O. B. Leland.

A. DELACEY WOOD IS DEAD.

Pioneer Editor of the Northwest Succumbs to Pneumonia.

Duluth.—A. Delacey Wood, founder of thirty-two newspapers and pioneer editor of the Northwest, died at St. Mary's hospital in this city. Weakened by age the veteran newspaper man was stricken with a severe attack of pneumonia several days ago and removed to the hospital where in spite of every effort he has been slowly sinking.

This man has had a more varied and picturesque career than falls to most editors. His life work has been mostly that of a newspaper trail blazer. He always was moving onward to new towns to found newspapers and many of the 32 publications that were started by Mr. Wood still are in existence.

Mr. Wood was born at Sauk Rapids, Minn. He organized the first editorial association in Minnesota and served several terms as its president.

His newspaper career started in 1870, since which time he has established newspapers at Prescott, Wis.; Kasson, Minn.; Bessemer, Mich.; Eyota, Minn.; Sauk Center, Minn.; Reedsburg, Wis.; Denton, Minn.; Breckenridge, Minn.; Grand Marais, Minn.; Wahpeton, N. D.; Hillsboro, N. D.; Caledonia, Minn.; Carlton, Minn.; Two Harbors, Minn.; Grand Marais, Mich.; Hermann, Minn., and nearly as many more cities and towns.

LOG RATE ARGUMENTS HEARD.

D. & N. M. Road Seeks to Boost Charges on Range to Care for Its Debts.

Duluth. — The state railway and warehouse commission heard arguments for and against the application of the Duluth and Northern Minnesota railroad to advance the rate on pine sawlogs and logs other than pine. President John Millen produced figures to show that the road, which is controlled by Alger Smith and company, earned but 31.1 per cent after 5 per cent had been paid on an indebtedness of $1,200,000.

The advance asked for a range from 45 to 55 cents to 95 cents and $1.05 per car, according to distance and the character of the logs.

Mr. Millen says the income should be from $9,000 to $11,000 more than was received in 1910 to create a sinking fund to care for the indebtedness. Logs are the principal item of freight.

The road runs north from Knife river on Lake Superior into Cook county, and Mr. Millen said yesterday it is the intention to build to the Canadian border.

RAILROAD DRAWBRIDGE BURNED.

Fire Destroys Northern Pacific's Grassy Point Structure.

Duluth.—Fire damaged the Grassy Point drawbridge of the Northern Pacific railroad to such an extent that it will have to be rebuilt. The origin of the blaze is unknown. Traffic will not be tied up, as the two daily passenger trains from Duluth to the Twin Cities via Superior, will cross the bay over the Rices Point bridge instead.

The draw, most of which is steel, was badly twisted by the heat. The flames originated in the engine house, which was in the center of the draw, and before water could be thrown on the blaze, the engine house and its contents had practically burned. The machinery dropped into the river.

The draw was closed during the fire and it will be necessary to have tugs reopen it before navigation can be carried on in the river above it.

INSANE; TRIES TO KILL FAMILY.

Virginia Man Locked Up After Assault on Wife and Children.

Duluth.—Mrs. Gus Rankola and her four small children were found by a deputy sheriff at Virginia in peril of being murdered by the husband and father who had suddenly become insane. Rankola had a large knife in his hands and was making desperate efforts to kill the members of his family when overpowered and taken to jail. He was violent after being locked up.

Minnesota Makes Less Beer.

St. Paul.—The United States Internal Revenue department figures show that a steady decrease in the quantity of beer manufactured in the state of Minnesota has caused an important falling off in the amount of internal revenue tax. During the last four months, July, August, September and October the collections of internal revenue in the state were $754,040.35 as compared with $1,001,713.25 collected during the same four months of 1910, a decrease of $247,672.90.

Winona's Sons Have Luncheon.

Twenty-five former residents of Winona, now engaged in busines in Minneapolis, met at luncheon to plan the organization of a Winona club. S. R. Van Sant was elected temporary chairman, E. W. Cameron, temporary secretary, said there were more than 150 Winonians now living in Minneapolis and that they represented most every business and profession. He said he had been assured by more than one hundred that they would join the club.

Exhibits Monster Potatoes.

Austin.—Last spring J. J. Furlong, the mayor of Concord and H. H. Dunn of Albert Lea, speakers of the house, were talking agriculture. Both were voicing their prowess as farmers when Speaker Dunn challenged Mr. Furlong to a potato contest. Mr. Dunn said he could raise a larger and better potato than Mr. Furlong could. The other day Mr. Furlong exhibited in this city, eight potatoes weighing four pounds apiece. The proud Mr. Furlong says it is now up to Mr. Dunn to "come across."

HANKOW BURNED

REPORTED THAT TWO-THIRDS OF AREA OF CHINESE CITY IS IN ASHES.

400,000 LEFT HOMELESS

Hundreds Said to Have Died in Flames —American Missions and Some Government Buildings Spared.

Hankow, China. — The city of Hankow has been destroyed by fire over two-thirds of its extent. The lowest estimate of the loss is $50,000,000. Four hundred thousand persons are destitute. Hundreds of half burned bodies lie among the ruins. Many of them are the bodies of women and children.

The customs house, the postoffice and the American missions have been spared. The city has been looted, the imperialists taking a hand in the pillage. Imperialist officers tried to check this work, and executed a number of soldiers.

Refugees were deprived of their loot on entering the British concession, cart loads of valuable furs, silks and jewelry being seized. It is suggested that the Red Cross receive the proceeds.

The consuls appealed to the imperialists to cease burning the town. A proclamation, which was issued immediately, declared that the rebels were responsible for the fires and ordered that these be checked. The following day, new fires started in various quarters.

The David Hill memorial school for the blind, connected with the Wesleyan mission, was looted, while, in contrast, all the mission property in Wu Chang, which is held by the revolutionaries, has been protected.

Reports of Brutality.

Foreigners who have not had an opportunity of witnessing the engagements, except at a distance, are hearing horrifying stories of brutality. The imperialists have hanged men, and, failing to strangle them, tortured them to death, prodded them with bayonets or crushed them to death with stones.

The outrages against women cannot be told. Red Cross bearers have been killed or wounded. Soldiers on both sides have slaughtered their wounded enemies.

Yuan Shi Kai is in this neighborhood, but he is keeping his presence hidden. It is suspected that he went aboard a British gunboat, and it rumored that he has been interviewing republican leaders secretly.

A thousand revolutionary soldiers from Hu-Nan reached Wu Chang. At I-Chang and other river ports the republicans are collecting the customs duties. Consular reports from I-Chang say refugees from Chung-King, in Sze Chuan province, are bound thither. Secret societies are gaining control in Sze Chuan. The mobs at Kiu-Kiang are violent.

Battle at Nanking.

Shanghai.—Latest advices received here say that the attempt of the insurgents to seize Nanking was only partly successful. They were repulsed at some points, but captured the armory forts behind the city. They lost more than 100 men killed. At the south gate 2,000 imperialists joined the revolutionaries on receipt of 300,000 taels ($200,000). The Manchu general, Chang Chun, is still holding out.

Foo Chow Captured.

Foo Chow.—Foo Chow has fallen into the hands of the rebels after a short resistance. The viceroy and Tartar general have escaped. The yamen has been burned, but all foreigners are safe and well protected.

No Loan For China.

Paris.—Representatives of the American, French and English bankers interested in the Chinese currency reform loan at a meeting here unanimously decided that the situation in China was critical and accordingly it was decided that no action be taken in furthering the loan at present. J. P. Morgan, Jr., attended the conference.

Who's Loony Now?

Pekin.—It is semi-officially stated that the regent, Prince Chung is incapable of connected thought and that the nobles are unable to agree upon a definite line of action.

McNamara Jurors Chosen.

Los Angeles, Calif. — Three sworn jurors and a talesman passed for cause is the showing in the McNamara murder trial at the end of five weeks of court. Another venireman has been accepted by the defense as to cause, and counsel begin to hope for a full jury box by Christmas to try James McNamara for the murder of J. Haggerty, a machinist killed in the Los Angeles Times explosion a year ago. Another venire of 40 men has been summoned, making 284 men thus far drawn for jury service.

DEMOCRATS WIN THREE GOVERNORS

KENTUCKY RETURNS TO THE JACKSONIAN FOLD WITH AN OVERWHELMING MAJORITY.

FOSS ELECTED IN MASS.

Democrats Carry Three Ohio Cities and Gain One Congressman—G. O. P. Recaptures New York Legislative Assembly.

New York.—Democratic governors in Massachusetts, Kentucky and Mississippi, a Republican governor in Rhode Island, a Republican assembly in New York, which will challenge the continuance of Governor Dix's policies; a New Jersey legislature with majorities probably not in accord with Governor Woodrow Wilson, with results of the state elections in Maryland and New Mexico in doubt. This in brief is the result of the election.

In Massachusetts, Governor Foss, Democrat, was elected by a reduced plurality of 7,734 over Louis Frothingham, Republican.

The Republican candidate for lieutenant governor was elected by 7,000 majority and other Republican state candidates were elected.

In Rhode Island Governor Pothier, Republican, is re-elected over Louis A. Waterman, Democrat, by a greatly increased plurality. The state senate is solidly and the assembly largely Republican.

New York state furnished one of the chief surprises of the election, reversing the present Democratic majority of 24 in the state assembly and electing a Republican majority of 50 or upward. The change removes the united support which both branches of the legislature heretofore had given Gov. Dix's policies. In New York city Tammany's control was shaken, but not overcome, Tammany candidates in Manhattan and the Bronx being elected, while those in Brooklyn and Queens county were defeated by fusion candidates.

New Jersey Furnishes Surprise.

New Jersey similarly furnished a surprise by the probable reversal of control of the legislature, the returns giving Republican majorities in the senate and assembly.

In Kentucky, James B. McCreary, Democrat, was elected governor by a majority estimated at 20,000 to 40,000. A Democratic legislature also was elected, which insures the choice of Congressman Ollie James as United States senator from Kentucky.

Returns from Maryland were inconclusive. Claims were made of the election of Philip Lee Goldsborough, Republican candidate for governor, by 5,000 majority over Arthur P. Gorman, Democrat, while counter claims of Democratic success were made. The constitutional amendment designed to disfranchise negro voters probably was defeated.

Ohio Cities Democratic.

The Ohio municipal elections resulted in the election of Democratic mayors in Cincinnati, Cleveland and Columbus. President Taft cast his vote in Cincinnati.

In New Mexico the Democratic state committee claims the election of MacDonald as governor by 4,500 in the first election which the new state has held. The election of a Republican legislature is indicated, which will mean the election of two Republican United States senators.

Marked Socialist strength has developed at various points, notably in several of the municipal contests of Ohio, where 10 cities elected Socialist mayors; also in Schenectady, N. Y., where a Socialist mayor and a Socialist member of the state assembly were elected, and in Mississippi, where the Socialist candidate for lieutenant governor polled a considerable vote.

Four congressmen were elected to fill vacancies, Joseph A. Taggart, Democrat, in the Second Kansas district; W. D. B. Ainy, Republican, in the Fourteenth district; William J. Browning, Republican, in the First New Jersey district, and Daniel V. Stephens, Democrat, of the Third Nebraska district.

Tammany's Hold Is Shaken.

New York.—Tammany Hall's hold on New York city was shaken yesterday in a battle of the ballots, in which local offices were mainly at stake. The Democrats successfully defended their ancient strongholds of Manhattan and the Bronx, but by greatly reduced pluralities. Queens county also stood by the Democrats, but the Republican fusion candidates made nearly a clean sweep of Brooklyn, and probably divided honors in the little borough of Richmond.

A year ago Manhattan and the Bronx boroughs gave Governor Dix a plurality of 68,389 and elected a Democratic supreme court justice by about 22,000. Now Robert L. Fowler, the Democratic candidate for surrogate, carried New York county with a maximum plurality of about 17,000.

The Democrats elected their candidates for sheriff by about 8,000 and the three Democratic candidates for supreme court justice in the First judicial district pulled through by a bare 5,000. Francis M. Scott, the fourth justice elected, was indorsed by both parties.

The Republicans gained eight assemblymen in New York county and will send fifteen members of that body out of the total delegation of thirty-five.

The Republicans elected a sheriff in Kings county by about 1,400. In 19 out of 23 districts in Brooklyn, the fusionists gained six assemblymen.

From a Democratic majority of 24, the New York state assembly turned overwhelmingly Republican. The Republicans in the lower chamber have a majority of 50. The present senate holds over.

In the unexpected landslide the Democrats were able to capture only three seats held by the Republicans, whereas all over the commonwealth Democratic assemblymen fell by the wayside.

In Schenectady, Herbert M. Merrill, a Socialist, won out where a Democrat had held the seat.

Kentucky Republicans Lose.

Louisville.—Kentucky, for years landslide victory.

James B. McCreary, Democratic candidate for governor, has been elected by from 20,000 to 40,000 majority. His opponent was Judge Edward C. O'Rear.

Crookston Socialists Win.

Crookston.—By a majority of 91 votes, H. L. Larson, Socialist, was elected mayor of Crookston over Mayor Allen McKinnon, candidate on the Citizens' ticket, and W. R. Low, Republican candidate, backed by the Young Men's Progressive club. George Christianson, also a Socialist, was elected alderman of the Sixth ward, and John Kolbe, Socialist, is running neck and neck with Walter Stone for alderman at large. Armory bonds lost.

Chicago Judges Picked.

Chicago.—Six Republicans and four Democrats were elected to the superior court of Cook county. John P. McGoorty, Democrat, was elected to fill the one circuit court vacancy. A "higher pay for judges" proposition was defeated. Chief Justice William H. McSurely and Judge Marcus A. Kavanaugh, Republicans, were re-elected to the superior bench, as was Judge Joseph H. Fitch, Democrat. The new Judges are Chas. M. Foell, Hugo Pam, Albert C. Barnes and Henry V. Freeman, Republicans, and M. L. McKinley, Dennis E. Sullivan and Clarence N. Goodwin, Democrats.

Kansas Elects Democrat.

Kansas City.—Joseph A. Taggart, a Democrat, was elected to congress from the Second Kansas district by a majority estimated at 1,200 votes over his Republican opponent, Ulysses S. Guyer. Mr. Taggart will fill the unexpired term of the late Republican congressman, A. C. Mitchell. Mitchell carried the district in 1910 by 3,430 votes over John Caldwell, Democrat.

Philadelphia Republicans Win.

Philadelphia.—In one of the closest political contests in the history of Philadelphia, the Republicans succeeded in electing George H. Earle, Jr., mayor over Rudolph Blankenburg, "the war horse of reform," by the meagre majority of 5,000.

Ohio Cities Go Democratic.

Columbus.—The Democrats were swept into power in the three largest cities of Ohio, Columbus, Cincinnati and Cleveland returning decisive Democratic pluralities.

A feature of the elections throughout the state was the large Socialist vote. In Columbus, Eby, the Socialist candidate for mayor, according to early returns, was running a close race with Mayor Marshall, the Republican nominee, for second place while George J. Karb, Democrat, had been elected by from 400 to 600 plurality.

In Cincinnati, Mayor Louis Schwab, running for re-election, with the Republican indorsement, was defeated by Henry T. Hunt, Democrat, by probably 6,000.

In Cleveland, Newton D. Baker, Democrat and political heir to the late Tom L. Johnson, was elected mayor by probably 20,000, while practically the entire Democratic ticket was elected with him.

In Toledo, Brand Whitlock, independent, has been elected for a fourth term by a plurality in the neighborhood of 2,000.

LIVES WITH HIS SKULL CRACKED

Sheboygan, Wisconsin.—His skull cracked from the nose to the base of the brain and from each to ear and still living, is the experience of Arthur Jahn, aged 18, son of a prominent contractor. Young Jahn's injuries resulted from being struck on the head by an iron pulley when a chain broke. At the hospital, physicians say the boy probably will recover.

CUT IN LIVING COST IS SOUGHT.

Co-operative Plan Is Discussed in Wisconsin.

Madison, Wisconsin. — A committee of the state board of public affairs met to take up the matter of co-operative marketing as an aid in solving the problem of the high cost of living. Those present included Governor McGovern and a number of Wisconsin university professors. The committee considered the selection of an expert to assist.

REV. MR. LAMBERT QUITS PULPIT

Pastor Who Officiated at Astor Wedding Resigns.

Providence, Rhode Island.—Because of the criticism arising from his marrying Col. John Jacob Astor and Miss Madeline T. Force at Newport, Sept. 9, Rev. Joseph Lambert has resigned as pastor of the Elmwood Temple (Congregational) church of this city and will leave the ministry to go into business.

His retirement will be considered by the church at a meeting Nov. 16.

EPITOME OF EVENTS

PARAGRAPHS THAT PERTAIN TO MANY SUBJECTS.

ARE SHORT BUT INTERESTING

Brief Mention of What Is Transpiring in Various Sections of Our Own and Foreign Countries.

Washington.

A timely report on education in China has been made to the bureau of education by Harry Edwin King, vice president of the Peking university. It reviews exhaustively the modern movement for western methods in educational matters which owes its existence largely to the awakening of the dowager empress after the boxer rebellion.

The legal host gathered in Washington to fight before the supreme court of the United States for the constitutionality of the initiative and referendum methods of legislaion in this country was augmented by counsel representing the state of Washington. They sent a brief to the court, but they are not expected to participate in the oral argument of the point which arises in a case from Oregon.

The state of Missouri took its place among a long list of other states protesting to the supreme court of the United States against the initiative and referendum method of legislation the board declared unconstitutional. The constitutional problem will come up in an Oregon case before the court this week. The Great Awakening of China

By Gen. A. W. Greely

EVEN the most casual observer of current affairs must have been impressed by the steadily increasing volume of matter that is appearing in periodical literature relative to China and to its evolutionary progress toward its proper and destined position as one of the great civilized nations of the earth.

In the last decade affairs oriental have been a series of surprises to the world, and in this respect the transformation of China has not been the least wonderful. In late years the Chinese government has astonished the Christian peoples of the Occident by its political audacity and persistent activity in suppressing not only foreign trade in opium but also in abolishing throughout its vast provinces the prevalent growth of the poppy plant. Today it confounds the predictions of foreign politicians by hastening, instead of delaying, the formation of a central constitutional government with a responsible cabinet. Again it has instituted a system of secondary education along modern scientific lines, and has transformed its antiquated literary examinations into more suitable tests of official fitness.

At home it is redeeming its treaty obligations to mint a standard and national coinage. It has formed its first budget, has initiated a system of imperial taxation, reorganized its postal and telegraph services, and nationalized its railways.

Abroad its statesmen have brought to a head the Mongolian question, maintained the status quo in Manchuria, and opened relations with Siam.

Through its strength, its conscriptive methods, and its training the new army promises to be soon such a military force as will command the respect of foreign nations. Its insignificant navy is to be largely increased, and has already given signs of efficient activity by its participation in diplomatic missions and in international reviews.

The foreign policy of China promises to be insistent, and perhaps aggressive, where the interests of its subjects are concerned. Especially significant is its late reported demand on Mexico for an adequate indemnity, amounting to tens of millions of dollars, for the massacre and destruction of the persons and property of Chinese by the Mexican revolutionists.

Perhaps the most impressive action of all is the regard for aliens within its own borders shown in recent days by the Chinese government. Confronted by a most serious (in appearance, at least— revolution in its greatest province (Sze-Chuan, with its 80,000,000 of people), the government on its own motion takes early and efficient measures ot preserve the lives of foreign missionaries and alien traders operating within the disturbed and dangerous areas.

In a period of such transitions it is well worth the while for Occidental nations to keep well informed as to the progress of affairs in China. Few people are aware as to either the extent or as to the methods by which such marvelous changes have been wrought in the governmental conditions of the Celestial Empire during the first decade of the twentieth century.

It has been universally recognized that from the conjoined standpoints of area, population and productivity China stands unequaled among the nations of the earth.

It may be noted that the population of China has been for centuries a problem of the greatest interest, which successfully defied solution.

La Revue Jaune, the new Chinese?Belgian review, for May 15 publishes the data as far as compiled, the whole empire numbering 439,214,000 souls. They are distributed as follows, by provinces:

An-Houe	30,000,000
Canton	32,000,000
Fo-Kien	30,000,000
Honan	*26,000,000
Hunan	22,000,000
Hupeh	34,000,000
Kiang-Si	24,500,000
Kiang-Su (Shandhai)	23,900,000
Kan-Su	*3,000,006
Kwang-Si	8,000,000
Kweichau	6,000,000
Sechouan	79,500,000
Shang-Si	*9,000,000
Shantung	53,000,000
Shensi	*6,000,000
Tche-Kiang	11,800,000
Tchili (Peking)	29,400,000
Yunnan	8,000,000
Manchuria	17,000,000

The approximate population of the dependencies, from other sources, is as follows: Mongolia, 2,600,000; Tibet, 6,300,000; Chinese Turkestan, etc., 1,200,000.

Enormous as is the population of the empire, there are but few very great cities, as would be expected with the limited transportation for their maintenance. Possibly Canton, Peking, and Singan have each a million of inhabitants, while Tientsin, Hankau, Shanghai, Chungking, Fuchau and Suchau probably range in population between half and three-fourths of a million.

In view of these data the belief vanishes that China is the most densely populated portion of the world. The population of Europe is 430,000,000, in an area of 10,000,000 square kilometers, while China has practically the same number over an area of 11,000,000 square kilometers.

Influenced by the spirit of the century, China is gradually changing its form of government to that of a constitutional monarchy. The burning question before the Advisory Parliament, which nearly caused its disruption, was the restriction of imperial powers. Parliament strenuously urged the establishment of a responsible government along English lines. As a compromise the Prince Regent yielded to the extent of adopting a system analogous to that of Germany, and imperial edicts instituted, in lieu of the old organization, as officials of the emperor, Suen-Tong, a prive council, a general staff and a responsible cabinet.

The privy council consists of forty-four, of whom ten are non-voting councilors, "especially well-informed men, who have received a modern education." The general staff (two princes), reports direct to the emperor. The responsible cabinet is formed by a premier, with two princely assistants, and ten portfolio ministers, as follows: Foreign affairs, interior, finance, public instruction, war, navy, justice, agriculture, public works and commerce, communications, dependencies and colonies. The premier, Prince Ching, is a wily, typical politician of the old school, to whom reforms are unacceptable save as temporary makeshifts.

The cabinet, appointed and dismissed at the pleasure of the emperor, is responsible to him and to public opinion only. Criticised by some as a system controlled too largely by princes and nobles, it is viewed by others as an important advance towards the constitutional methods of the Occident.

Viceroys, appointed and removable by the emperor, govern the provinces with practically unlimited power, which in the past has often resulted in unbridled corruption and tyrannical oppression. Under the edict of Nov. 6, 1906, for the reformation of local governments, provincial assemblies were established. Their functions were advisory, and the administrative powers remained entirely in the hands of the vice-regal officials.

It might appear that public opinion would be ineffective under such conditions, but the contrary result is usual. In an exceptional case the provincial assembly of Kuang-Si passed a resolution which the governor vetoed. When next convoked the assembly refused to sit, and its appeal to the advisory parliament at Peking was sustained.

The assemblies have taken concerted action to extent their influence in imperial affairs, and have occasionally attempted to coerce the imperial government—usually with indifferent results. Twice the assemblies have held congresses in Peking, and lately the congress urged on the government the organization of civil guards in the provinces, opposed the nationalization of railways, and asked a change of the law that the premier must be either a prince or noble. Finally, the members, in the way of compromise, agreed to favor an increase of taxes provided that their wishes were granted as to civil guards and the premier.

The first really national and representative body that ever met in China under authority of an imperial edict convened on Oct. 5, 1910. It has been variously called a senate, an advisory assembly and a provisional parliament; the last appellation seems most appropriate, as the body had no legislative powers, its functions being confined to petitions and reports to the throne on matters pertaining to the formation of institutions and enactment of laws in accord with the age.

The parliament proved to be an able, independent body, equal to the situation, broad-minded in its views, and realizing its responsibilities.

Rarely does a single act mark the upward turn of a decadent nation, but in China it was the signing by the emperor, Kouang-Su, July 26, 1898, of the edict on the liberty of the press, drawn up by the ardent reformer Yang-You-Wei.

Reciting the various needs of railways, the imperial edict of May 9, 1911, points out that for years the emperor has fostered local railway projects, but that hitherto the Chinese companies "have so maladministered affairs that they are in inextricable confusion; they have built neither main lines nor branches. In the Province of Kuantong they have issued bonds covering half the work, while the railroad has hardly been commenced. In Sze-Chuan an enormous sum, intrusted as bonds to a bank, has been lost by failure of the bank. In Hupeh and in Hounan largo sums have been spent uselessly in past years."

It should be said that Canton, which had made the greatest progress from local resources, accepted the nationalization. The importance and gravity of the action of assemblies and local organizations in Sze-Chuan and Hounan may be estimated from the fact that their combined population quite considerably exceeds that of the United States, and is about one-fourth of that of China.

The action of the imperial government has been described by a Chinese writer as "a truly unexpected and unfavorable blow to provincial autonomy." An early successful issue in Sze-Chuan will be a welcome evidence of that central, coordinated power which is vitally essential to the future utility of the Chinese Empire.

WEARING OF SILK STOCKINGS

First Pair Is Said to Have Been Worn by Henry II. of France in the Year of 1559.

It has been asserted that silk stockings were first worn by Henry II. of France on the occasion of the marriage of his sister in 1559. But before that period, Edward VI. of England had received a pair from the "merchant prince" of the time, Sir Thomas Gresham, who imported them from Spain, the country, it is thought, wherein they were first manufactured.

There is a tradition that a grandee, the happy possessor of the first pair of silk stockings made in Spain, thought he could make no more appropriate disposition of the novel utilities than to present them to his queen, and to that end he placed them in the hands of the minister of state. Greatly to the consternation of the well-meaning grandee, the minister returned him the stockings, intimating that he would do well to bear in mind that "the queen of Spain has no legs."

Elizabeth of England, however, not ashamed to own that she had legs, received a similar gift in a very different manner. Soon after her accession her majesty's woman, Mistress Montague, tendered as her New Year's gift a pair of knitted black silk stockings, the first of the kind made in England. Elizabeth was so pleased with the stockings, which she declared were "pleasant, fine and delicate," that she determined thenceforth to wear no more cloth stockings. She kept her royal word and no doubt would have laughed at the economy of the Margrave John of Custrin, who, seeing one of his councilors wearing silk stockings on a week day, said to him, "Barthold, I, too, have silk stockings, but I wear them only on Sundays and holidays."—Harper's Weekly.

INDUSTRY AND MECHANICS

INVENTS A FOLDING ANCHOR

Arms of Implement Close Up Along Shaft When Not in Use—Handy in Small Motor Boats.

A Wisconsin man, who probably had the painful experience some other people have had with large anchors in small motor boats, has designed a folding anchor. The arms of this implement are pivoted at the bottom of the shank, which is hollow, and are operated by a rod that runs up inside the shank. When the anchor is not in use the arms can be folded up along the shank and the whole take up very little space, besides having the points out of the way, where no one is in danger of running against them. When the anchor is to be lowered the arms are pushed open and locked in that position so firmly that the apparatus is just as strong as if made in one piece. An anchor of this kind can be laid along the bottom of the boat or stowed away under a seat and no body will know it is aboard until it is needed.

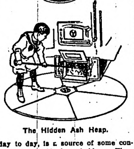
ASH HEAP UNDER THE FLOOR

Revolving System of Boxes Arranged in Front of Heater to Receive Debris—Emptied Any Time.

The modern cellar is as orderly an apartment as any of the other rooms of the house, but at the present time the unsightly ash heap has not been entirely disposed of. The day is not yet here when the coal bin and the ash pile are entirely eliminated, and the latter, growing constantly from day to day, is a source of some concern to the tidy householder. Then again the transferral of the ashes from under the heater must be looked after constantly and is a task which many a man performs only with the assistance of considerable profanity.



The Hidden Ash Heap.

The matter has been solved by burying the ashes as they fall from the heater. A revolving system of ash-boxes fits in a well in front of the heater and when the heater is raked the debris therefrom is drawn directly into one of these buried receptacles. These may be emptied at one's own convenience.

GOOD MATERIAL FOR FLOOR

French Inventor Has Devised Combination of Concrete and Carborundum for Severe Use.

There has always been difficulty in finding a material for flooring which will successfully withstand the grinding action of a constant procession of persons over it, as at the entrances of large railroad stations, but a French inventor has devised a combination of concrete and carborundum which has been experimented with in Paris, and the results have been found to be superior to anything else which has been devised for the purpose. A flight of steps built of this combination showed no perceptible wear after they had been used by an estimated army of 14,000,000 persons who passed over it. This is a very severe test, for in going up and down public stairways persons follow the shortest line, so that the great majority of those using it follow the same path, the wear and tear is very great in proscribed area.

Invents Metal Shingle.

A man in South Carolina has patented a shingle made of metal, which resembles the wooden ones in size and shape. But the metal shingles interlock by means of a series of ribs and channels. They are more durable than the old kind, and, being absolutely fireproof, are especially adapted for use on garages and similar buildings, where the fire risk is great. It is claimed that, when once properly installed, they will last as long as the walls of any structure.

MAKING FLOORS OF SAWDUST

Artificial Floorings Are Manufactured Extensively in Germany—Resemble Mosaic Pavements.

Artificial floorings, made of sawdust and other ingredients, are manufactured extensively in Germany. It is understood now that certain firms are to introduce a similar process in this country.

The flooring composition consists of a solution of magnesium chloride to which pulverized magnesia is added and which of itself forms a white, absolutely solid, artificial stone. If to this cement sawdust be added in considerable proportions the combination, when it becomes hard, possesses many of the qualities of both wood and stone.

Some of these floorings are mixed on the spot and laid soft on the space to be covered, while others are molded into plates and delivered ready made. According to consular and trade reports, one Hamburg firm impregnates the wood meal with oil before mixing it with the magnesia paste and thereby renders it nonabsorbent.

In Germany the cheaper grades of flooring are colored to resemble linoleum or mosaic pavements, and in many instances have given entire satisfaction during a considerable term of years. The emigrant halls of the Hamburg-American line in Hamburg are paved almost entirely with this composition. Floors thus made are more elastic than cement floors, are much warmer, and preserve a smoother surface. Under the fire test this flooring chars, but does not burn, and is a poor conductor of heat.

HEAT LOSS THROUGH GLASS

Condition of Snow on Greenhouse Roof Shows Relative Transmission —Wood Is Best.

The relative transmission of heat through glass and through wood is well illustrated in this drawing of the condition of snow on the top of a greenhouse roof some twelve hours after the snow began to fall.

The total snowfall is shown by the dotted line across the top. After the 12-hour fall the snow above the two-inch thick wooden ribs of the roof was six inches deep, and only about one inch deep over the greater part of the glass surface, says the Popular Mechanics. The loss of heat through the glass was five times as great as the loss of heat through the two-inch wooden ribs.

Novel Vacuum Cleaner.

A great variety of vacuum cleaners have appeared on the market and many of them vary from others only in the most minute details, but one which is on entirely novel lines has been recently brought out and will fill a special place and may in the course of time be perfected so as to be applicable to all domestic establishments where a stream of water is available. It consists of two suction pumps, operated by a direct connected water wheel and a chamber in which the dust and dirt mix with the water discharged from the wheel. The machine, which weighs a little less than twenty-five pounds, is intended to sit over a sink or bathtub and the dirt and water pass out through the waste pipe.

CANADA'S CENSUS

A THIRTY-TWO PER CENT. INCREASE IN THE PAST TEN YEARS.

That Canada has come rapidly to the front in the past ten years is amply shown in the results of the census recently made public. The population of the Dominion is now placed at 7,081,869, which with outlying points to be heard from, may bring it up to 7¼ millions as compared with 5,371,315 in 1901. Though these figures are large, they do not present a total as large as was expected but they do show a greater increase of percentage in population for the decade than any similar increase in the United States. The highest percentage ever reached by the Republic was 24%; the percentage of increase in Canada for the decade is 32%. Thus it will be seen that the provinces west of the lakes, with the great broad fertile, acres ready for the sowing and immediate reaping of grain and the Valleys of British Columbia capable of producing fruit with which to supply its neighboring provinces east of the mountains, have attracted numbers, which has exceeded the most optimistic of the expectations of ten years ago.

Upon the prairies of the ten years ago there was but a spare scattering of people; but today, no matter in which way you go, take any direction, and you find homes and farms and good ones too, occupied by the very best class of people in good sized settlements with plenty of room for five or six times as many more. The population of Alberta is set down at 372,919, as compared with 73,022 in 1901; Saskatchewan 453,508 as compared with 91,270 in 1901; Manitoba's 454,691 compares well with its 255,211 in 1901; and so does that of British Columbia—362,768 as against 178,657 in 1901; but in a territory as large as this a population of 1,643,000 is little more than discernible in point of numbers. The work through it has been great. Look at the towns that have been built up; its cities, Winnipeg with 135,000; Vancouver with upwards of 100,000; Calgary with 43,000; Edmonton, Regina, Saskatoon; Lethbridge; Medicine Hat, Moosejaw, splendid cities—none better anywhere; well maintained and equipped. These have come with existence and been built as they have been built by reason of the splendid agricultural country by which they are surrounded. The population is scarcely discernible. A population ten or twelve times that shown by the recent census could be easily maintained in even greater wealth than that which maintains the present numbers. There is certainly a wonderful future for Western Canada and that which goes to the development of the west will enrich the last. This is the growing time in Canada and what has been done in the past ten years is but a beginning. The next decade will show a far greater advancement. In the meantime Canada is bidding welcome the progressive and industrious citizen. The invitation is a standing one. At the forthcoming land exposition in Chicago, Canada will have one of the best exhibits of farm products that has ever been made and it will be well worth while inspecting it and getting information from those who may be in charge.

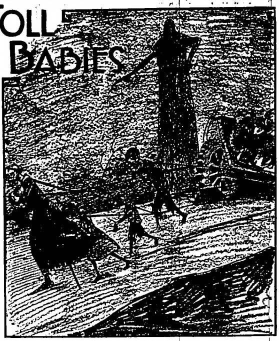
TAKING TOLL of the BABIES



YES, why? Today it is one of he crying evils of the United States. Recently the National Child Labor committee has been holding a comprehensive exhibit in New York City of the horrors and evils that follow the slavery of little children in our mills and mines. The evidence of the camera, the bald facts of statistics and government reports have told the story only too truly. Few today realize that such things can be.

Hundred of thousands of children have grown old before their time; hundreds of thousands more have been crippled for life at an age when they ought to be running in the woods and fields. Thousands have died before they had even begun to live. And of all the misery and injury and vice and disease and death—it is too shocking to be more than hinted at!

The exhibit which the public saw in the rooms at Fourth avenue and Twentieth street has been doing its good work all over the country since last autumn—in fact, it has been a traveling exhibit. Miss Elizabeth McM. Dinwiddie, who is in charge of it, has been from one end of the country to the other, showing it where it could do the most good at the psychological moment. It had been intended to show it in New York first, but urgent reasons called it to other places first.

It was taken to North Carolina, where the inadequate law against child labor is more honored in the breach than in the observance, just at the time that a child labor law was pending in the state legislature. It went to Providence, R. I., in order to meet a federation of women's welfare clubs convened there. It went to the state capitals of Alabama, Tennessee and Wisconsin in the hope of influencing the legislators when influence was badly needed to protect the American child life against the rapacity of money-mad employers.

Better than words do the pictures and posters tell their story of the twentieth century crime against child life. The boys in the coal breakers, the girls in the cotton mills, the kiddies in the night shift at the glass works who ought to have been in bed dreaming of baseball and trout brooks, the anaemic, undersized, over-worried, sickly boys and girls who should have been at school instead of at the machines—they all told their own stories by their faces alone.

Go to the glass work, the mines, the cotton mills, the canneries, the tenements—there you shall see them! In some cases the rapacity of the employers is to blame; in others it is the greed of the parents. In some cases it is both.

"She just happened in," said the burly overseer in a South Carolina cotton mill when an investigator ran across a baby girl of eight tending her "sides" like a veteran. He was lying. The child was just as handy and useful as a grown-up and cost only half as much for her labor.

In a Pennsylvania coal-breaker they photographed nine-year-old Leo. He was toiling nine hours a day in grime and dirt for a pitiful wage. And there was found on a musty, dusty school file the sworn affidavit of his parents that he was too sickly to stay in school!

"Four years," answered a good-looking twelve-year-old boy in a South Carolina cotton mill, when asked how long he had been there. He couldn't tell the letter "A" from the letter "B," and didn't know how to spell his own name!

Bob, a boy who worked in the same mill, owned up to fifteen years, and said he had been working there for eight years. He showed it, too, in his overgrown, thin, anaemic frame, and looked fertile ground for the seeds of tuberculosis. His intelligence had stood stationary with the flight of years, and so he was still doing the same thing he had started on—taking off the empty spools from the spindles. Anything more complex was too much for his stunted intelligence.

In the coal mines of Pennsylvania and West Virginia they found boys of twelve masquerading as sixteen. They worked in the damp and darkness alongside of mules and took their lives in their hands every time they went down into the shafts to their daily toil, hundreds of feet down in the bowels of the earth.

"I haven't grown any in five years," said Charlie, a thin, hollow-chested, anaemic lad of fourteen, with a dull, stupid face. He has been on the night shift for seven years and makes his 60 cents a night.

At Fairmont, W. Va., at work in the "glory hole" of the glass works, where the temperature ranged as high as the human system can stand, there were more boys than men at work.

"The works is cluttered with kids," remarked a native.

One of the saddest cases was that of little Savannah, a frail eleven-year-old.

"The boss says she's a cracker-jack at spinning'," declared her gaunt father proudly. "She ain't satisfied unless she's in the mill."

Poor little Savanah owned up that she had never had a doll and never played on Sundays because she was too tired. Her tense, drawn face was that of an old woman.

The gruelling labor of the mould boys in the glass works was really awful. Here were tender youngsters down in cellars guiltless of sunlight, sitting in cramped positions and tending moulds all day long and all night. Other boys worked the molten glass at the furnace maws in heat unbearable by those unaccustomed to it. One baby boy of five was found earning his few pennies a day in the mill where his mother worked. He was too young to go to school! And he was such a golden-haired, blue-eyed, rosy-cheeked boy that it seemed a shame he was doomed there so soon in life!

Of course, fatalities among child toilers are far more numerous than among adults. Obviously youth is less cautious than experience. Not a day passes that death does not take its toll of the child workers and passes along many more to the ranks of the crippled and helpless.

In Pennsylvania the fatalities and accidents to the boys in breakers picking slate out of the coal with their little fingers is 300 per cent. higher than among adults and minors over sixteen. In Indiana the physical risk to children in factories under sixteen is 250 per cent. greater than among adults. In Michigan it is 450 per cent. against the child.

Children who go to school under the most objectionable conditions are confined 1,000 hours annually. In Massachusetts the factory child is confined 3,120 hours a year, and in New York where the eight-hour day prevails, he is still subjected to 2,496 hours of confinement.

All states with important canning industries employ children without restriction. They can do the work just as well as adults and for far less pay. In the chief cities, where clothing, artificial flowers and other articles are made in the tenements, there are no laws to protect little children. Three and four-year-old fingers find plenty to do for a few pennies a day more to the family fund.

This tenement-house work, done to save rent, carfares and to impress the children, has other dangers besides those of the child. The consumer is just as likely to become the victim. Physicians who will agree to conceal the contagion from the health authorities are the most popular with the tenement-house workers. Agents found women and children working on garments while children were in the same room suffering with contagious diseases.

In some of these city tenements where the child is put to work as soon as it can use its hands and before it goes to school—nearly always by compulsion from the authorities—two children die for every one in localities where the child is not put to work before its time!

In Defense of Beef Tea

Science After Despising Broths for Long Time Finds Out Why They Are Good.

From time immemorial beef tea, or a broth made in a similar manner from mutton or chicken, has been a feature of the sickroom, the pride of the housekeeper nurse, a source of comfort to the invalid, the invariable staple of the menu permitted by the physician.

When it was indisputably proved that the home-made broth was in no sense a food, humanity refused credence and invalids went ahead with their consumption of millions of gallons, persisting in the exhibition of sure signs of convalescence and demanding with insistence further supplies of the fragrant potion.

Dr. Thomas Darlington, in a recent issue of the New York Medical Journal, shows at last the reason of this unshakable faith. Broth is one of the few genuine stimulants in the armamentarium now that alcohol is known to be a narcotic. The experiments of Pawlow on dogs demonstrate that the savory liquid is powerfully stimulant to the gastric secretion and other digestive fluids, with the result that real food, given with or after the broth, is speedily and gratefully assimilated.

Milk, which disagrees with so many people, will cause no distress if administered after a cup of hot broth. The mere flavor of meat is thus shown to be necessary and valuable to digestion. What caused disgust among the troops in the Spanish war was that the preserved meat, while retaining all of its nutritive principles, had lost its aromatic constituents, gone to make the despised extract for the preparation of broths.

The physician may henceforth advise beef tea and meat broths generally with a clear conscience and scientific satisfaction; they have triumphed over their enemies and detractors and will resume their honored station upon the invalid's tray as unapproachable adjuvants to digestion and assimilation, adding one more example to the list of remedies founded in crass empiricism, but finding at last a true scientific basis for their raison d'etre.

Tickets Not Transferable.

The Brighton Railway company, which has just passed its seventieth anniversary, was, although not the first company to run an excursion train, the first one to run a regular service of such trains at low fares. Half a crown was the fare for a day trip to Brighton and back in the early '70s, but after a time the company found that it was losing money by the return halves being openly sold. Rather than stop the cheap trains, however, it prosecuted the touts who crowded Brighton station and importuned persons to sell or buy return halves. It was successful and settled the important question from the railway point of view that a ticket expresses a personal contract and is therefore not transferable.—London Chronicle.

A Good Risk.

"Why did you trust this struggling young man for all these goods?" demanded the senior partner.

"I thought his prospects looked pretty fair," replied the junior partner. "He's struggling to marry an heiress, with very good prospects of success."

Man Stole Love Letters

Then the Girl Had Him Arrested for Burglary—And Trouble Grows.

Charged with taking love letters from the apartment of Miss Adelaide Lander, the orchestra leader in the St. George apartments, Archibald N. Campbell was held in $1,000 bail by Magistrate Butts in Yorkville court.

Miss Lander was not in court; Campbell stood silent throughout the proceedings; Detective Taczkowski, who had the two dozen letters, kept them and their contents carefully concealed; and the only touch of color in the brief hearing was that furnished by the bright red hair of Mrs. Lottie Guyer, the janitress, whose promptitude in calling the police led to Campbell's arrest.

"They were very good friends," Mrs. Guyer told the court.

"Did the defendant live there?" asked the magistrate.

"I don't know," the witness said. "He came there often for a long time."

Magistrate Butts glanced at Campbell, who had given his address as the St. George apartment house. Campbell is a tall, slender man of thirty. He held his soft gray hat with its rim just touching his cheek and gazed earnestly at the judge; but he said nothing.—New York Evening Mail.

How Cholera is Cured

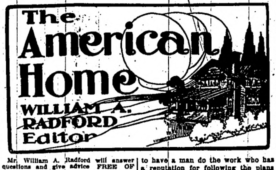
The success of the sea water treatment for infants suffering from summer cholera is indisputable. In the Quinton Polyclinic in Poland street there is an incessant waiting line of babies.

When one has become accustomed to the sight of the emaciated babies with old, gray faces, pale cheeks and big lustreless eyes, there is much to interest. In the quiet room at the back sits the doctor entering case after case in the big folios as anxious mothers bring in the children. With written directions they pass from here to the room upstairs where the cylinders of sea water hang around the room, and the nurse goes about the circle of infants, connecting each with a cylinder by means of a tube and hypodermic syringe.

The puncture is made in the back, and almost instantly a great blister rises. It is the sight of this fantastic swelling which makes the mothers at the first treatment hysterical and in some cases faint, and so one sees the stronger minded fathers there awkwardly undressing the little ones, tying up the strings after the injection, and saving their wives the nervous strain. The saving of infant life by this new treatment during the hot weather is undoubted.—European Letter to the New York Sun.

The American Home

WILLIAM A. RADFORD Editor



Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

In the winter months, when the ground is covered with snow and the fire burns in the stove, is the season when the family dreams of the new house. Nor is there any more laudable ambition than to own a home. The curse of modern life is the necessity that compels millions to live in rented apartments or houses. And every normal man who pays rent hopes some time to own a home of his own. His children, he feels, have a right to live under a roof of their own, and it is his ambition to give them what is their right.

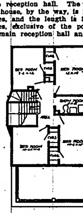
Once these was a man who decided to build himself a home. This man had a few notions about what he wanted in his house when it was finished, he also knew how much he wanted to expend in the construction of it. He had gone into all the details and had figured out all about the interior trim and the kind of glass he wanted in the house. Every detail he had figured out and he had made up his mind about everything before he consulted his architect.

Then in the natural order of events he went to see his architect and laid before him his ideas. Everything was clear and the architect proceeded to draw up his plans after the directions given. Then the next step was the asking of bids from contractors. There were six bids, and all were within a hundred dollars of one another. The architect felt sure that the figures were right in each case and advised his client to make his selection. But the client came to the conclusion that the work could be done for less money and he asked for bids from other contractors. The results was the offer of one, an unknown contractor, to do the work for a ridiculously low figure. The client wanted the contract let to this man, but the architect, who had experience, advised him to give the work to one of the first bidders because they were men who had reputations for good work. The client was insistent and the job was let to the man of his choice. The house was built, but what a difference from what had been planned. Inferior and cheap grades of materials were used in every possible form and in every item of the construction. There was careless work everywhere, and things were changed in the details to such an extent that when the house was finished it was not satisfactory from any point of view. It was then that the owner woke up to the fact that he had made a mistake. All too late he realized the fact that he had sacrificed the quality and appearance of his home to save a few dollars. The unknown contractor had built the house at the price he had agreed on, but the house was far from being the one the owner had expected.

Now, the experience of this man is typical of that of all home builders who try to get their work done by unknown contractors or at figures too low. A few hundred dollars may be saved at the time, but in the end it is an extremely expensive undertaking. The way to go about building a house is to enter upon the enterprise just as you would in buying a suit of clothes. If you go to a good tailor of reputation you are sure to get a good suit. If you go to a Cheap John place you will get a suit that will not please you.

In building a home the acme of desire is a house that will come within the reasonable limits of what has been planned and the only plan to follow is [illegible] to have a man do the work who has a reputation for following the plans of the architect and using honest materials. The house here shown is of the colonial type so popular the country over just now. It is the style of house that is peculiarly American, and which answers the requirements of modern life.

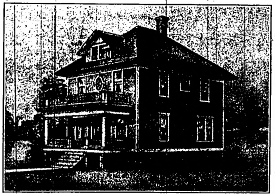
There is a wide porch surmounted by a rail, that makes the roof available for use on summer nights. Entrance to the house is had through a large reception hall. The width of this house, by the way, is 25 feet, 6 inches, and the length is 36 feet, 6 inches, exclusive of the porch. Off the main reception hall and entered through a wide doorway is the living room. This room is 13 feet 8 inches by 15 feet 4 inches in dimensions.

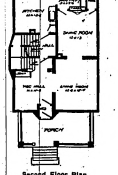


First Floor Plan.

The vital point about a house is to provide it with a dining room that will answer all requirements as to size. This plan calls for a dining room 12 feet wide and 13 feet long, of sufficient size to meet ordinary demands as to space. The kitchen and pantry are conveniently arranged and a china closet is located back of the pantry.

On the second floor are four bedrooms and a bathroom, with plenty of closet room. This is a practical, common-sense house design that makes a satisfactory home. The estimated cost of the building is $2,800.





Second Floor Plan.

He Felt It.

"Football," cried the old gentleman in the Red Lion smokeroom, "is a sin and a disgrace. Football," he continued, thumping the table with his fist, "is an abomination and a blot on civilization. The very name of football," he shouted, sweeping two glasses and a pint pot off the board in his excitement—"the very name of football is enough to make a decent, respectable man go and 'ang himself out of pure disgust!"

"The gentleman seems to feel rather deeply on the subject," said a commercial traveler, who had been listening to his remarks.

"He do," assented one of the natives.

"Has he lost something at a match?" inquired the commercial.

"He 'ave so. 'Ad a relative killed at one," replied the other, oracularly.

"What relative was it?" asked the querist.

"'Is wife's first husband!" was the response.—London Tit-Bits.

Barberous!

The laundrymen of Germany—according to a German newspaper—on receiving a courteous invitation to come over and fraternize with their British brothers of the trade, hoped to go to London and "wash the heads of the Englishmen"—a truly barberous aspiration, says the London World. Eventually they passed a resolution to go over at their own time as part of an invading force—landing, no doubt, in the Wash.

Pretty Good Proof.

"That young man I met at the beach asks me to marry him, mother, and requests a reply by the same messenger."

"Well, I don't know about this. Is he a thrifty young man?"

"Seems to be. He requests a prompt reply, stating that the messenger is hired by the hour."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Monarch's Prerogatives.

The king of England has many curious privileges which he never exercises. One is that he is entitled from his tailor to a yearly offering of a pair of white doves, a pound of cummin-seed, a pair of scarlet hose, and a silver needle.

Appropriate.

ON COOK'S DAY OUT

THEN THE TIME FOR SIMPLE, COSY MEAL.

Innumerable Dainty Dishes That May Be Served—Chicken Salad a Good Substitute for the Usual Hot Course.

In small households the cook's day out frequently represents all that is coziest and most enjoyable in the way of little dinner or supper. It is looked to by the house mother as a time for testing any new dainties of which she has heard without interfering with the cook's domestic sway, says the New York Times.

A quick and easy "vegetable" course for such a meal is Welsh rarebit, with spaghetti, for which the paste is boiled as usual in salted water until tender, then drained and stirred into a thin, smooth paste. To make the "rarebit," grate the cheese or cut or crumble it in small pieces into the cold milk, which heat slowly until the cheese has melted. Stir together and serve at once.

This dish can be prepared with a remnant of macaroni or spaghetti on the chafing dish.

For a quick roast, instead of a leg of lamb buy the rack with chops, and cook it under the gas broiler. A rack of from two pounds up can be broiled in an hour or less.

Hamburg steaks, a good choice for such occasions, can also be delicately broiled under the gas flame instead of cooked in the pan, and to many the flavor is greatly improved thereby. Onion juice is much better than the usual chopped onion for these steaks. It comes put up in bottles, or the onions may be minced in the meat chopper and a tablespoonful or two pressed out.

Another substantial offering for the menu is ham patties made of about two kitchen cups of cold cooked ham minced fine and stirred into four cups of bread crumbs, the latter moistened with milk. To this add a large lump of butter and any seasonings liked. Pour the butter into gem pans, filling about two-thirds only. Now break an egg over each little section, sprinkle over more of the bread crumbs, and bake until brown.

Frequently at such times the housekeeper will substitute a cold dish, which can be prepared well in advance, for the hot roast or broiled meat. A hearty course of this kind is chicken salad served in a ring of ham jelly.

Serve this on a bed of crisp watercress, having the salad heaped up in the center of the jelly ring, which is made in this way: Whip stiff a kitchen cup of thick "double" cream, and into this stir a cup of strong aspic jelly. Cool it, and before it is quite set add a small quantity of potted very finely minced cooked ham. Combine all three ingredients with the egg whip, color pink with any pure coloring extract or tomato juice and pack in the mold. It will require about two hours to set thoroughly.

A dainty bite for the entree or dessert is rice fritters prepared by this formula: Three-quarters of a pint of cold cooked rice, one tablespoonful of sugar, yolks of two eggs, cup of milk and flour enough to make the usual thick drop batter. Add a teaspoonful of baking powder, mixed with the last of the flour, and, last of all fold in the whites of the eggs, beaten very stiff. Fry like any fritters and serve with pure maple syrup.

To Help With Fireless Cooker.

Many people do not seem to realize, in using a fireless cooker, that all sorts of utensils besides the ones coming with the cooker may be used with the heat radiators. For rice or Indian pudding, or scalloped potatoes, for instance, prepare the mixture in an earthenware or fireproof china baking dish, which may go direct to the table. Heat the radiator over a strong fire or gas flame until it is thoroughly hot. Then place it in the cooker and carefully lower the baking dish down on it. If the food is of a nature to require a very hot fire, a second radiator can be placed over it on the rack. In this case it will be done in two or three hours with a good firm and slightly brown crust.—Good Housekeeping Magazine.

To Save Meat.

Chop fine any bits of meat, chicken, pork, veal or what not, add and chop into this any cold fried or boiled eggs which have been left over. When the whole is chopped fine and thoroughly mixed, add one or two beaten eggs. The eggs can be dispensed with if necessary. Add a little sweet milk for moisture and enough cracker crumbs to make the mixture easily handled. Season with salt and pepper. Roll into croquettes and fry in hot lard. If desirable the croquettes can be made into balls and friend to a crisp in half butter and half lard.

Baked Cream Toast.

Toast the required number of slices of two-day-old bread, dip quickly in hot salt water (one tablespoonful to a pint of water), butter and lay in a flat pan; then pour a little rich milk over it and place in a hot oven for about five minutes. Take up on a platter and pour two tablespoonfuls of cream on each slice, place the platter in the oven just long enough to heat through and then serve at once. Slices of crisp bacon may be placed around the toast. This is an excellent breakfast dish.

Relish.

For cold meats or fish add to one quart of vinegar, half ounce of cayenne pepper, two heads of garlic chopped fine, three anchovies mashed, two tablespoonfuls of ground cloves, three tablespoonfuls of allspice, two blades of mace, half teaspoonful each of ginger and cinnamon; let stand 24 hours, then strain, add the juice of one lemon, [illegible]

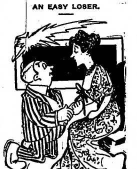
DIET FOR THE TUBERCULOUS

General Idea That Too Much Food Cannot Be Given Is Shown to Be Erroneous.

Many traditions with regard to the feeding of tuberculosis patients and with regard to food in general, are given severe blows in a series of articles published in the October number of the Journal of Outdoor Life, the official organ of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Dr. John R. Murlin of New York, assistant professor of physiology at the Cornell university medical college, holds in an article entitled "The Dynamic Principles of Nutrition," that a consumptive will gain weight and do well on three pints of whole milk, eight ounces of cream, five ounces of milk sugar, six eggs and two slices of buttered toast as a ration for 24 hours. The entire diet, with the exception of the bread and butter, could be prepared in advance and served for a cost of about fifty cents for the day. Miss Cecilia Flick of the Henry Phipps institute of Philadelphia also offers some sample diets which the ordinary family can prepare for even less than fifty cents a day.

Dr. David R. Lyman of Wallingford, Conn., and Dr. Paul B. Johnson of Washington, D. C., both agree that the ordinary person eats too much, and that the old notions about stuffing a tuberculosis patient at all times and seasons have been proven false. Dr. Lyman holds that eggs are not a necessary article of the consumptve's diet, but that a tuberculosis patient should eat anything that agrees with him that is nourishing. He thinks that a tuberculosis patient should eat only a little more than a person in ordinary good health.

AN EASY LOSER.



He—You're worth a million and I'm penniless. Will you marry me?

She—No. Why did you ask me?

He—I wanted to see how a man feels when he loses a million dollars.

ERUPTION COVERED BODY

"Three years ago this winter I had a breaking out that covered my whole body. It itched so it seemed as if I should go crazy. It first came out in little pimples on my back and spread till it covered my whole body and limbs down to my knees, also my arms down to my elbows. Where I scratched it made sores, and the terrible itching and burning kept me from sleeping. I tried several remedies all to no purpose. Then I concluded to try the Cuticura Remedies. I used the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, also the Resolvent, for about four months, and they completely cured me of eczema. I have had no return of the disease since. I never had a good night's rest after the skin eruption first broke out till I commenced using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had only used them a few days before I could see they were beginning to heal, and the terrible itching was gone.

"Those that lived in the house at the time know how I suffered, and how the Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured me. I never take a bath without using the Cuticura Soap, and I do not believe there are better remedies for any skin disease than the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Miss Sarah Calkins, Waukegan, Ill., Mar. 16, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 5 K, Boston.

Most Fickle Man.

When Col. William M. Howard, now a member of the tariff board, was electioneering for congress one autumn in bygone days he struck a backwoods county in Georgia, and got very busy talking softly to the voters. He was much concerned about a man named John, who was now for him, then against him, and always changeable.

"What's the matter with John?" the colonel asked one of his constituents.

"Aw, you can't tell nothin' about John, colonel," was the assurance. "He is the most fickle man you ever see. Why, he has had religion so many times, and been baptized in the creek down here so often that the bullfrogs know him every time he's 'mersed."

A woman may not be able to make a fool of every man she meets, but she can make something just as good.

DIED

A telegram was received Thursday night by Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Dahl conveying the sad news of the death of their daughter Carrie—Mrs. R. M. Daniels—at noon of that day at her home, Seattle, Wash.

She had been ailing for sometime and about a month ago was taken to a hospital where it was found she was suffering with diabetes. The disease, however, seemed to yield readily to treatment, and about a week ago she was removed to her home seemingly quite recovered, though weak.

Mrs. Daniels was born Feb. 5, 1883, at St. James, Minn., and in May of the same year came with her parents to St. Hilaire, where she grew to womanhood, loved by all. She went to Seattle in August, 1906, and was married to Robert M. Daniels in March 1907.

Besides her husband and parents, she leaves to mourn her loss a sister and four brothers, Edith, Fred, Neil, Edward, and Andy, who have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community in this sad hour of bereavement.

SHE SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Erie, Pa. — "I suffered for five years from female troubles and at last was almost helpless. I went to three doctors and they did me no good, so my sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken only two bottles I could see a big change, so I took six bottles and I am now strong and well again. I don't know how to express my thanks for the good it has done me and I hope all suffering women will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It was worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. Endlich, R. F. D. No. 7, Erie, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you want special advice write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. It is free and always helpful.

Appetite Not a Necessity.

Dr. John R. Murlin of New York, assistant professor of physiology at the Cornell university medical college, in an article in the October number of the Journal of the Outdoor Life, compares the food we eat to the fuel used in furnishing steam and power for an engine. In selecting our food he says that we should eat enough to furnish energy for the day's work, but that much more than this is not needed. He holds that the appetite is not a necessity for good digestion. "There is no fallacy of nutrition," he says, "greater than that which supposes that a food cannot be digested and utilized without appetite." Most of the food we eat, fully four-fifths, goes to supply energy for our every-day tasks, while less than one-fifth goes to supply building material.

Her Infinite Variety.

A woman smoked a cigarette, and made thereby a sensation.

Such a sensation, in fact, that shortly another woman was smoking, and then another.

But as more and more women smoked the sensation they made grew less and less, until at length they made no sensation at all.

That ended it.

"Well, what next?" quoth womankind, for age could not wither her nor custom stale her infinite variety.—Puck

RED.

It's the Red Blood Corpuscles That Proper Food Makes.

An Ohio woman says Grape-Nuts food gave her good red blood and restored the roses of youth to a complexion that had been muddy and blotchy. She says:

"For 10 years I had stomach trouble which produced a breaking out on my face. The doctors gave it a long Latin name, but their medicines failed to cure it. Along with this I had frequent headaches, nervousness and usually pain in my stomach after meals.

"I got disgusted with the drugs, stopped them and coffee off short, and quit eating everything but fruit and Grape-Nuts, with Postum for my table beverage.

"The headaches, stomach trouble, and nervous weakness disappeared almost like magic, which showed that when the cause was removed and good food and drink used nature was ready to help.

"My blood was purified and my complexion became like a young girl's, while my weight was increased from 90 to 120 pounds in a few months—good, solid firm flesh, where it used to be soft and flabby.

"I recommended Grape-Nuts and Postum to one of my friends, who was afflicted as I had been. She followed my advice and in a short time was restored to complete health and in about 8 months her weight increased from 100 to 148 pounds.

"Our doctor, observing the effect of Grape-Nuts and Postum in our cases, declared, the other day, that he would hereafter prescribe these food products for gastritis." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

NOTES from MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Late in the fall is a good time to batch spring chicks in some sections.

Shorts are more economical feed for sows and growing pigs than corn.

The deepest mudhole and steepest hill measure the real distance to market.

Turkeys will soon become weak and subject to disease where inbreeding is practiced.

Drenching is a poor way to give doses of liquid medicine to any farm animal.

Where there is plenty of skimmed milk, beef scraps for hens need not be bought.

When the hogs fail to gain at least a pound a day it is time to say good-by to them.

Get your cows started right for the coming cold weather and they will do well all winter.

Build a warm, dry and otherwise comfortable room for the calves for the cold weather.

When selecting a cow for the dairy look and see if the eye of the animal is large and full.

This is the time of the year when dairy cattle require better care and more liberal feeding.

A mule is no more prone to kick than a horse unless he is taught to do so by bad treatment.

Always have a great deal of respect for the bull. His past conduct is no guarantee of future gentleness.

When fattening for the market, do it quickly; push all the feed down the hogs they will stand for.

To thoroughly clean milk utensils they first should be rinsed with cold water, to remove all particles of milk.

The successful feeding of lambs depends largely on their being offered great variety of food while in the yards.

It is now a well known fact that the average pure-bred will produce more milk than the average grade cow.

Peach trees can be planted any time between last and first frost; the earlier in the winter they are planted the better.

Keep all the rotten fruit well cleaned up around the orchard, as these constitute the winter quarters of numerous orchard pests.

If all of the garden space is to grow profitable crops, no large trees must stand closer than thirty to fifty feet from the garden fence.

The calf that is expected to develop into a strong and profitable cow should be given all the chance possible during its early period of growth.

The best results are usually obtained from the work that is systematized and most carefully planned. This is not always the hardest work on the farm.

The best way to stop a hog from eating chickens is to put it on the market as soon as possible, since it will soon lead other hogs into the bad habit.

The best milking pail is the one so constructed that it will reduce to a minimum the amount of dirt falling into the milk during the process of milking.

An old horseman says that the chief cause of colic in horses, or the cause of the largest per cent. of these cases, is brought through long abstinence from water.

Do not neglect to secure a good supply of fine dust for the fowls during the coming winter, while the ground is yet dry and there is dust in the road.

There is much difference in the individuality of cows and their powers to produce milk as there is in men and their powers to perform certain kinds of work.

The profit in a cow comes from the extra amount of milk she will yield over what she ordinarily gives on common pasture or the coarse feeds usually given her.

The poultry raiser who notes his flock carefully, taking into account what they are doing, and capable of doing, ought to know more how to feed and what to feed, than anyone advising at long range.

Poultry experts claim that the ordinary hen averages only eighty eggs per year, whereas she ought to lay at least one hundred and fifty. That is, she ought to lay twice as many eggs as she does now. The aim of the fancy poultry man has always been to increase egg production and he is succeeding to a great extent, for the two-hundred-egg a year hen is now no longer a rarity.

Winter is coming. Better [illegible]

Sour milk is caused by dirt and warmth.

What water is to a person a dust bath is to a hen.

See that your fowls are absolutely free from vermin.

If the feathers are to be sold, ducks must be dry picked.

There is profit in breeding turkeys up to the fifth year.

The value of butter increases as the quality improves.

A good horseman never trots a draft horse, even when he has no load.

Laying hens need from 15 to 25 per cent meat scraps added daily to their mash.

Don't feed hay or other forage, which will raise a dust, before or during milking.

Tainted, musty or mouldy feeds should never be served in the dairy herd rations.

If we have not access to road dust, we may take some field earth, fine and free from lumps.

The best market for skim milk on the farm is afforded by good dairy calves and quick growing pigs.

If the cream in the churn foams up and runs over, the churn is too full or the cream is improperly ripened.

Simply because a calf is given her ration of milk each day, it does not signify that she does not need water also.

Cholera and other diseases of swine attack herds which are in poor condition and consequently most susceptible.

If your horse is troubled with indigestion have the animal clipped and its teeth attended to by a veterinarian.

Until recent years the poultry business, especially on the farms, was of so little importance that not much attention was paid to it.

The egg production of the United States is given as $400,000,000 for the past year. The entire poultry production is put at $600,000,000.

Prune out old canes of raspberries and blackberries and burn them. Thin the hills to three or four shoots. Cultivate, and add some manure to the soil.

The red mites or lice do not stay on the fowls during the daytime, but hide in cracks during the day, sallying forth after dark to seek their prey.

Orchardists who have never used dynamite should be sure to get all possible information from the manufacturers of the explosive before attempting to use it.

If celery is to be brought into the cellar for winter storage cut the top root, lift it from the ground and then with a strong knife cut off the branching roots and most of the earth.

Lousy fowls are necessarily weaker than fowls that are free from lice, and strength and vitality are quite important factors while the fowls are producing their new suit of clothes.

If your fowls have the range of the fields and orchards and can pick up a number of insects and worms daily, you will not need to bother much about the meat supply in the ration.

Although flying about and apparently of mature age, birds may be distinguished as squabs by the squealing noise they make, which is always the call of the squab.

The raising of poultry on the farm or in conjunction with fruit growing, can be made very profitable with the same kind of management that is devoted to raising good stock or good grain.

Everything should be kept as clean on the little chicks' feeding floors as if it is on the floor of the kitchen. If this is done the little birds will never have gapes or many of the chicken diseases.

If you are feeding clover, remember to cut down the bulk. This is a hearty food and you can't use as much of it as you can of timothy without doing your horse harm.

In filling a silo attention must be given to the outer edges, for when the silage begins to settle there is always a draw away from the wall, leaving an air space that makes the silage spoil.

There is no better germ slayer than an ounce of carbolic acid added to a pail of whitewash. Give the walls and ceiling of the hen house a good coating, working it in rather thick in all cracks and crevices.

There is not a farm in the country where farming is seriously attempted at all where it is necessary to try to raise chickens without decent provision for the safety of the flock and for the convenience of the attendant.

Have a gunny sack soaked with crude oil hanging over the hole made for the pigs in the farrowing pen to run through, just high enough to rub their backs as they run through. This will be sufficient to keep them disinfected from lice, etc.

Power farming is as certain to come as is next Fourth of July. It means a lowered cost of production, and an increased profit. It makes possible the large farm well-tilled, and [illegible]

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Curb on Sharpers in the Alien Hotels

WE'VE GOT DE FINEST KIND O' EATS AN' WE DON'T TAKE ANY MORE'N YOU'VE GOT EITHER

NEW YORK.—Robbing immigrants and emigrants has long been a recognized industry around the docks of New York and proprietors of lodging houses have been taking money away from these people coming and going. Two laws recently became operative by which lodging house keepers will be compelled to give the arriving and departing persons of foreign birth something like the equivalent for money received.

Foreigners arrive all the year around, but those who depart for a visit to the old country generally begin coming to New York about October 1 and continue coming until the Christmas holidays. Then the steerage begins to bring them back, and by March nearly all are again in this country and ready to go to work.

Under the old system, runners for the lodging houses boarded the steamers and went through the steerage passengers looking for victims. No matter what country the arriving emigrant came from, there was some runner to talk to him in his native language.

When the boat had docked the runners led their victims to some lodging house, where they were made welcome as long as they had money. It often happened that an immigrant bound for some inland town and provided with a railway ticket would be detained in New York as long as he had money and then loaded on a train to go hungry to his destination. Those who go back to the "old country" in the fall on a visit are not so easy. Agents of the lodging houses, however, meet western trains, sometimes riding several hours out from New York, in search of customers. Persons thus obtained as patrons for a lodging house were furnished every opportunity to see New York while waiting for the steamer and a good many of them were out of money when sailing time came.

Under the new laws the runners are no longer allowed to board boats or swarm around the docks soliciting patronage and every lodging house keeper has to furnish a bond for the fair treatment of his patrons.

Picture Unites a Brother and Sister

SAY SIS - YOU HAVEN'T CHANGED A BIT ?!?!?

AURORA, ILL.—John Stanton of Aurora and his missing sister, Mrs. G. W. Waters of Philadelphia, whom he has not seen for 20 years, have been reunited through a moving picture film, and the Aurora man has gone to make his future home with his relative.

Mrs. Waters is an actress who paid her last visit to her brother almost a quarter of a century ago when she was appearing at the Park theater in Brooklyn. Correspondence finally was dropped and Mr. Stanton waited year after year for some word from the woman. Recently his attention was called to a theater poster in Aurora and the striking resemblance between the woman and his long-lost sister caused him to buy a ticket for the performance.

As the drama was cast on the screen he recognized the nurse to the young heroine in the drama as his sister. He sought out the manager, obtained the address of the film company, and ultimately located her in Philadelphia. He recently returned from a ten weeks' visit and goes back to pass the remainder of his life at her home.

Stanton, who is 73 years old, was born in New York and served in the navy during the Civil war at the Brooklyn navy yards. After the war he moved west and became a farmer. A few years ago he moved to Aurora. The Stantons have been of a dramatic tendency and most of them have been actors and actresses. Mrs. Waters has been on the stage for 46 years and expects to remain there the rest of her life. Stanton's nephew Barry O'Neal, is stage maanger for a film company, while Mrs. O'Neal writes many of their picture dramas.

This is the second time that a moving picture film has been the means of bringing together separated relatives. Two years ago a moving picture in Goshen, Ind., showed an ostrich farm. Suddenly a woman in the audience cried out and swooned.

She had recognized a boy leading an ostrich in the picture as her son, who had run away with a circus a year or more before. Communication with the company which made the film resulted in the boy being restored to his mother.

Pastor Quits Pulpit to Be Expressman

I CAN'T SEE HOW THIS WORK LOWERS MY DIGNITY

CHICAGO.—Rev. Henry M. McDowell has preached his last sermon at the Woodlawn Park Congregational church. He resigned because certain members of the church objected to his action in donning overalls and working as an express messenger at $18 a week to augment his salary of $120 a month from the church.

That manual labor lowered the dignity of the pastor, was the objection made by the members of the church, and according to friends of the pastor, while they were unable to have him ousted from the pulpit, they made things so unpleasant for him that he resigned.

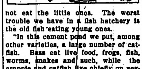
The pastor's resignation and the disclosure of the actions of the members who forced it, has caused so much indignation toward them on the part of other members of the church that they have withdrawn their memberships. The objectors were members of two families, the heads of which were trustees of the church.

"The Master I have been serving for 20 years as a pastor was a carpenter," said Rev. Mr. McDowell. "It did not lower his dignity to do manual labor, and I do not think he would object to my being an express messenger so I could pay my honest debts.

"It was impossible for me to keep my family on the $1,440 a year I received from the church. I have six children. Each of them contributes to the church, yet none of them was earning money. Each of them attended the church suppers and socials, paying at them out of my salary.

"Then came serious illness, and, last spring, I found myself $250 in debt. Casting about for means of paying this sum, and certain that I could not pay it out of my salary, I found that I could add $18 a week to my income by becoming an express messenger. I consulted with one of the trustees and he told me it would be all right for me to accept. I did accept, and my doing so raised a storm of protest. Finally it became so unpleasant that rather than continue the difficulty, I decided to stop the trouble by resigning."

Corn Fed Catfish Latest From Kansas



TOPEKA, Kan.—Ever hear of a corn-fed, pedigreed catfish? Kansas has some and is going to have more. Prof. L. L. Dyche, curator of the Natural History museum of the State university and state fish and game warden, has undertaken to improve the breed of catfish by the methods employed by expert breeders in improved hogs, cattle, sheep and chickens and the methods advised by sociologists to improve the human race—careful selection of mates.

At the state fish hatchery at Pratt they are growing corn-fed catfish that are as much of an improvement over the ordinary catfish, just by feeding alone, as the catfish is better than a buffalo as far as food value is concerned. The corn-fed Kansas steer and hog bring the highest prices in the markets.

"We have one small pond at the hatchery that is flooded and lined with cement," said Prof. Dyche. "After the spawning season is over and the little fish are old enough that they don't need the mother's care, we take the big ones out of the spawning ponds and put them into this cement pond, where we can feed them and they cannot eat the little ones. The worst trouble we have in a fish hatchery is the old fish eating young ones.

"In this cement pond we put, among other varieties, a large number of catfish. Bass eat live food, frogs, fish, worms, snakes and such, while the crapple and catfish live chiefly on vegetables. Every day we put chopped cornmeal and cornbread into that pond for the catfish. We put little goldfish and small carp into it for the bass. The crapple eat corn and other vegetables and if he gets real hungry he will eat carp or beef, liver or grasshoppers.

"We have catfish in other ponds that are not fed on corn and we have been eating both the corn-fed catfish and those that are not corn fed and there is all the difference in the world in the favor of the two."

Baby as Luggage.

The latest style of baby carriages was seen in the Union depot recently. It is a simple affair—the baby, a board and several straps. At first glance the baby might be mistaken for a bunch of clothing bound together in an old fashioned shawl strap, but on looking closer you see that on the child's back a board was placed, and three stout straps bound the youngster to it. A [illegible] added to its convenience.—[illegible]

Unkind Insinuation.

Once at a dinner Henry Ward Beecher told his sister, Mrs. Beecher-Stowe, that her "Uncle Tom's Cabin" had been translated into Italian by a monk; and that a letter full of adulation had been received from him, in which he stated that if he could kiss the woman who wrote the book he would die happy. Mr. Beecher then added: "Well, I sent him a portrait of Harriet, and nothing has been heard [illegible]

IN HOSPITAL NINE MONTHS.

Awful Tale of Suffering From Kidney Trouble.

Alfred J. O'Brien, Second St., Sterling, Colo., says: "I was in the Baltimore Marine Hospital nine months. The urine was in a terrible state and some days I passed half a gallon of blood. They wanted to operate on me and I went to St. Joseph's Hospital at Omaha, putting in three months there without any gain. I was pretty well discouraged when advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I did so and when I had taken one box, the pain left me. I kept on and a perfect cure was the result."

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH YOUR BABY?

The young mother—and many an old one, too—is often puzzled to know the cause of her child's ill nature. The loudness of its crying does not necessarily indicate the seriousness of its trouble. It may have nothing more the matter with it than a headache or a feeling of general dullness. It cannot, of course, describe its feelings, but as a preliminary measure you are safe in trying a mild laxative.

Nine times out of ten, you will find it is all the child needs, for its restlessness and peevishness are perhaps due to obstruction of the bowels, and once that has been remedied the headache, the sluggishness and the many other evidences of constipation and indigestion will quickly disappear.

Don't give the little one salts, cathartic pills or nasty waters, for these will act as purgatives, and they are too strong for a child. In the families of Mrs. E. A. Thelin, Manvel, N. D., and Mrs. Henry Jensen, Granton, Wis., the only laxative given is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It has been found to answer most perfectly all the purposes of a laxative and its very mildness and freedom from griping recommend it especially for the use of children, women, and old folks generally—people who need a gentle bowel stimulant. Thousands of American families have been enthusiastic about it for more than a quarter of a century.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a large bottle (family size) can have a sample bottle sent to the home free of charge by simply addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

No More Room.

The railway carriage was crowded, but a very fat old gentleman who sat by the window calmly ignored the ominous looks of the passengers for taking up so much room.

A boy selling buns poked his head in at the window and inquired:

"Buns, sir?"

The old gentleman was slightly deaf, and, not noticing the buns, thought the boy wanted a seat in the already packed carriage; so he remarked:

"Full up, my boy! No more room inside!"

A roar of laughter followed his reply, and the old gentleman innocently wondered as to the cause of their merriment.—London Tit-Bits.

Restored Courage.

The southern lover was impetuous, says the author of a recent book of reminiscences of eastern Virginia, entitled "Memory Days," and the maiden was timid and unused to passionate proposals of marriage. "Oh, don't!" she interrupted in a whisper. "You frighten me dreadfully."

Overcome by contrition the young man humbly apologized for his fervor, and a painful silence ensued. The girl broke it at last.

"Robert," she began, with a hopeful smile, "I don't think—I—shall—be so frightened this time."

Fever's On.

"There's no fever like the football fever," said George H. Earle, Jr., at a dinner party in Philadelphia. "Let me tell you about a broker's boy in Third street.

"A Third street broker sat at his desk the other morning when his office boy entered and said respectfully:

"'If you please, sir, my grandfather's dead and I'd like to get off early to go to the funeral match—I mean the football ceremony—that is—'

"And then, blushing scarlet, the boy withdrew."

Silly Game.

A city cousin had been staying at the farm for two weeks, resting up for the winter's round of pleasure. One evening after supper she suggested to her country cousin that they get up a bridge party some evening.

"My sakes, Arabella," was the horrified reply. "They ain't no bridge nearer than four mile, and that one's awful rickety. This time of the year you'd all have pneumonia. For crazy new-fangled idees, give me you city folks!"

Shipwreck Up to Date.

"Captain, is there much danger?"

"Not a particle. A moving-picture outfit will soon be along and rescue us after they have taken a few films."

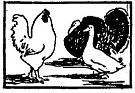
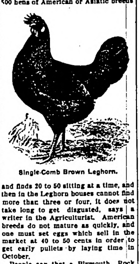
POULTRY



MAKING PROFIT IN LEGHORNS

Egg Productiveness More Than Offsets Any Advantage Other Breeds Have in Flesh.

Twenty-five years ago I began breeding the Leghorn and have kept this breed ever since, although I have tried many other kinds side by side. One of the most serious objections I find to the large brown egg breeds is the disposition to sit. When one has 400 or 500 hens of American or Asiatic breeds and finds 20 to 50 sitting at a time, and then in the Leghorn houses cannot find more than three or four, it does not take long to get disgusted, says a writer in the Agriculturist. American breeds do not mature as quickly, and one must set eggs which sell in the market at 40 to 50 cents in order to get early pullets by laying time in October.



Single-Comb Brown Leghorn.

People say that a Plymouth Rock fowl makes a good roast, but if eggs of Leghorn breeds and those of the Plymouth Rock varieties are set the same day, the Leghorn fowls will lay when the eggs are high, so that a dozen will pay for more than enough to offset an advance in what the carcass would bring.

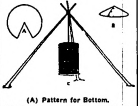
Again, the Leghorns are longer lived as a paying investment, for even at four or five years of age they will be profitable as egg producers, while a Plymouth Rock will become too fat after the second molt to be profitable as a layer. The Leghorn eggs are very even in color, large and white; in fact, the largest. I have fowls whose eggs weigh two pounds to the dozen; ordinary brown eggs will weigh from a pound and six ounces to a pound and eight ounces; not only this, but Leghorn eggs can be produced for less money. My experience is that six cents for white and ten cents or more for brown eggs is about the usual run.

HOME-MADE POULTRY FEEDER

Automatic Device Eliminates All Waste and Compels Birds to Scratch for Their Rations.

My hens wake up very early in the morning. Of course it doesn't do them any good to stand around hungry at daybreak, but getting out to feed them is a strenuous task. For a time I tried scattering the scratch feed in the litter after dark, but pretty soon I found that I was supporting about all the rats in the neighborhood. Finally, after faltering for a time betwixt duty and pleasure, I devised an automatic feeder which solves that particular problem, and at the same time several more, writes C. M. Gallup in the Successful Farming. It eliminates all waste; it compels the birds to take exercise in getting their ration; it is ready for business twenty-four hours of the day.

The bottom is cut from galvanized iron in circular form fifteen inches in diameter. Without changing the dividers I then mark the radius on the circumference, and allowing about three-eighths of an inch for the lap, I cut one-sixth of the circle in the shape of a sector. The bottom is then shaped into a cone and the lap is riveted. The side is a simple cylinder of cellar-window screen cut to fit the bottom, and wired through little holes that are punched together in pairs. To support the device fit a piece of board diametrically across the top, and staple the wire to the ends. For ordinary scratch feed for fowls I use screen with three mesh per inch, but for baby chicks six mesh. I make the feeder for chicks of the same proportion as the feeder for fowls; but it is built to hold only about a quart.



(A) Pattern for Bottom. (B) Bottom Completed. (C) Feeder Completed.

Grains for Poultry.

The value of grains as poultry food, and which they relish the best, runs about in this order: Wheat, oats, corn, barley and buckwheat. Rye is of the least valuable, and fowls very seldom eat it, and then only when very hungry.

Salt Morning Mash.

It is best to salt the morning mash, but not more than one ounce for 100 head of stock should be used. Dissolve the salt in hot water with which the mash is moistened. In this way it will be more evenly distributed.

FEW FACTS ABOUT POULTRY

Quality of the Eggs Greatly Depends on the Food Given—French Use Spices in Fattening.

Eggs may differ materially in color, and yet may not differ much in nutriment. Again, they may differ largely in nutriment, when, for instance, they are neglected or poorly fed, or when they eat filth, damaged grain or tainted meat. The crop and gizzard of a hen cannot transform impure food into pure food products. The real value of an egg for food lies inside the shell, and is not indicated by color of shell, says the American Cultivator.

In France they mix spices and herbs with the food given to fattening poultry, which are said to impart a delicious flavor to the meat.

Fowls intended to be killed should not only be confined in a coop for 24 hours without food, but should be supplied with plenty of drinking water, which adds to the cleanness of the intestines.

If a drawn carcass has any distance to go, it may mold inside; or if a fly does not "blow" in it, there is a large exposed surface hidden from sight which may become infected by some means during transit. If moldy, sour or fly blown, it is no longer salable, at least for anything like a fair price, and it is not safe as food.

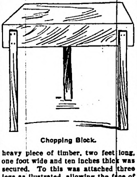
A poultry lecturer in Scotland some years ago, in an address on the rearing and general management of chickens, said on the subject of food, he would give a "wrinkle" worth its weight in gold. At three days old the chickens were qualified to eat pretty nearly anything, but he warned them against the practice of feeding the chickens on soaked bread. They should adopt the following plan: Fill the little linen bag half full of rice, put it into water and let it boil five minutes. They should then withdraw the bag and let the water drain away and they would find the rice whole and separated. A handful of oatmeal should be mixed with the rice and it would absorb all the moisture. This the chickens should be allowed to pick up for themselves, but they should not have too much.

As the duck has no crop, it does not assimilate and thrive on whole grain.

CHOPPING BLOCK IS HANDY

Implement Will Be Found of Great Convenience for Cutting Meat and Bones for Poultry.

We have been using a chopping block around the chicken yard which is very handy when pounding bones and chopping fresh meat for the flock, says a writer in the Homestead. A heavy piece of timber, two feet long, one foot wide and ten inches thick was secured. To this was attached three legs as illustrated, allowing the face of the block to stand about two and one-half inches above the ground.

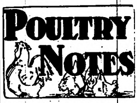


Chopping Block.

Vigor Inherited.

The natural inheritance of all fowls is constitutional vigor, provided, of course, they are not enfeebled by injudicious breeding. Constitutional vigor can be maintained and brought about by choosing the strongest, healthiest and hardiest of the stock for breeders every spring, and by killing off the weak and sickly ones in the fall. The introduction of fresh blood frequently not only keeps up the stamina, health and vigor of stock, but it also enables them to resist sickness and sudden changes of weather much better than fowls closely and continually inbred, or fowls not bred to any degree of constitutional excellence, or selected for establishing any permanent quality.

POULTRY NOTES



Don't overlook providing for a supply of green feed.

A hen without plenty of drink is a hen without many eggs to put in the basket.

Fresh eggs find ready buyers and command respect. Bad eggs cause trouble.

Store a sufficient quantity of road dust also to provide the chickens with dust baths during the winter.

Carefulness in dressing poultry pays for the extra pains taken. The pin feathers must all be removed.

Worry along without a trap nest, but keep your eyes open for the best layers and set their eggs next spring.

Over-exercise toughens the flesh of even a young fowl. A good breast is half the race for a valuable table fowl.

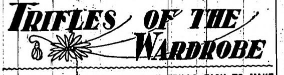
Eggs have lots of albumen in them. What is that? You get it in milk. Don't fail to feed all of it you can spare.

The carcass should be dressed immediately after killing. To allow the feathers to remain on for several hours will hasten decomposition.

Should your poultry house floor be damp and there be no possibility of moving it to dryer grounds, scatter several wheelbarrel loads of fine dry earth over the top.

The laying hen is not apt to become overfat. Nevertheless, it is a mistake to keep her on a diet of corn expecting her to manufacture eggs from that article. Corn is no egg food.

TRIFLES OF THE WARDROBE



LITTLE COATS ARRIVE

PARISIAN FAD HAS "CAUGHT ON" IN AMERICA.

Coatees, Casaquins and Caracos Are Characteristic Features of Present Fashions—Give Air of Distinction to Costume.

Frenchwomen have accepted the little coatees, casaquins and caracos, which were one of the most characteristic features of the empire day dresses.

They made their first appearance a short time ago and, since Dame Fashion has declared her preference for empire and directoire styles, they bounded at once into popularity. In fact, Paris has gone quite mad over them—a way the inhabitants of that fitful city have of doing when any new fad in dress is introduced.

That being the case, it is only a question of time when the style will become quite general here; in fact, a few of them are already seen on women who have recently returned from a trip abroad.

They are quaintly picturesque and simple in line, but possess a peculiar quality that adds just the right note of distinction to the costume.

Imagine, if you can, the attractiveness of a perfectly plain skirt of pale blue and white taffeta, cut over a six-gore model, with a panel back and front, and having a raised waist line, with the bodice taking the shape of a little coatee of pale blue voile, finished at the high waist with a small rounded basque mounted on a thick cord covered with plain blue taffeta.

The coatee finishes in the back with two long coat-tails of irregular length, cut square at the bottom and finished with a narrow ball fringe which also bordered the basque.

The front of the coatee crosses in front and is fastened at the waist with a small flat rosette of tiny pink rosebuds, the V-shaped opening being bordered with a collar of finely pleated lawn edged with blue; a little guimpe of transparent tulle fills in the V.

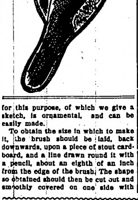
Although seemingly perishable, they really last a remarkably long time. They give a softness to the throat that is unobtainable in any other way. Many of them are made of flesh-colored tulle, which when worn with afternoon frocks gives them the appearance of being decidedly decollete. With evening gowns for semi-dress occasions they are wonderfully effective.

To return to the coatee, these little garments are made of figured silk or satin combined with plain skirts, or vice versa. Others are of cloth, velvet, marquisette, chiffon or even net lined with a delicate shade of satin. The cut can be varied to suit the wearer, but they all are made with the short empire waist and elbow sleeves.

CASE PROTECTS THE BRUSH

Article of Necessity if Silver Toilet Utensils Are to Be Kept Properly.

Unless a silver-backed brush is protected in some manner, while it is not in actual use, it will soon become scratched and tarnished, and the case for this purpose, of which we give a sketch, is ornamental, and can be easily made.



To obtain the size in which to make it, the brush should be laid, back downwards, upon a piece of stout cardboard, and a line drawn round it with a pencil, about an eighth of an inch from the edge of the brush. The shape so obtained should then be cut out and smoothly covered on one side with silk, and the other with velvet, with a little wadding underneath. For the side of the case a second piece of cardboard should be cut out in the shape shown by diagram D, and it should be of sufficient length to reach from point B to C in diagram A. This piece of cardboard is also covered on one side with velvet and the other with silk, upon which some pretty little design, such as suggested in the sketch, has been worked. When this has been done, it may be bent into shape and sewn in an upright position to the lower part, and to complete the case it is entirely edged with a fine silk cord. The small sketch E at the top shops the brush in the case, and as the silver back of the brush rests upon the velvet it will help to keep it from the effects of the air, and prevent it from being scratched.

EVENING WRAPS VERY RICH

Satin, Chiffon Velvet and Broadcloth Are Among the Costly Materials Used This Season.

Very handsome are the new evening coats, and many of them are picturesque in their lines—draped effects and big floppy collars of lace and great revers of fur or velvet being conspicuous. The material may be satin or chiffon velvet or broadcloth.

A striking model is in peach-colored satin with a shoulder drapery and scarf of chiffon to match. In back is a great sailor collar that reaches almost to the proportions of a cape and extends down over the sleeves to the cuffs, made of elaborate pompadour lace in white. Insets of the lace are placed at the foot on each side, headed by a curved ornament of the satin, shirred. A satin buckle holds the scarf in front.

A theater coat is of black panne velvet with a touch of red in the lapel and cuffs. Another model in black velvet is brightened by a lining of gold satin and gold lace in [illegible] a round collar with square revers and is bordered with pointed fox. The coat is fastened with a big double loop of dull gold.

One model is in white broadcloth, embroidered in white, with cuffs, revers and deep sections at the foot made of black velvet.

SIDE FRILLS EASY TO MAKE

Heavy White or Ecru Net Best Material for Body—Square Meshed Net Also Good.

The side frill that does so much to freshen a simple waist must be of fine material, or it gives a blouse a common look. These are costly to buy, but easy to make with net and lace.

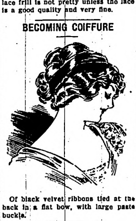
The newest frills are cut about three inches wide at the top and taper to nothing at the bottom, which sometimes reaches to the belt, more often just below the bust line.

A rather heavy white or ecru net is the best material for the body of the frill. It is generally finely plaited, but launders better if cut straight and slightly held in so as not to span. Edge with a row of heavy lace insertion with an edging to match, and if unplaited put a second row of insertion a half inch from the outer one.

A smart frill is made of heavy square meshed net worked on the edge with a shallow, irregular scallop done in white rope silk in buttonhole stitch. A simple cross stitch design in Greek key or other simple lines is worked on the inside of the frill in the rope silk. Two or three rows of this stitching may be used.

The mull frill, delicately embroidered in white mercerized cotton in a simple floral design, is dainty on a wash silk waist, but is less popular than the net and lace ones. An all lace frill is not pretty unless the lace is a good quality and very fine.

BECOMING COIFFURE



Of black velvet ribbons tied at the back in a flat bow, with large paste buckle.

Longer Skirts.

The afternoon frock shows skirts just a little longer than in the summer. The innovation is to be greeted with joy, for the foot must be attractively shod and of the daintiest proportions to withstand the shortness of the scant skirt that will ride up when the wearer is seated. So longer skirts—and just a little fuller—if you would heed the mandate of the Paris designers.

Amber Beads Again.

Once more in favor are these glistening, gleaming yellow beads which since the time of our grandmothers have been worn as necklaces.

With the collarless blouses and the lingerie frocks, with their low necks, neck ornaments are especially fashionable, and this gives added opportunity for the wearing of this pretty old-fashioned bead.

All sizes are worn, from the small pea-sized bead to the one large as a good-sized marble. And in the jewelers' shops one may purchase them by the string or by the dozen, in this latter way making it an one pleases.

Kohinoor Buttons in Favor.

Glass buttons big as the Kohinoor diamond, are the popular things now on women's tailored suits. They are cut just like the Kohinoor. They give an odd effect to dark suits. The buttons are worn of the sleeves also, and on the back of the coat. They glisten in the sun and attract attention.

Child's Dress.

If your little daughter has reached that age when her dresses, which were made early in the season, have become too short because she is "running up like a weed" you will find it necessary to let out the hems in the skirts.

Do this when the dress is ready for the tub and not after it has been freshly laundered.

A good way to do is to lower the hem half its width, stitching the hem in again where the crease of the former lower edge is marked. Then when it is washed and ironed there will be no unsightly dark mark on the hem [illegible]

Next, a notebook; a watch, or a pocket sundial; if a watch, not a striker, for that warns the wicked you have cash; a broad-rimmed hat, gaiters, boots, breeches (as if his friends would let him start without any!), gloves, shoes, shirts, handkerchiefs, etc."

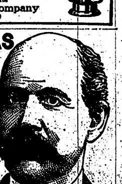
CAUTION [illegible]



WOMEN TO VOTE IN 1912

Equal Suffrage May Be Factor in Presidential Election

Matter Which Chairmen of National Committees Will Be Called Upon to Consider—Some of the Laws for Which Women Are Responsible, Attributed Directly to Their Vote and Influence.

WASHINGTON.—Almost 1,000,000 women will be eligible to vote for their choice for president of the United States in 1912. Those women are to be found in the six western states which have already granted equal suffrage, the number of women in each state who are eligible to vote being about as follows: California, 500,000; Colorado, 160,000; Idaho, 48,000, Utah, 65,000; Washington, 120,000, and Wyoming, 35,000, or a total of 928,000.

Those figures are not exact, but constitute the best possible estimate until such time as the census bureau gets out its figures showing the analysis of the population by states. It is possible that before the election in 1912 more states may give the women a chance to vote for the presidential candidates, as the equal suffrage campaigners have such states as Nevada, Oregon, Kansas and Wisconsin marked as trembling in the balance on the suffrage question.

There are in the United States today just 19 states which have no form of suffrage for women, although some cities in them have. Those states are Nevada, Texas, Missouri, Arkansas, Mississippi, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Maine.

On October 12 last California joined the states granting equal suffrage to women, the vote on that occasion being 119,086 for and 117,408 against the measure, or a majority of 1678 for equal suffrage, with some minor towns to hear from. California had rejected the proposition in 1896, Oregon and several of the other western states have several times rejected the amendment, and Massachusetts in 1895 voted on the question and refused equal suffrage, the vote in this state at that time being: Yes, 109,204; No, 187,840, or 78,636 majority against equal suffrage. Since then the question has not been brought to the referendum in this commonwealth.

In the western states the question has come before the voters quite regularly, for, according to some of the opponents of the equal suffrage in that section of the country, "a 'yes' vote settles the matter and a 'no' vote simply means the question comes up again in a couple of years."

Kentucky Pointed the Way.

Kentucky was the first state in this country to give women the right to vote. In 1838 that state gave the school suffrage to widows with children of school age, and in 1861 Kansas gave the school suffrage to all women. Year by year from then on the movement for woman's suffrage gained strength throughout the country, but it was always granted in modified form as the right to vote on school matters, local tax questions, municipal suffrage, etc. In 1869 Wyoming gave the full suffrage to women, being the first state in the country to do so.

School suffrage was granted to the women of New Hampshire in 1878, by Massachusetts in 1879, by Connecticut in 1893 and Vermont in 1880. In addition to the six states in this country which have given the full suffrage to women, there are many countries which have given a modified form of suffrage to women and full suffrage has been granted the women by the Isle of Man, New Zealand, South Australia, West Australia, and in 1902 full suffrage was granted the women of Federated Australia and New South Wales.

In Utah the reports show that 75 per cent of the women voted in Bear River, 95 per cent voted in Garden City, 95 per cent voted in Grouse Creek, 90 per cent voted in Keysville, 90 per cent voted in Logan and 90 per cent voted in Nephi.

In Kansas the reports from these same sources show that 80 per cent voted as Eskridge and 80 per cent voted at Miltonvale.

Seem to Prize Vote.

In Wyoming the reports state that the women voted as strongly in proportion to registration as did the males, if not to a larger extent. In Denver, Colo., in the election of 1909, no less than 30,000 women voted and only about 500 of that number were classified as vicious women. In other words, in that Denver election 43 per cent of the vote was cast by women and only 40 per cent of the vote was cast by males.

Both houses of the National Parliament of Federated Australia for the session of 1909-10 passed a resolution saying that after 66 years of woman's suffrage in varying parts of the country and nine years as a commonwealth, the reform has justified the hopes of its supporters.

Relative to the percentage of women voting in the states where they have that right, the woman's suffrage organizations point out that men do not exercise their right to vote as they should, and that, therefore, the question as to women doing so is not very material.

They point out that in the presidential election of 1904, the vote cast was only 13,961,560, while 21,000,000 men were eligible to vote. Then again, they say that in the city election in Philadelphia, in 1903, the Reform party reports that 49 per cent of the men failed to vote, and that in the same year in the election in New York city 60,000 registered voters failed to cast their ballots.

Their Choice of Political Offices.

In the states where full suffrage has been granted to women for some time experience has shown that women do not to any great extent run for political office. Going through the records of those states it will appear that, for the most part, women have been candidates for educational positions and for the office of county or state treasurer. Those are the two classes of offices which they seem to have singled out as being most desirable from their standpoint, and to which they have been most generally elected.

In several of the states giving full equal suffrage women have sat on juries and have done acceptable service, but there are no statistics available to show the number who have done such duty.

Laws Women Have Helped to Make.

The male mind naturally inquires as to what laws the women in the equal suffrage states have been responsible for? For this question the women's suffrage organizations have evidently primed themselves. Here are some of the laws adopted in the equal suffrage states since women had the right to vote, which they maintain have been championed by women, and that women are practically responsible.

Colorado gave equal suffrage in 1893, and since that time the women claim responsibility for securing the passage of laws forbidding the insurance of children under ten years old; establishing a state home for dependent children, with two of the five members of its trustees to be women; statute requiring three out of the six county visitors to be women; establishing a state industrial home for girls, three of the five trustees to be women; statute making women equal guardians of their children; statute raising the age of protection for girls to 18 years; requiring one woman on the board of the State Insane asylum; establishing parental or truant schools, providing for the care of the feeble minded; providing for tree preservation; requiring public school teachers to teach humanity to animals; making the Humane society a state bureau of child and animal protection; establishment of juvenile courts; compulsory education; establishing state traveling libraries, commission of five women; against the employment of child labor in mines; providing accident and foreign life insurance companies that have to be sued be made to pay the costs; restricting hours of labor for children, and for women; free employment bureaus; making it a misdemeanor to neglect to support aged or infirm parents; abolishing system binding out girls of the industrial school; and in Denver other beneficial legislation has been secured by them.

Work of Women in Idaho.

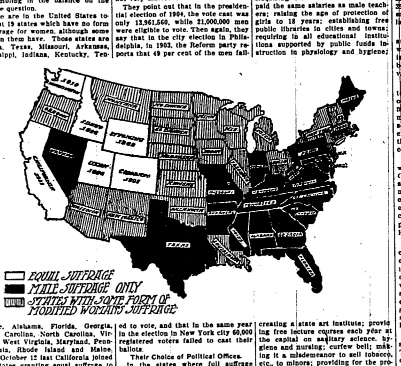
Idaho gave equal suffrage in 1896. Since then women claim to have been instrumental in securing these laws. Making gambling illegal; raising the age of protection for girls to 18 years; establishment of libraries and reading rooms; requiring 3 per cent of the school funds to be expended for school libraries, the books to be chosen by the State Board of Education; establishing the State Library commission; providing for a department of domestic science in the State university; providing for a course of domestic science in the Academy of Idaho; establishment of the industrial reform school; pure food act; statute giving married women the same right to dispose of her property as men.

Utah gave full suffrage to women in 1896. Since then the women claim these laws as a result of their efforts: Requiring that women teachers be paid the same salaries as male teachers; raising the age of protection of girls to 18 years; establishing free public libraries in cities and towns; requiring in all educational institutions supported by public funds instruction in physiology and hygiene; creating a state art institute; providing free lecture courses each year at the capital on sanitary science, hygiene and nursing; curfew bell; making it a misdemeanor to sell tobacco, etc., to minors; providing for the protection of dependent boys under 14 and girls under 16 years and the punishment of persons responsible for their care, neglect or ill-treatment; requiring the establishment of kindergartens in all school districts of a population of 2,000 or more.

Record in Wyoming.

Wyoming gave equal suffrage in 1869. These laws made since that time women claim chief responsibility for: Equal pay for men and women teachers; raising the age of protection for girls to 18 years; making child neglect, abuse, etc., punishable; forbidding the employment of boys under 14 and girls of any age in the mines; forbidding the employment of children under 14 years in any public exhibition.

In ten years of equal suffrage in Colorado only one woman has been convicted of illegal voting. Relative to the intelligence of women as voters the equal suffrage organizations point out that the 1907 report of the National Educational commission says 54,183 girls were graduated from the public high schools as compared to 33,202 boys from the same schools and there were 116,841 more girls than boys in the public high schools.



AFTER NIGHTFALL IN LONDON

The Lid Is On, but There Are Ways to Lift It—Public Balls, Popular Functions.

Some Americans who don't like the early closing law in London are fortunate enough perhaps to get taken to one of the better theatrical clubs, where they don't have theatrical clubs, early as do the restaurants and the hotels, but more perhaps make the acquaintance of a little club in a street near Piccadilly Circus, where the membership is made up of men and women who are supposed to be vaudeville artists.

There are lots of people who go there who are not vaudeville artists. For instance, a visitor who was taken there one night last summer found himself seated next to a wealthy young German, who is a steel manufacturer, and across the table was another German, who was only theatrical by association. You can enjoy a short term membership if you want, and if you enjoy drinking beer in a stuffy room that is filled with smoke you can have a good time.

Supper clubs of the old type do not exist in London nowadays, at least so far as is known to the police, who raided them out of existence during a moral wave. But there is the Grafton Galleries, where frequent balls are held, and practically every Sunday night there is a dance there. To have a public ball and remain open after the legal closing hour a hotel must pay heavily for a special license, but during the season and out there is occasionally such an event at the Savoy, where for a guinea per head you may go and have supper at the end, with wine extra.

There was one in the early part of last summer, for instance, which was called "The Variety Artists' Ball," the name, it was explained by an American, being assumed for the occasion, because few of those in attendance were on the stage. The American who paid his guinea and went downstairs to the ballroom—some things are upside down in London—found a lot of other Americans there, some of whom lived in London and others who had been fellow passengers, and as every other piece played was two-step, the occasion seemed almost homelike.

One hears more about the Covent Garden balls than of any other public function in London. These take place with considerable frequency throughout the autumn and winter and are assembling places for the gay youth of London and such similarly disposed visitors as may be there. One is supposed to go masked, and prizes are offered for handsome costumes. The "gayety" is apt to appeal to the average American visitor as funereal.

Like Homicidal Mania.

"A man who has once murdered the queen's English always feels as if he'd got the body under the sofa. It's like homicidal mania; the poor wretch may be cured, but he lives in terror of an attack returning. He knows it doesn't matter what he is or what he does; he may live like a saint or write like an arch-angel; but one stitch omitted from his conversation will wreck him at the last." [illegible]

In Minnesota.

Important Happenings of the Week Briefly Told.

Lakefield.—The Globe flour mills, that were recently destroyed by fire are to be rebuilt at once.

Royalton.—The Farmers' and Merchants' State bank officers are: President, A. R. Davidson; vice president, J. K. Martin, and cashier, A. A. Fitch.

Paynesville.—Paynesville presents a decidedly busy appearance. In addition to the $40,000 school building five residences are in process of erection.

Grass Valley, California. — H. R. Titus, a prominent lumberman of Duluth, died at Downieville, following an attack of pneumonia. He had been ill but two days.

Fairmont.—There is a very good prospect that Fairmont will have a first-class hospital in operation before long under the management of the Catholic Sisters.

Albert.—A fine parochial school house, costing in the neighborhood of $30,000, is just being completed here. It is a thoroughly modern building and has four large rooms.

Hastings. — Charles McDermott, grandson of A. F. Hotinger, who lost his life of asphyxiation, also died, being overcome by gas fumes of a coal stove. He was 18 years old.

Pipestone. — The business men of Pipestone have petitioned the railway and warehouse commission to compel the Milwaukee road to continue its present night passenger train through Pipestone.

Crookston.—Fire in the basement of the Emporium Dry Goods store, owned by C. C. Peterson, caused $10,000 loss. A cigar stub thrown through the basement window was the cause of the fire, it is alleged.

Minneapolis.—Charles A. Bovey, one of the wealthiest and best known lumbermen in the United States, died here aged 79. Bovey was born at Bath, Me., and came to Minneapolis fifty years ago.

Duluth. — Ore shipments for October from the head of the lakes show a decrease for the period of 157,397 tons over October, 1910. The season to date is 6,958,666 tons behind last year's figures.

Red Wing. — Counterfeit quarters and 50-cent pieces have been given wide circulation in Red Wing and it is estimated that fully $100 of the bogus money has been passed in the various business houses of the city.

St. Paul.—Sixty wild ducks, mostly teal and blue bills, have reached the office of the state game and fish commission in the capitol, creating excitement among the officials. They were seized by a game warden from a hunter at Forest Lake. He had more than the law allows and his whole bag was confiscated.

Luverne.—The annual corn contest was held here Saturday with Professor C. P. Bull, of the state agricultural school, acting as judge. There were many entries for the prizes and much enthusiasm. Nine prizes were awarded for the best corn raised in Rock county. Ray Hinds received first prize, W. J. Johnson second and J. H. Wulf third.

Duluth.—A. Delacey Wood, the veteran newspaper editor and the founder of 32 papers in the Northwest during his picturesque and checkered career, died here of pneumonia. His wife and children, five daughters and a son, were at his bedside when the end came. The late Mr. Wood organized the Minnesota Editorial Association. He was president of the Lake County Old Settlers' Association.

Duluth.—The vessel rate for grain shipments experienced another slump. Tonnage was offered at one cent, a cut of one-quarter cent of the rate which prevailed last week. One vessel was chartered today at the one cent rate. Practically all the grain moved in the last week went from the Canadian head of the lakes and is for export. Lumber carriers are in demand and coal shipments are heavy. It is the opinion that the coal shipments for the season will surpass last season's figures by several thousand tons.

Elmore.—While playing the part of an Indian last night at the Hesseldahl home northeast of this place, Clarence Hesseldahl shot and killed Harry Blair, 20 years old, with a 32 caliber revolver. Blair during the last year had written a play which he thought he could put on the stage and it is through this that the accident happened, as they were practicing the Indian part of it. It is said by those present that Blair unloaded the revolver and gave it to Hesseldahl and armed himself with a rifle. When the moment came for Hesseldahl to shoot he pulled the trigger on what he supposed was an empty revolver, but shot Blair through the chest. He walked twice across the floor and dropped, and in less than five minutes was dead.

Ends Life Beside Bride.

Fergus Falls.—Coroner Vigen was called to Pelican Rapids to investigate the death of Lewis Felber, who had committed suicide. Felber was about 22 years old and was married about a month ago. He has been rather unfortunate financially of late. He had talked of suicide, but no one took the talk seriously. Monday morning he awoke his young wife and asked her to say nothing. Almost immediately afterwards he went into convulsions and died in a short time. He had taken carbolic acid.

McKenzie Seeks Terminals.

Duluth.—Sir William McKenzie, president of the Canadian Northern road, was at Virginia inspecting the company's new improvements there and planning further work. Sir William will arrive in Duluth tomorrow afternoon in his special train and will spend several hours here. He will confer with city officials concerning the development of the company's terminals at this point. It is expected he will meet several foreign capitalists [illegible]

TENNIS CHANGES IN ENGLAND

Lawns Gradually Being Replaced by Hard Surface Courts in Vogue Elsewhere—Experience Wins.

"Go it, baldhead!" was a cry frequently heard at the recent lawn tennis tournament at Wimbledon, and a spectator could not help observing that gray hairs and bald heads outnumbered the locks of youth among the players after the first day or two. Yet lawn tennis is an athletic game, perhaps the most active of all summer pastimes, demanding unusual powers of endurance, and one looks for endurance and agility in the young.

Finding that the daring and physical strength of youth are beaten by the experience of age, the conclusion to be drawn is that the new generation is not learning the essentials of the game. The group of veterans who beat the youngsters this year cannot be expected to do these wonders again. Young men from other countries will come again and they will win because there will be no opposition to prevent them from doing so. And why? Because, some critics say, the continent has learned the game from professionals and has learned it upon hard courts.

There is a freedom and power in the foreign style which is absent from the English game, in which few risks are taken. In all probability this springs from the fact that the typical courts of the continent are not grass, but have a hard, smooth surface from which every ball makes a true bound. Scarcely one grass court in ten can be relied upon for a true bound of the ball. On such inferior surfaces style becomes cramped. First-class players are not to be trained upon third rate courts.

The best promise for English lawn tennis is the fact that the clubs are losing their faith in grass. In 20 years' time the very name of lawn tennis may appear strange to our ears, the number of actual lawns devoted to the game will have become so small. Already hard courts are being constructed in every direction. In a few years they will probably give England a new school of tennis players who will meet on equal terms the best products of the continental and American clubs.

MAR FOOTBALL GAMES

Right to Question Decisions Belongs to Captain.

Nothing Is More Repulsive to Spectators Than Constant Squabbles Between Competitors and Officials During Contest.

In football as well as in every branch of sport, nothing is more repulsive to spectators than constant squabbles between competitors and officials.

To question the decision of judges at a horserace, or a footrace, automobile, or trotting race simple is a waste of time, and these decisions cannot be reversed unless there is a wrong interpretation of rules which govern such contests.

If coaches would enforce a rule that only captains of elevens could question or ask an interpretation of an official's decision football certainly would be placed on a higher plane and one of the most distasteful features of the game so far as the spectators are concerned would be obliterated, writes Walter Eckersall in the Chicago Tribune. Football officials are selected because of their known impartiality, their thorough knowledge of the rules, and their sense of honor.

The men, all college graduates, officiating in gridiron contests this year have been put to many severe tests, and in few instances have they erred. Spectators never should condemn an official for levying a penalty, for the arbiters of the game are in better position and understand more thoroughly the exact interpretations of the rules. Use of hands in the interference, coaching from the side lines, holding in the line, offside play, and a number of other infringements of the rules are points which the average spectator does not see, but when an official inflicts penalties for such breaches of the rules he generally meets with criticism from the stands.

Those who have played football and have been in many hard fought contests have had fouls called when they did not believe they were guilty of any infringement. In such cases, these players have been so carried away with the excitement of the contests as to be unconscious of any breaches in the rules they made, but when apprised of the conditions by officials they have admitted their guilt.

In the large universities, where it is part of the preparation of an eleven to teach the players the rules and their possibilities, the players seldom question an official's decision. The members of these teams are so well versed in the rules as to know when an arbiter's decision is right or wrong and for this reason few disputes arise.

If the colleges in the eastern, western, and Missouri valley conferences would follow the precedent established at West Point, one of the most distasteful features of football would be done away with. Discipline reigns supreme at the army institution. The captain of a football team controls his men the same as a colonel of a regiment or captain of a company. If any member of a West Point football eleven questions the orders of the captain he must report to higher officials as soon as the same is completed if the captain files charges.

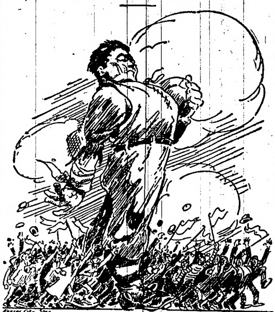
AFTER THE VICTORY



STRIPES FOR BIG TRUST MAGNATES

BILL TO BE INTRODUCED INTO HOUSE BY REPRESENTATIVE HENRY OF TEXAS.

STRENGTHENS THE SHERMAN LAW

Solon Declares Measure Legislates Supreme Court's "Rule of Reason" Out of Existence.

Washington, Nov. 16.—"Felon's stripes" as a punishment for "trust criminals" in the United States to end "commercial piracy under benevolent 'rules of reason'" are proposed in a bill amending the Sherman anti-trust law drafted by Representative Henry of Texas to be introduced in the house upon the opening of congress next month. Its introduction probably will mean its passage in the house. The bill specifically defines just what constitutes a trust, legislates from the present statute the "rule of reason" as interpreted by the supreme court in the Standard Oil and Tobacco decisions and provides as punishment for violation of the law imprisonment from two to ten years in the penitentiary. It will be referred to the judiciary committee.

Representative Henry, who has been conferring with Representative Clayton of Alabama, chairman of the committee, and other Democratic leaders, completed the draft of the proposed changes in the much discussed statute. Representative Henry declared that actual imprisonment of great industrial offenders was essential to a cure for the trust evil, and that a law, to be rigid, must of necessity define a trust to leave no room for controversy.

"My bill," said Mr Henry, "nullifies the alterations written into the Sherman act by the unwarranted and purely legislative decision of the supreme court in the Standard Oil and Tobacco trust cases last spring. That is, the bill legislates the 'rule of reason' out of the law, and it defines specifically what a trust is. It makes the violation of this law a felony with imprisonment for not less than two years, nor more than ten years.

"Fines and dissolution seem to be child's play for the trust magnates. Felon's stripes, where the violation is knowingly or wilfully done, will prove a potential remedy for these flagrant acts of commercial outlaws."

Democratic leaders will confer on the bill as soon as the members assemble late this month, and it is their purpose to make the bill one of the foremost on the legislative program for the regular session.

Minneapolis, Nov. 16.—H. N. Leighton & Co. have been awarded the contract for the construction of the new postoffice in this city. The company's bid was $565,537. Specifications for the postoffice, said Mr. Leighton, calls for a building to be constructed of gray granite. It will require about two years to finish the structure.

County Employes Are Killed.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 16.—For two deaths resulting from an accident an hour after the supreme court handed down a decision affirming the constitutionality of the workmen's compensation act, La Crosse county is liable for $3,000 damages in each case. The two men were killed at the country farm school while making repairs, in the employ of the county. The new law makes all official bodies responsible for injuries to workmen without the optional provision made in the case of corporations.

"I follow[illegible] the trial and, as it[illegible]re developed, [illegible] so cruel and malicious should have occurred within the confines of this state. In the decision of every question which was presented to the able and impartial judge who presided at the trial, he was careful to give the benefit of every reasonable doubt to the prisoner; his instructions were as favorable as the counsel for the prisoner could have expected; that he did not err in the admission or exclusion of evidence, or in his instructions given to the jury, is shown in the refusal of the supreme court of appeals to grant a writ of error.

Affidavits Not Sufficient.

"In the administration of my office, I am required to see that the criminal laws are executed unless there shall be some facts or circumstances arising since the action of the court, or some important evidence existing but not presented to the court, tending to create in the mind of a reasonable man a substantial doubt as to the guilt of the prisoner. I do not think the affidavits of Paul Beattie, printed in the papers, or any other evidence or consideration brought to my attention, sufficient for that purpose.

"Nor do I question the wisdom, I might add, of the necessity of capital punishment in cases where human life has been wickedly and deliberately taken.

SANITARY DAIRY METHOD

CREAMERY MEN ATTEND AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Farmers Shown Proper Handling of Milk and Care of Milch Cows.

The proper care of milk in the dairies, and the most sanitary methods of handling it in the creameries will be emphasized in the short course for dairymen and creamery men at the state agricultural college, which begins this week, acording to Professor T. L. Haecker, who has charge of the course. Most of the students in this course are the young men who are engaged in the management of creameries throughout the state.

"We aim to educate these young creamery managers so they will not only be able to take good care of the milk and cream, but so they may be in a position to instruct the farmers in the proper care of cows. The students who have taken up the work here in previous years have been very successfull in this capacity in their respective communities.

"The course which we offer only lasts about five weeks, and is too short to allow the students to master the bacteria testing process. We feel that it is more important to impress them with the value of pure milk. They are given a lecture course, dealing with bacteria, in which lantern slides are used, showing the effects of carelessness and unscientific methods in handling the dairy products. They have to leave the testing of the milk for bacteria to experts, but we can train them to test for butter fat, to determine whether any cream has been taken from the milk and to tell if it has been diluted in any way.

Instructed In Diseases.

"The veterinary department offers a course instructing the students in the more common diseases of cattle, and they are taught the scientific methods of selecting and feeding. This work is intended to make the creamery men helpful to the farmers of communities who have not had a chance to study scientific dairying.

"They are instructed in heating, plumbing and ventilating creameries by the engineering department. Most of the instruction is given by graduates of this same course who are now employed as creamery inspectors throughout the state.

"Minnesota has taken the first prize in butter making eight times out of ten in the 20 years that the biennial butter show has been going on, and one of the times they lost, the prize went to one of our graduates. In my opinion, this is because of the course in creamery management, which tends to produce better and purer dairy products all over the state."

WEDDING FOLLOWS ELOPEMENT.

Sauk Center Father Has Lover Arrested, But Repents In Court.

Sauk Center. — In municipal court Barbara Ebensteiner, daughter of Joe Ebensteiner of this city, was married. The wedding was the sequel of an elopement. The girl is 16 years old and eloped with John Tew of Sisseton, S. D., Friday, going to Morris, where Tew was arrested on a warrant sworn out by the girl's father, charging the abduction of a minor. Ebensteiner's wife some months ago went to Sisseton. She took Barbara with her. There the girl met Tew and the two fell in love. It was the mother's wish that they marry. Mrs. Ebensteiner died and Barbara returned to Sauk Center and has been here since with her father. The latter opposed the marriage. The elopement resulted. Matters were explained in court, the charge dismissed, the case withdrawn, a marriage license obtained and Judge Dean married the pair. They left for Sisseton, where they will live.

KOOCHICHING SALE.

8,575 Acres Sold to Farmers and Minneapolis and St. Paul Investors.

International Falls.—The best sale of state land in Koochiching county was held by State Auditor Iverson and Sales Manager Nelson. About three hundred persons attended. Mr. Iverson outlined the policy which has been followed by the state for fifty years in the sale of its land and timber and showed that ultimately a fund of $200,000,000 would be held in trust for the benefit of the schools because of this wise policy. He also spoke of the interest that is being taken by the state in its vast properties in the northern counties and prophesied for this and adjoining counties rapid development.

He also said that when the legislature met he believed generous appropriations would be made for drainage in this county. He read a letter from the Commercial club of International Falls asking that school section 16 in township 70, range 24, be withdrawn from the market and that the new farm experimental school that had been suggested for this county be located on this section. Mr. Iverson said it would give him pleasure to withdraw this section and he was pleased to know that the Commercial club was taking such a lively interest in this important matter,

The sale then began and was carried on with lively interest until about 8,575 acres had been sold. Much of the land was sold to settlers around Big Falls. The land drained by the state ditch dug by Elzy & Son of St. Paul, two years ago was in strong demand. Before the digging of this ditch this vast area of state land was an impassable swamp; now it is so dry and solid that teams are driven across it.

Practicaly all of the land sold yesterday went into the hands of either actual settlers or to those who are making plans to clear and cultivate a goodly portion of each tract before offering it for sale to others.

Men from Minneapolis and St. Paul, L. L. Enger, Dr. Dunsmore, Roy S. Brubaker, W. E. Kirkwood and others bought good-sized tracts. There were also some tracts sold to farmers in Michigan. General Manager W. H. Gemmell of the M. & I. railroad, also purchased land for his personal use and some for the railway to experiment with.

This is the last sale of state lands advertised for this county this year, and it is believed that before the sales begin next spring there will be such an increased development that the average sale price will be increased.

Catherwood, Mrs. Arthur W. Wright, Mrs. Roy Holmes and Mrs. C. A. Negge. Under their direction the city will be divided into small sections and canvassed by other efficient chairman. Five thousand tags have been made ready. Three years ago a tag day was launched here, the fund gathered at that time providing a finely equipped ambulance.

MOTHER MAY RECOVER HOME

BUT LEGISLATIVE ACTION WILL BE NECESSARY.

Wisconsin Woman Surrendered Dwelling as Bail for Burglar Boy Who Fled.

Milwaukee, Nov. 16.—The machinery of the state legislature must be set in motion in order that the home of Mrs. Mary Brown, a charwoman, working in the Northwestern depot, may be saved, after she surrenders it to procure liberty for her burglar son. Joseph Brown robbed the University club while working as a waiter. He was arrested and confessed. When bail was fixed at $1,000, the mother mortgaged her home and appeared ta the jail with the money. Brown was released, disappeared and after a year the bail was declared forfeited.

After being a fugitive two years, Brown heard through a friend, that the mortgage was due and his mother was to be turned out of her home. He sent word to the sheriff that he was coming back and asked him to see that the mortgage was paid. He walked into the sheriff's office a few days later and gave himself up. He went into court, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to three years in the house of correction, which is situated a few blocks from his mother's home.

The court ordered the return of the bail money, but the county clerk had remitted it to the state a year ago. District Attorney Zabel and Brown's lawyer volunteered to get the money and sent the records in the case to Attorney Bancroft. An opinion was received from that official that the state cannot return the money and that an act of the legislature is necessary.

A bill is being prepared by the district attorney, and with the mortgage extended to cover the period of waiting, the mother will wait in her home for the release of her son. Brown is 22, and a young woman who was accused of aiding in the robbery and was later exonerated, will stand by him also.

Chicago Grain Market.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—In view of statements showing the export surplus in the United States to be 53,000,000 bushels less than at the corresponding time a year ago, the wheat market today gave evidence of decided strength. In addition signs pointed to smaller receipts both at winter wheat centers and in the Northwest.

Light arrivals at Liverpool and predictions of rainy weather adverse to harvesting in the northern portion of Argentine helped add to bullish sentiment. The opening was ⅛ to ⅛@¼c higher. May started at $1.00⅛ to $1.00¼, a gain of ⅛@¼ to ⅜, but later reacted to 99⅞c.

The market soon rallied owing to rains in Argentine. The close, however, was easy with May at 99⅞c@$1.00, a gain of ⅛c net.

Meager stocks and small receipts made corn firm. Furthermore cables were against the bears. May opened a shade to ⅛c up at 65@65⅛ to 65¼c, and afterward slipped back to 64⅞@65⅛c.

Profit taking held prices down. The close was weak at 64⅞c, a net loss of ⅛c.

This apparently could result only from external pressure. The engineer in charge and the other officers are maintaining reticence but the discovery [illegible]

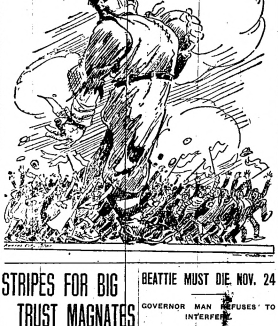
AFTER THE VICTORY



STRIPES FOR BIG TRUST MAGNATES

BILL TO BE INTRODUCED INTO HOUSE BY REPRESENTATIVE HENRY OF TEXAS.

STRENGTHENS THE SHERMAN LAW

Solon Declares Measure Legislates Supreme Court's "Rule of Reason" Out of Existence.

Washington, Nov. 16.—"Felon's stripes" as a punishment for "trust criminals" in the United States to end "commercial piracy under benevolent 'rules of reason'" are proposed in a bill amending the Sherman anti-trust law drafted by Representative Henry of Texas to be introduced in the house upon the opening of congress next month. Its introduction probably will mean its passage in the house. The bill specifically defines just what constitutes a trust, legislates from the present statute the "rule of reason" as interpreted by the supreme court in the Standard Oil and Tobacco decisions and provides as punishment for violation of the law imprisonment from two to ten years in the penitentiary. It will be referred to the judiciary committee.

Representative Henry, who has been conferring with Representative Clayton of Alabama, chairman of the committee, and other Democratic leaders, completed the draft of the proposed changes in the much discussed statute. Representative Henry declared that actual imprisonment of great industrial offenders was essential to a cure for the trust evil, and that a law, to be rigid, must of necessity define a trust to leave no room for controversy.

"My bill," said Mr Henry, "nullifies the alterations written into the Sherman act by the unwarranted and purely legislative decision of the supreme court in the Standard Oil and Tobacco trust cases last spring. That is, the bill legislates 'the 'rule of reason' out of the law, and it defines specifically what a trust is. It makes the violation of this law a felony with imprisonment for not less than two years, nor more than ten years.

"Fines and dissolution seem to be child's play for the trust magnates. Felon's stripes, where the violation is knowingly or wilfully done, will prove a potential remedy for these flagrant acts of commercial outlaws."

Democratic leaders will confer on the bill as soon as the members assemble late this month, and it is their purpose to make the bill one of the foremost on the legislative program for the regular session.

BEATTIE MUST DIE NOV. 24

GOVERNOR MAN REFUSES TO INTERFERE.

Fake Affidavit of Paul Beattie Fails to Influence Executive.

Richmond, Nov. 16.—Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., will die in the electric chair, on Nov. 24, for the murder of his young wife, Louise Owen Beattie. The next to the last chapter in the sensational murder case was enacted when Governor Mann refused to interfere.

"I believe Beattie is guilty of the cruel and malicious murder of his young wife," said Governor Mann in his decision, in which he dwelt upon the fact that Judge Watson, in the trial at Chesterfield, gave the prisoner every advantage in all his rulings.

"I followed the testimony during the trial and, as its details were developed, regretted that a crime so cruel and malicious should have occurred within the confines of this state. In the decision of every question which was presented to the able and impartial judge who presided at the trial, he was careful to give the benefit of every reasonable doubt to the prisoner; his instructions were as favorable as the counsel for the prisoner could have expected; that he did not err in the admission or exclusion of evidence, or in his instructions given to the jury, is shown in the refusal of the supreme court of appeals to grant a writ of error.

Affidavits Not Sufficient.

"In the administration of my office, I am required to see that the criminal laws are executed unless there shall be some facts or circumstances arising since the action of the court, or some important evidence existing but not presented to the court, tending to create in the mind of a reasonable man a substantial doubt as to the guilt of the prisoner. I do not think the affidavits of Paul Beattie, printed in the papers, or any other evidence or consideration brought to my attention, sufficient for that purpose.

"Nor do I question the wisdom, I might add, of the necessity of capital punishment in cases where human life has been wickedly and deliberately taken."

PICKERING IS WITHDRAWN.

Minnesota Captain Will Not Play Against Wisconsin.

Minneapolis, Nov. 16.—Captain Earle Pickering will not play in Saturday's game against Wisconsin. Minnesota's committee on eligibility met and after long deliberation issued a statement withdrawing Pickering from the game and making counter charges of professionalism against four of the Wisconsin players, Moll, Mackmiller, Tandberg and Hoeffel. The game may be called off.

CHRIST WON'T COME TO ZION.

If He Is Compelled to Walk On Cement Sidewalk.

Zion City, Ill., Nov. 16. — Rupert Devereux, a member of the old Dowie faction in Zion City, filed a petition with the Zion City board of aldermen objecting to the proposed construction of cement sidewalks here on the ground that Christ never walked on cement and therefore "would avoid Zion City on the Savior's approaching second coming to earth."

Minneapolis Postoffice Contract.

Minneapolis, Nov. 16.—H. N. Leighton & Co. have been awarded the contract for the construction of the new postoffice in this city. The company's bid was $565,537. Mr. Leighton said that he expected to commence work as soon as he received official notice from the treasury department that his bid had been accepted. Specifications for the postoffice, said Mr. Leighton, calls for a building to be constructed of gray granite. It will require about two years to finish the structure.

County Employes Are Killed.

La Crosse, Wis., Nov. 16.—For two deaths resulting from an accident an hour after the supreme court handed down a decision affirming the constitutionality of the workmen's compensation act, La Crosse county is liable for $3,000 damages in each case. The two men were killed at the country farm school while making repairs, in the employ of the county. The new law makes all official bodies responsible for injuries to workmen without the optional provision made in the case of corporations.

SANITARY DAIRY METHOD

CREAMERY MEN ATTEND AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Farmers Shown Proper Handling of Milk and Care of Milch Cows.

The proper care of milk in the dairies, and the most sanitary methods of handling it in the creameries will be emphasized in the short course for dairymen and creamery men at the state agricultural college, which begins this week, acording to Professor T. L. Haecker, who has charge of the course. Most of the students in this course are the young men who are engaged in the management of creameries throughout the state.

"We aim to educate these young creamery managers so they will not only be able to take good care of the milk and cream, but so they may be in a position to instruct the farmers in the proper care of cows. The students who have taken up the work here in previous years have been very successfull in this capacity in their respective communities.

"The course which we offer only lasts about five weeks, and is too short to allow the students to master the bacteria testing process. We feel that it is more important to impress them with the value of pure milk. They are given a lecture course, dealing with bacteria, in which lantern slides are used, showing the effects of carelessness and unscientific methods in handling the dairy products. They have to leave the testing of the milk for bacteria to experts, but we can train them to test for butter fat, to determine whether any cream has been taken from the milk and to tell if it has been diluted in any way.

Instructed In Diseases.

"The veterinary department offers a course instructing the students in the more common diseases of cattle, and they are taught the scientific methods of selecting and feeding. This work is intended to make the creamery men helpful to the farmers of communities who have not had a chance to study scientific dairying.

"They are instructed in heating, plumbing and ventilating creameries by the engineering department. Most of the instruction is given by graduates of this same course who are now employed as creamery inspectors throughout the state.

"Minnesota has taken the first prize in butter making eight times out of ten in the 20 years that the biennial butter show has been going on, and one of the times they lost, the prize went to one of our graduates. In my opinion, this is because of the course in creamery management, which tends to produce better and purer dairy products all over the state."

WEDDING FOLLOWS ELOPEMENT.

Sauk Center Father Has Lover Arrested, But Repents In Court.

Sauk Center. — In municipal court Barbara Ebensteiner, daughter of Joe Ebensteiner of this city, was married. The wedding was the sequel of an elopement. The girl is 16 years old and eloped with John Tew of Sisseton, S. D., Friday, going to Morris, where Tew was arrested on a warrant sworn out by the girl's father, charging the abduction of a minor. Ebensteiner's wife some months ago went to Sisseton. She took Barbara with her. There the girl met Tew and the two fell in love. It was the mother's wish that they marry. Mrs. Ebensteiner died and Barbara returned to Sauk Center and has been here since with her father. The latter opposed the marriage. The elopement resulted. Matters were explained in court, the charge dismissed, the case withdrawn, a marriage license obtained and Judge Dean married the pair. They left for Sisseton, where they will live.

FOSSTON MAN FROZEN.

Wanders In the Cold After Taking Daughter to Train.

Crookston.—Ole Halverson, aged 66, was found frozen stiff a half mile from Fosston. He had been missing since he walked with his daughter to Fosston, but a mile distant. The daughter, Mrs. K. K. Austin, took the train for her home at Thief River Falls, and the old gentleman at first was thought to have accompanied her. Inquiry showed he had not done so, and a search revealed his body.

DISSIPATION ENDS IN SUICIDE.

Man's Body Found Hanging From Tree at Cloquet.

Cloquet.—Men traveling through the woods northeast of Cloquet, near the boom house, found the body of Victor Lund hanging from the limb of a tree. He had probably been dead for several days. He had spent the last few weeks in dissipation and had lately been subject to fits of despondency.

THINK VICTIM WAS "DOPED."

Choral Found In Stomach of Man Killed at East Grand Forks.

East Grand Forks. — Thirty grains of chloral hydrate were found in the stomach of Ole Kjormoe of Ronneby, the East Grand Forks murder victim. This gives authorities a new lead and shows that Kjormoe had been given "knockout" drops before he received the blows on the head, which were at first supposed to have been the cause of death.

KOOCHICHING SALE.

8,575 Acres Sold to Farmers and Minneapolis and St. Paul Investors.

International Falls.—The best sale of state land in Koochiching county was held by State Auditor Iverson and Sales Manager Nelson. About three hundred persons attended. Mr. Iverson outlined the policy which has been followed by the state for fifty years in the sale of its land and timber and showed that ultimately a fund of $200,000,000 would be held in trust for the benefit of the schools because of this wise policy. He also spoke of the interest that is being taken by the state in its vast properties in the northern counties and prophesied for this and adjoining counties rapid development.

He also said that when the legislature met he believed generous appropriations would be made for drainage in this county. He read a letter from the Commercial club of International Falls asking that school section 16 in township 70, range 24, be withdrawn from the market and that the new farm experimental school that had been suggested for this county be located on this section. Mr. Iverson said it would give him pleasure to withdraw this section and he was pleased to know that the Commercial club was taking such a lively interest in this important matter.

The sale then began and was carried on with lively interest until about 8,575 acres had been sold. Much of the land was sold to settlers around Big Falls. The land drained by the state ditch dug by Elzy & Son of St. Paul, two years ago was in strong demand. Before the digging of this ditch this vast area of state land was an impassable swamp; now it is so dry and solid that teams are driven across it.

Practicaly all of the land sold yesterday went into the hands of either actual settlers or to those who are making plans to clear and cultivate a goodly portion of each tract before offering it for sale to others.

Men from Minneapolis and St. Paul, L. L. Enger, Dr. Dunsmore, Roy S. Brubaker, W. E. Kirkwood and others bought good-sized tracts. There were also some tracts sold to farmers in Michigan. General Manager W. H. Gemmell of the M. & I. railroad, also purchased land for his personal use and some for the railway to experiment with.

This is the last sale of state lands advertised for this county this year, and it is believed that before the sales begin next spring there will be such an increased development that the average sale price will be increased.

AUSTIN TO HAVE TAG DAY.

Will Raise a Fund for Maintenance of Nurse on Saturday.

Austin.—Austin women are responding enthusiastically to the support of a visiting nurse. The plan has passed the experimental stage, Miss Lowry having been employed here in that capacity several months. The fund that supported the work has been exhausted, and now to further the plan a tag day will be instituted—Saturday, Nov. 18. The joint chairmanship has been assumed by Mrs. S. D. Catherwood, Mrs. Arthur W. Wright, Mrs. Roy Holmes and Mrs. C. A. Negge. Under their direction the city will be divided into small sections and canvassed by other efficient chairman. Five thousand tags have been made ready. Three years ago a tag day was launched here, the fund gathered at that time providing a finely equipped ambulance.

FOR CLOSER UNION OF SCHOOLS

Chapman, Norsen and Others Hold Series of Meetings.

Sauk Center.—With County Superintendent W. A. Boerger presiding at the meetings, the school board has just completed a series of meetings in five districts. The object was to discuss association of schools. Consolidation is not sought, as it is not desired to close the districts schools, but merely to have the students who have completed the grade work in the rural schools made eligible for admission to the departmental work in the Sauk Center school, which has an agricultural department under the Putnam law. Professor Norsen of the Sauk Center agricultural department and Superintendent Aygarn of Sauk Center took part in the meetings.

TUCK'S HEALTH FAILS.

School for the Deaf Instructor Granted Leave of Absence.

Faribault.—Professor C. L. Tuck of the school for the deaf has been granted leave of absence owing to impaired health. He will fo to Niles, Mich., for a rest. He has just completed his thirtieth year as a teacher in the school. During this period he has never lost a day from the schoolroom on account of illness.

A change in division went into effect at the school Nov. 11. The squad of farm boys seven in number, who have been studying agriculture under Professor Sanford, have gone back to shop work and another squad has taken their place in the agricultural division.

ANOTHER DEER HUNTER KILLED.

Cloquet Man Shot to Death in Father's Presence.

Duluth. — Salen, aged twenty-one years, son of August Gustafson of Cloquet, was accidentally killed while hunting near Saginaw. He was hunting with his father at the time of the tragedy. Salen was standing on a stump overlooking a clearing and allowed his gun to hang down below his feet for a moment and in dragging it up, the hammer caught on a knot and the gun was discharged.

MOTHER MAY RECOVER HOME

BUT LEGISLATIVE ACTION WILL BE NECESSARY.

Wisconsin Woman Surrendered Dwelling as Bail for Burglar Boy Who Fled.

Milwaukee, Nov. 16.—The machinery of the state legislature must be set in motion in order that the home of Mrs. Mary Brown, a charwoman, working in the Northwestern depot, may be saved, after she surrenders it to procure liberty for her burglar son. Joseph Brown robbed the University club while working as a waiter. He was arrested and confessed. When bail was fixed at $1,000, the mother mortgaged her home and appeared to the jail with the money. Brown was released, disappeared and after a year the bail was declared forfeited.

After being a fugitive two years, Brown heard through a friend, that the mortgage was due and his mother was to be turned out of her home. He sent word to the sheriff that he was coming back and asked him to see that the mortgage was paid. He walked into the sheriff's office a few days later and gave himself up. He went into court, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to three years in the house of correction, which is situated a few blocks from his mother's home.

The court ordered the return of the bail money, but the county clerk had remitted it to the state a year ago. District Attorney Zabel and Brown's lawyer volunteered to get the money and sent the records in the case to Attorney Bancroft. An opinion was received from that official that the state cannot return the money and that an act of the legislature is necessary.

A bill is being prepared by the district attorney, and with the mortgage extended to cover the period of waiting, the mother will wait in her home for the release of her son. Brown is 22, and a young woman who was accused of aiding in the robbery and was later exonerated, will stand by him also.

SIENKIEWICZ IS INJURED.

Polish Author Shot While On Hunting Trip.

Vienna, Nov. 16.—Word from Lemberg says that Henry Sienkiewicz, author of "Quo Vadis," was shot while hunting pheasants. The shooting was done by a companion, who aimed at a pheasant. Some of the shot lodged in the novelist's forehead near the left eye, and his knee also was injured. He was taken to a hospital in Warsaw.

Chicago Grain Market.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—In view of statements showing the export surplus in the United States to be 53,000,000 bushels less than at the corresponding time a year ago, the wheat market today gave evidence of decided strength. In addition signs pointed to smaller receipts both at winter wheat centers and in the Northwest.

Light arrivals at Liverpool and predictions of rainy weather adverse to harvesting in the northern portion of Argentine helped add to bullish sentiment. The opening was ⅛ to ⅛@¼c higher. May started at $1.00⅛ to $1.00¼, a gain of ⅛@¼ to ⅜, but later reacted to 99⅞c.

The market soon rallied owing to rains in Argentine. The close, however, was easy with May at 99⅞c@$1.00, a gain of ⅛c net.

Meager stocks and small receipts made corn firm. Furthermore cables were against the bears. May opened a shade to ⅛c up at 65@65⅛ to 65¼c, and afterward slipped back to 64⅞@65⅛c.

Profit taking held prices down. The close was weak at 64⅞c, a net loss of ⅛c.

Realizing sales eased oats. The market on the whole, however, was fairly steady. December started a sixteenth to ⅛@¼c higher at 50⅛ to 50⅜c and then receded to 49⅞@50c.

Provisions advanced all around on disappointing receipts of hogs today and a disappointing count of yesterday's arrivals. Both proved less than expected. Initial sales were 2½@5 to 10c higher with May delivery $16.67½ for pork; $9.52½ for lard and $8.00 for Maine Blown Up From the Outside.

Havana, Nov. 16.—Exploration of the bottom of the Maine about 140 feet aft of the bow revealed a plate identified as forming a portion of the outer hull of the ship on the port side near the keel and under the magazines, as having been blown inward, the upper part being folded inward. This apparently could result only from external pressure. The engineer in charge and the other officers are maintaining reticence but the discovery is strongly confirmatory of the theory of an external explosion.

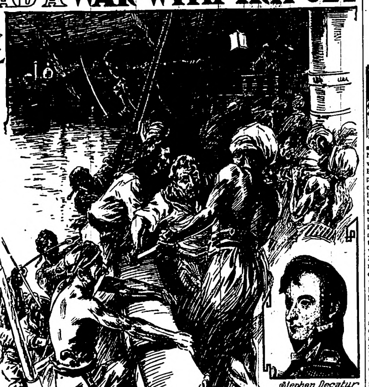
WHEN WE HAD A WAR WITH TRIPOLI

HOW STEPHEN DECATUR MADE HIS NAME IMMORTAL



Stephen Decatur

WHERE is Tripoli, anyway? What is it good for? Why does Italy want it? Nobody in America ever heard of Tripoli—except in a soon-to-be-forgotten geography lesson, or in the history of—where did Tripoli figure in that stupid old history we studied in the grammar school?

At about this point in the average man's series of mental gymnastics, the light begins to dawn. That scrimmage with Tripoli, he remembers, was recorded in the United States history, along between the chapters that treated of the revolution and those devoted to the war of 1812. One by one the names, Decatur, Preble, Somers, Bainbridge, Hunt, Truxtun, Sterrett, come flocking back into his memory, and a cold thrill of patriotic emotion creeps slowly up his spine. It was something great, something spectacular and heroic, the fine achievement of an infant navy. Slowly out of the mist of forgotten things comes the glorious tragedy of the fireship, "Intrepid"; the thunderous retort of Ambassador Pinckney, "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute," and finally the storm-center of the entire war, the American frigate, "Philadelphia."

In the centuries preceding the Christian era it was tossed from Carthage to Rome and back again, with many a lesser nation taking a whack at the oasis-dotted desert, between times. After the Arabs took possession in the seventh century it became the bone of contention among the nations of the eastern end of the Mediterranean, until its final capture by Turks, in the middle of the sixteenth century. However, this present menace is not the first to challenge the authority of Turkey in that turbulent little Barbary state. In 1714 the Turkish yoke was thrown off utterly, and it was not restored until 1835, several years after the extermination of the Barbary pirates, by the combined effort of all the Caucasian nations of the world.

"Barbary pirates," "corsairs of the Mediterranean," "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute." At last we have it. That was what it was all about. The bumptious little American nation objected to paying ransoms for her citizens and sailors, who had been captured and enslaved—a thing that Europe had been doing without protest for centuries. Indeed, it was tacitly understood that the pirates of Tunis, Tripoli, Morocco and Algiers were countenanced by the great powers of Europe for the sake of the injury they could do to the weaker powers. England encouraged the piratical attacks on the shipping of other nations, as a part of her system of securing and maintaining her vaunted "supremacy of the sea." The consuls she sent to the Barbary states went with instructions to make only a surface show of opposition to the merciless treatment to which the slaves were subjected. And there was a wonderful roster of those slaves, such men as Arago, the great astronomer; St. Vincent de Paul and even Cervantes, having fallen into the clutches of the pirates. The author of "Don Quixote" probably acquired something of the adventure that was to figure in his later literary works during the five years of his slavery in northern Africa. Coming closer to our own times and interests, the new station of the western hemisphere had not forgotten the indignities that had been heaped upon Dr. Daniel Mason, a Harvard graduate, who died in captivity, when the systematic capture of American brigs and schooners was undertaken by all the Barbary states, following the close of the revolution. With the connivance of England, eleven American vessels were captured within two months, the men being stripped of their clothing, attired in the filthiest of rags and set to work at hard labor. Those that attempted to escape were subjected to the most frightful torture. It was this condition of affairs, no less than the published pamphlet of Lord Sheffield, which announced, in part, "It will not be to the interest of any of the great maritime powers to protect them (the American vessels) from the Barbary states. The Americans cannot protect themselves from the latter; they cannot pretend to a navy," that spurred the ambitious young republic on until she not only pretended to a navy, but had given those same pirates such a drubbing as they had never received at the hands of any European power.

Meanwhile it seemed wisest to dig deep down in the American stocking and produce tremendous sums of money with which to appease the marauders. Under the direction of our greatest statesmen, with the notable exception of Thomas Jefferson, we had concluded treaties of "immunity from piratical capture" with all the Barbary states, the one with Tripoli being most cheaply purchased. It was when that state awoke to a realization that she had received only $56,000, while Tunis had extorted $107,000 as payment for "perpetual peace," that Tripoli forgot all about her treaty and began in earnest the capture and enslavement of Americans. There is a touch of grim humor in the demand of the "bey" of Algiers for 10,000 stands of arms, because a fire in the armory had destroyed 40,000 stands, and he considered it the duty of America to redeem one-fourth of the loss. Ambassador Eaton refused to convey the insulting and altogether preposterous demand to his home government, not only because America had nothing to do with the fire, but because she thought she had purchased immunity from such demands. The insolence of Tripoli was even more irritating to the new-born national pride of the republic, and when, in February, 1801, the pasha repudiated the treaty altogether, demanding a lump sum of a quarter of a million, with $20,000 annually, which was the sum he had extorted from Sweden, there seemed nothing left for the Americans but to fight it out. Our commerce in the Mediterranean was growing at such a pace that we could no longer take the attitude of cringing vassals to a set of unprincipled cutthroats, whose honor was bounded only by their convenience.

When the new tribute was refused the bey of Tripoli cut down the American flag staff and made formal declaration of war, having been duly informed that war was inevitable. Already a little squadron had been assembled in Hampton Roads, consisting of the President, the Essex, the Enterprise and the Philadelphia, the latter a frigate carrying thirty-six guns. These were followed by other war vessels, as fast as the youthful war department could provide them. More than two years went by, with only an occasional engagement, and absolutely no glory, when Commodore Preble was sent to take command. On the last day of October, 1803, a misfortune overtook the American forces that proved a temporarily disguised blessing. The Philadelphia, which had been doing police duty in the harbor, was caught in a heavy gale and blown upon a submerged mass of rock that had not been charted. Captain Bainbridge and all his force fell into the hands of the enemy, and two days later the frigate was floated off the reef and added to the Tripolitan navy—the largest and best fighting ship the pirates had ever possessed.

Bainbridge and his first lieutenant, David Porter, outlined and conveyed secretly to Commodore Preble a plan for snatching this prize from the enemy, and the commission was handed over to Stephen Decatur, then a young lieutenant of twenty-five, who volunteered to command the hazardous expedition. In the meantime, the Tripolitans had repaired the frigate, remounted her guns and anchored her in the harbor about a quarter of a mile from the bashaw's castle. While the daring plan was being developed a bit of luck dropped into the hand of the Americans. A Tripolitan "ketch," the mastico, bearing a load of handsome girls as a gift from the bashaw to sultan of Turkey, ran into the fleet as it lay anchored off the coast of Sicily. What became of the lovely maidens history refuses to relate. As for the "ketch," it was renamed the Intrepid and was assigned the duty of carrying the Americans who were to undertake the destruction of the Philadelphia.

The Siren, under Lieutenant Stewart, was ordered to escort the Intrepid as far as was deemed safe, and this doughty little vessel was repainted and rigged to look as much like a Maltese merchantman as possible. As for the Intrepid itself, it was a typical Tripolitan freighter, with ample cabin space, and the Turks in the harbor had not yet learned of the mastico's capture and the fate of her fair cargo. The place the ladies had occupied was filled with explosives and shells, for there was a double purpose in the minds of Preble and Decatur. There was no such thing then as a torpedo; but the fireship, or "infernal," as it was commonly called, was sometimes employed. It was Decatur's idea that if his expedition should prove a failure he could at least blow up his own ship and thereby wreck the Philadelphia. It would mean the almost certain death of every man on board; but that cost had been counted as a normal part of the desperately glorious game.

It was ten o'clock on the evening of the 16th of February, 1804, when the Intrepid, having left the Siren about three miles behind, lifted her drags and sailed boldly into the narrow channel between the rocks and shoals that protect the treacherous harbor of Tripoli. A half-grown moon hung in the clear sky and a stiff breeze against the beam set the sails in a beautiful swell of canvas. As the daring vessel advanced the breeze gradually died down until the motion was scarcely perceptible. Slowly the ketch stole along until there arose out of the mist before her the shadowy outline of a great ship.

On the open deck of the Intrepid not more than a dozen men were to be seen, the others lying in the shadows of the bulwarks or concealed by the masts and rigging. Decatur stood close to a Sicilian named Catalano, as he steered for the frigate's bow, where the ketch would be out of reach of those American guns that the Turk would have employed, only too gladly, for the destruction of American patriots. When only about 100 yards intervened between the two vessels the lookout on the Philadelphia became aware of the near approach of a ship and a challenge was issued. Catalano called back that he had come on a trading voyage from Malta, that he had encountered terrific storms and had lost his anchor. He begged the privilege of riding by the ship until morning, since he could not make his vessel fast and dared not proceed into the midst of the forest of ships in the inner harbor. A crowd had gathered on the deck of the Philadelphia and many a rude joke was hurled across the water, as the pilot was compelled to enumerate the items of his imaginary cargo. While this conversation was going on the wind changed suddenly, hurling the Intrepid in the direction of the frigate's stern. There, in full range of the guns that might have shattered her in less time than is required for the telling, she lay in a suddenly tranquil sea, absolutely becalmed.

In another moment the sailors on board the Philadelphia manned a boat and came to the rescue with a line that was passed to the ketch as a boat from the ketch rowed up to the frigate and attached another line to her fore-chain. Cautiously the men on the Intrepid drew in the line until the daring boat lay alongside her victime. In that tense moment the Turks nearest the rail caught sight of a sturdy pair of anchors, and a sharp cry, "Americanos!" was raised. Even at that the crew, lying in the shadows on the nearby deck, did not move.

A moment later, those same bewildered Turks beheld the lithe body of a man, leaping cat-like for the Philadelphia's chain-plate. The man was Decatur, and as he clambered up the side of the frigate, he gave orders that transformed the tranquil deck of the merchantman into what appeared like an ant hill, suddenly aroused. Long before the men on the Philadelphia began to understand the meaning of those forms that appeared to grow, mushroom-like, out of the shadowy deck, they were confronted by heads and bodies that emerged from the ports and swarmed over the rail. It was like the mystic spell of some weird magician, materializing human beings out of empty space, and in another moment the terrified Turks rushed, panic-stricken, to the starboard side of the ship. As the Americans dashed after them, they flung themselves overboard and began to swim for shore. From the quarterdeck, Decatur sent up a rocket to announce to Captain Stewart, on board the Siren, that the ship had been captured, and before the Siren's rocket could reply the flames were seen leaping up from every part of the ill-starred Philadelphia. As swiftly as they had boarded her, the Americans departed, dropping back to the deck of the ketch and cutting loose. The engagement had lasted but twenty-three minutes.

A shout from Decatur dispatched a dozen men, with swords, to cut the entangling ropes, and a mighty shove sent the ketch out of reach of the roaring flames. In another instant the sweeps had been manned, and a succession of long oar-strokes carried the craft well out into the channel of the treacherous harbor. Now the men could hold in no longer, and a mighty shout of triumph arose, a shout that was drowned in the roar of the batteries, for the sleepy gunners had been startled into activity by the sight of the burning Philadelphia. Two corsairs and a galley gave chase and the surface of the water was torn by a rapid succession of explosions, as the fire in the burning frigate reached her batteries. By a strange freak of the wind, the flaming hull was shifted around and poured a terrific broadside directly into the town—the American warship's almost human retaliation upon her hated captors. From their prison windows, Captain Bainbridge and the 300 men who had been captured on that once proud ship, watched with mingled joy and grief the work of the destruction. At least the Philadelphia would not serve as the enemy's slave.

In a veritable rain of shot and shell, that sent brilliant jets of illumined water all about her, the Intrepid dashed out of the harbor, joined the Siren and set sail for Syracuse. She had not lost a single man, and only one member of her crew had need for the surgeon's aid. The Tripolitans lost twenty men in addition to those unnumbered victims who had retreated to the depths of the burning ship. When the story of the adventure was told aboard, the pirate nations along the northern coast of Africa sat up in wild-eyed amazement. This was not the sort of thing they had been accustomed to. The war had dragged along for almost three years and nothing much had happened. They began to ask who this Stephen Decatur was, and a little while later they had a reply when one of their commanding officers, under pretense of surrender, boarded the ship commanded by Decatur's brother and murdered him. No sooner had the news of this dastardly act come to the newly appointed captain that he made off for his dead brother's ship, engaged the murderous Turk in a hand-to-hand fight, bore him, struggling and pleading for mercy, to the deck and ran him through with his short sword, the only weapon he happened to have at hand when the death of his brother was reported to him.

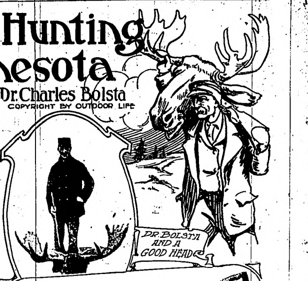
Without waiting to wash the blood from his hands, he gave orders for the occupation of the Turk's ship, and that night he joined the American fleet with two captured vessels.

It is commonly asserted that piracy was extinguished by the drubbing he gave Tripoli in 1805; but this is by no means true. We were immune from molestation, because the Barbary states had learned to fear and respect us.

Moose Hunting in Minnesota

Dr. Charles Bolsta

COPYRIGHT BY OUTDOOR LIFE



DR. BOLSTA AND A GOOD HEAD

TROPHIES OF THE HUNT

IT is a rule among medical men that, having made a new and important discovery, it is our duty to appraise the world of it and let all human kind benefit thereby; hence this report. Having had splendid luck hunting deer in Northern Minnesota for two falls we (when I say we it means Mrs. B. and myself, as she has accompanied me on all my hunting expeditions and enjoys the outdoor idea fully as well as I do, besides being a good shot), decided on a trial for moose. Now, when one is to hunt moose, the principal thing is to go where the moose are. So after a thorough investigation into the whereabouts of these animals we concluded that Cook county, Minnesota, probably had more moose to the square mile than any other place in America, and I think that our findings will be borne out by the results of that hunt.

Having decided where to go, it was next in order to secure the services of someone with a thorough knowledge of the country, for a guide. Through the kindness of my friend, Dr. F. B. Hicks of Grand Marais, Cook county, Minnesota, I was put in communication with Mr. Gilbert Gilbertson of that place, whose personal services we were fortunate enough to secure. Right here let me say that Gilbert Gilbertson is without doubt the most thoroughly qualified guide in Cook county, having a thorough knowledge of the country as well as the habits and haunts of game. Mr. Gilbertson has four men, all good guides, and he has a most unique method of charging for his services. He or his men will take charge of one, two or three men for $10 per day, or he will guarantee to get you a good, fair shot at a moose for $25, provided, however, that you agree to "hike" at least five miles per day. We are now ready to start, and leave home for Minneapolis, where we are joined by Mr. C. Herbert Allen, thence to Duluth and from Duluth to Grand Marais by a Booth Line steamer. Running into a "dead swell" on Lake Superior, Mrs. B. and Herb had all the joys of real seasickness.

We were met at the wharf at Grand Marais by our friend, Dr. Hicks, whose splendid hospitality we thoroughly enjoyed. We were all up early next morning to take a look at our surroundings, of which it is impossible to make an adequate pen picture. Imagine a little village, just back of a natural harbor of rocks, against a mountainside of beautiful evergreens and white birch, nearly a mile high, ending in a tremendous promonotory of red-hued rock at one end and miles and miles of the most gorgeous landscape at the other. Cook county is made up of thousands of just such scenes, with countless lakes and rivers interspersed, all of which abound in land-locked salmon and speckled trout, making a veritable sportsman's paradise as well as artists' dreamland. Our guide has now arrived with team and wagon to take all our camp paraphernalia, provisions, etc., and we are told that we are to drive out five miles to Mr. H. Gilbertson's, where we are to have dinner, and then on eight miles further to the 13-mile post on the Gunflint road, which place we reached at 6 o'clock, tired, hungry and in the dark. We soon unload the big trunk containing our 14x24 tent and in half an hour have our house up and a good fire going.

The next day we spent in perfecting our quarters, hauling up fire wood, etc., etc., and as the day therafter was November 10, or the opening day of the hunting season, we were all anxious to be ready for an early start. To get a moose by still hunting, it is imperative that you get near the feeding grounds by daylight. We were accordingly on the trail as soon as it was possible to travel, and our usual good fortune was with us, for we were scarcely at the edge of the old burning, now nicely grown up with young poplars, alder bushes and hazel brush, when we found a fresh moose track in the light snow that had fallen the previous day. Judging by the size of the hoof-print we at once decided that we wanted that big bull, and it was planned that Herb and Gilbert should follow the track and Mrs. B. and I should cross the ravine and go up along the hillside about a quarter of a mile away. This was followed out and we had barely gotten across the ravine when we heard Herb's .35 Remington automatic begin to crack and we hastily ran to the top of a small ridge, where we stood panting for breath, when we heard a tremendous crackling of brush and timber, and in another moment we saw, about 150 yards away and coming directly our way, a very large bull moose. Waiting until he was in a fairly open spot, I fired with my Winchester .30 cal. G. M. 1903, but shot entirely too high, as I only pulled a bunch of hair out of his neck. Quickly throwing in another shell, I took a little better aim and planted a ball right home, squarely behind the shoulder blade, tearing a hole through both lungs and cutting off the large blood vessels, the bullet lodging just under the skin on the opposite side. The moose stopped, stood still for a second and then rearing up fell over backwards, dead.

We were certainly elated. It was not yet 9 o'clock and we had a very large moose, probably weighing 1,200 pounds, but he was quite old and did not have very good horns. We soon found the boys, who said that they had sighted their moose about 400 yards away but had missed and they hardly believed us when we told them we had a big one down. We found that there had been two moose and the one we killed was not the one they had shot at. We all spent the balance of the day in dressing this moose, packing out the head and some meat. And right here I want to correct a very common notion that the meat from a bull moose is too tough to eat. We ate moose meat every day in camp and can safely testify to its fine flavor and tender quality.

Early the next morning found Herb anxious to get away to recover the reputation as a marksman lost the day before. Mrs. B. and I hunted all the morning without seeing anything and returned to camp very tired and hungry about the middle of the afternoon. The boys got in after dark and a satisfied look on Herb's face told us that they had at least seen something. We were told that they had sighted a spike bull and killed it and after dressing that, spent some time hunting, but saw only a cow and two calves, which they watched for sometime, even walking to within 200 feet of them. We all rolled in early and were up again betimes, and as Mrs. B. and Herb had each developed a "Charley-horse" from too careful walking, they decided to stay in camp, and Gilbert and I accompanied by Mr. H. Gilbertson, who had come to spend a day or two with us, started out. We tramped hard and followed a track for a couple of hours in the forenoon, but this proved to be a very large cow and we had to let her go. After eating our lunch, which, by the way, consisted each day of one large sandwich and about two ounces of home-made candy, we decided to try an old burning a couple of miles further north, and about 4 o'clock in the afternoon found a fresh track that looked good to us. Gilbert and I took the trail and Mr. Gilbertson started for the farther edge of the large ravine. We had not walked for more than twenty minutes, when rounding a little point up into the ravine, I saw, about 150 yards distant, standing in a clump of alder bushes, a splendid big bull with a magnificent head. I raised my gun and fired, and the big fellow staggered, but did not fall, so I sent in another ball, and he fell in a heap. He was dead when we reached him, with two ragged holes just back of the shoulder, either of which was sufficient to have killed him in a minute or two. About this time Mr. Gilbertson's rifle began to sing, and Gilbert and I ran forward but saw nothing. My firing had started another moose not far away from us but too far for Mr. G. to get accurate shooting, and he got away.

We went back and took stock of our moose and found that he weighed about 1,100 pounds, and had a good head with an actual spread of 57 inches. I don't think that I ever was so thoroughly satisfied in my life as at just that time. After dressing our moose and taking off the head, which Gilbert, strong as a small horse, carried without a pack-strap down to the lake, we hit the trail for camp as fast as possible as it was already nearly dark.

We decided that we should make an early start the next morning, despite the fact that the day was Sunday. We were up, and ready but were delayed in starting because of a heavy fog. As it was Herb's day, Mrs. B., Mr. Gilbertson, Sr., and I dragged on behind the boys, Mrs. B. and I having our limit. About three miles from camp and at about 8 o'clock they came upon fresh tracks and waited for us to come up. As we examined the tracks we made up our minds that two big bulls were not far away. Gilbert and Herb continued on ahead and we followed very carefully about a hundred yards back. After a half mile of the most careful going I ever saw, the boys rounded a small bunch of jackpines and just as they were out of sight we heard Herb's gun crack and Mrs. B. and Mr. G. started forward on a run. I turned the other way, expecting one of those moose to come out on my side of the jackpines. In less than half a minute there was the awfulest cracking of guns that I ever heard, and in another half minute the firing ceased; then as nothing came my way I went around to see what was doing.

Imagine my surprise as I walked around there to see in less than one hundred and fifty yards of distance, four big bull moose, dead. Herb had secured a splendid head with 48-inch spread and certainly was elated. This gave us each a moose, including one for Mr. Gilbertson, Sr.

Late Wednesday evening we struck camp and moved down to Mr. Gilbertson's. Mr. Gilbertson, Sr., Albert and I went back the next day and brought down the whole of the smallest moose we killed, which we shipped home.

Gilbert and I hunted all day Saturday but saw nothing. On Sunday morning, however, Mr. G., Sr., found some perfectly fresh tracks of a deer, not over a quarter of a mile from the house. He came back and told Gilbert and I and we at once accompanied him, getting a little way out on the burning, while Mr. G. took the trail. It was but a few minutes when a beautiful yearling buck came out directly at Gilbert. A Winchester .32 Special through the heart was all that was necessary. We hunted again in the afternoon and two deer came out near Albert Gilbertson and a Mr. Nelson, who were with us, but the shooting was hard and no one was able to connect.

No Case for Mrs. Grundy

Moonlight and Romance Mingled, But Scandal is Left Out of the Proceedings.

The dreamy stillness of the mountain air had woven a spell over the man and woman as they sat close together, gazing down the uneven slope that stretched before them. The silvery rim of the moon rose through feathery clouds, making a picture to which no artist could do justice. It was an evening in midsummer. Such an evening as makes love seem the more beautiful, and the man and woman had loved each other since childhood.

They were both young; he not over twenty-five, the woman several years his junior. She had a sad, wistful little face and clear white skin, offset by a mass of chestnut hair. The man was tall and handsome, and, like the woman, dark. The unmistakable stamp of good breeding encompassed them both.

The woman stirred with a sigh. "It is our last night here," she said. "To-morrow you must return to your work—I to my husband." A groan escaped her at the mentioning of that name. Her companion frowned. His thoughts seemed far from pleasant. Then after a moment: "Is he very—busy nowadays?" It was as though nothing else could be said at such a time. She thrust out her hands with an impatient little gesture.

"O, yes, I dare say. They tell me he is very successful—yet he gives me only the bare necessities. He will never take me anywhere; is not even civil to me at times, and yet"—her voice dropped to a whisper—"I said 'until death do us part.'"

The man patted her on the shoulder affectionately. "We'll slip away again, later on, little girl," he said, "and have another junket like this one. We've had a great time together, haven't we—just you and I?" His eyes were soft and clear.

She leaned toward him and put an arm about his neck. In her face was the love beyond words. "Phil, old pal," she said, "you're just the nicest brother that a girl ever had!"—Puck.

Loyal, If Not Learned.

While Admiral Togo was obliged on account of illness to cancel most of his social engagements in Boston he received informally a number of people who were introduced to him by one of his special representatives.

A group of delegates from a convention then being held in Boston greeted the little [illegible] with the Japanese salutation which sounds like "Banzai o hi o!"

One of the delegates who was from the Keystone state was not to be outdone in courtesy or patriotism. After the voices had subsided so that he got a good chance he exclaimed enthusiastically:

"And banzai Pennsylvania, too!"—New York Sun.

Blur in Baedecker's Record

Probably the Only Occasion When Great Compiler Trusted to Others for Accuracy of Statement.

The recent death of Karl Baedecker, son of the original Baedecker of the guide books, is made the subject of an article in Chamber's Journal. The name of Baedecker as time has gone on has become synonymous for guide book, and at the same time for accuracy. But as there have been occasions when great Jove himself would nod, so there have been times when the accurate Baedecker, lazily trusting without investigation (as dictionary and cyclopedia makers have sometimes done) to the work of others, has dropped into serious error. John Murray, a guide book maker in the middle thirties, published that pomegranates grew on the sides of a certain valley in Italy. Now it so happens that the German word "granat" means both "pomegranate" and "garnet," and Baedecker's compiler made the statement that garnets embellished the cliffs of this valley. The reputation of Baedecker has from time to time been made use of by other publishers to further the sale of their inferior productions. One German publisher went so far as to annex the celestial regions with a "Himmel's Baedecker." One story connected with a Baedecker made into English gives a choice printer's error. This is a description of a museum where "a room full of plaster casts," turned up in the proof as "a room full of blasted cats."

Futility of Protest.

"I'm going to report you," said the irate passenger.

"Who to?" asked the railway employe.

"Your superior officer, of course."

"Pshaw! He's got no time to go after me. He's afraid of losin' his own job."

NOTES from MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Corn is the most relished by poultry of all grains.

To make money is the chief object of breeding pedigree hogs.

Systematic work is required to rid a poultry house of mites or lice.

See that the colts do not lose flesh on short or frost-bitten pastures.

The feed and feeding is the first important point in successful dairying.

One of the most successful pigeon raisers feeds his birds nothing but whole corn.

Never feed soured or tainted food of any kind to the chicks, or to the old fowls, either.

The wise dairyman and stockman will hold back and grow to maturity all heifer calves.

It takes a good manager to make a profit of $2 per head each year from a single pair of breeders.

Geese feather more rapidly when they have an abundance of fresh water and good pasturage.

There is no best breed of chickens. They are good, bad or indifferent, according to circumstances.

The sheep industry cannot reach perfection until every mongrel dog in the land is exterminated.

There is one rule always to be remembered: Never mate birds that are hatched in the same nest.

It is best not to put sawdust in the poultry house, as it gathers too much moisture and causes dampness.

Colts require plenty of exercise in order to develop their limbs when their bodies are growing rapidly.

It is a fact that the dogs destroy more sheep in some certain states than all the diseases combined.

Keep sows and pigs away from fattening hogs, and give them feeds that produce flesh and bone rather than fat

Thoroughly clean and whitewash the inside of the hen house and it will be lighter and cleaner during the entire winter.

For the winter feeding of sheep, clover, alfalfa, hay, oats, wheat bran, linseed meal and roots will insure success.

Cabbage is one of the very best vegetables to feed to poultry, as it keeps green a long time and the chickens enjoy picking at it.

The dairy herd is a good place to invest surplus earnings. If rightly handled they can be made to pay a handsome dividend every year.

No matter how good a horse is in its early life, its usefulness is cut short if it is not properly cared for. This is a serious loss.

Poorly dressed poultry goes begging in the market, while the supply of choice (fancy) stock is not sufficient to meet the demand.

An egg, to belong to the strictly fresh egg class, should not be over three days old in summer weather, and a week old during winter.

If a man allows his chickens to roam amid the mud and slush of the yards in the fall, he is preparing the way for some sick fowls this winter.

He who makes a success in the chicken business from the start will be the man who does things, not he who waits for a favorable opporunity

Get rid of the cockerels as rapidly as they get large enough and thus cut off the feed bill and protect the others of the flock from these scrappy youngsters.

If good, clean, sound grain in abundance, and a variety, with pure water, grit oyster shell and meat in some form, will not produce eggs, nothing else will.

Only an expert is able to tell by the smell just when the cream is right for churning. It then has a clean, sour taste and smells like nuts fresh from the woods.

Impure air, as well as dampness, are a danger to any flock. Separate the flocks in bunches of 25 or 50 and feed them separately and they will make much better gains.

Always make the nest boxes easily removable so that they may be frequently taken out of the house and cleaned, disinfected and treated for the destruction of vermin.

The dairy farmer who does not build a silo usually has some reason which is satisfactory to him, but he cannot longer use the excuse that silage has a detrimental effect on milk quality.

It is a mistake to discard a breed on the supposition that it is not a hardy one. Hardiness can be instilled in any breed by proper housing, proper food, proper attention, and systematic breeding.

A lousy hen is always a poor layer.

Make the by-products of the dairy count.

Corn will make hens fat but it will not make them lay eggs.

The better bred the horse is, the more generally useful he is.

Put a boss pig by himself. Allow no robbing—it doesn't pay.

For fall feeding of dairy cattle sweet corn is exceedingly valuable.

The separator needs to be set perfectly level on a solid foundation.

The feed bill of the poultry yard can be cut in two if you know how.

Continued care in handling the dairy products is the price of success.

The calf that is reared naturally gets only a small quantity of milk at a time.

Don't neglect to commence feeding the colts some grain before they are weaned.

Waiting to teach the colt to eat grain until it is weaned is very poor economy.

The value of silage as the cheapest and best succulent for cattle and hogs is fully established.

When fattening beef cattle for the market, keep them as quiet and contented as possible.

Regularity in feeding and milking will go a long ways towards making dairy work successful.

All milk utensils should be heavily tinned and as free from seams as it is possible to get them.

Many of the irregularities in the health of the farm stock can be traced to injudicious feeding.

Wooden pails readily absorb milk particles, making it almost impossible to keep them sweet and clean.

The hatching-egg trade and the raising of stick for breeders have assumed the dignity of specialties.

It is to the poultryman's interest to keep his stock up to the best type, healthy and vigorous all the time.

A cold rain, fall or spring rain, will check the milk flow as much as a snow storm if the cows are exposed.

It will be noticed that though the prices of other farm stock are falling off, the dairy cow still holds her own.

In hot weather lice breed in pigeon houses by the million and extra care must be taken to keep down the vermin.

Rats in a pigeon house not only destroy the young but their presence frightens the birds so that they will not thrive.

If one has a large flock of sheep much time will be saved and better results obtained by the use of the machine clippers.

Sheep are extremely nervous and when being fattened for market they must be quiet and free from sudden alarm which will cause excitement.

Pigeons hatched in March are matured and ready for breeding in July and if the surroundings are congenial will continue to breed every month thereafter.

A young girl who raises about 100 White Plymouth Rocks, always brings every bird in the flock flying to her feet by a single particular cry he utters.

It is as impossible to estimate the productiveness and value of a cow as it is to guess the exact number of bushels of corn a certain field will yield.

While sheep will eat grain and any kind of grass and some kinds of weeds, they are, after all, dainty feeders and their feed must be absolutely clean.

There are several signs that indicate good health—a bright red comb, activity, readiness for food, and a glossy and smooth appearance of the feathers.

Do not let the high prices for veal, for which there is a tremendous demand at this time every year, tempt you into selling your heifer calves to the butcher.

French pigeon fanciers feed millet with a slight mixture of hemp seed, and also very small peas soaked in water. The feeding is done by hand in many cases.

The Massachusetts experiment station says that lime is an aid to good farming but cannot take the place of fertilizers, stable manure, thorough cultivation and proper crop rotation.

A small flock of sheep in addition to furnishing excellent profit and keeping down weeds, furnishes the most practical meat supply for the farmer, especially during the summer.

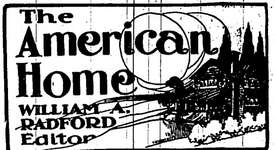
Every colt should be taught a fast walking gait. This can be done by gently pushing him while walking but he should never be urged too long at a time before changing his gait.

If we feed and care for sheep we are fattening as they should be cared for to make the most profit from this mutton, we also supply the very best conditions to produce the best wool in the combing class.

Every farmer should arrange to have at least one beef to butcher during the year to afford a variety in the meat supply and reduce the cost of living.

The American Home

WILLIAM A. RADFORD Editor

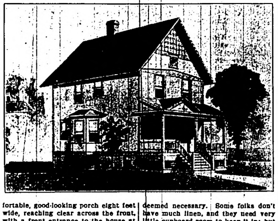


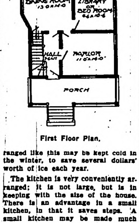
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Money may be saved in building by selecting a design that is plain and compact. American houses usually contain six, seven or eight rooms. These easily may be built all on one floor, in what is usually termed a cottage or a bungalow; but it is cheaper in building, heating and unkeep to make the house two stories high, and arrange one set of rooms below and the other on the second floor. A smaller excavation, less stone for cellar walls and supporting walls, less supporting timber, and a smaller roof, answer for a two-story house. The cost of finishing each room, providing windows, etc., is about the same; the flooring is about the same. The two-story house has a little more material in the up-and-down work, and less in the lengthwise measurement.

In selecting a house plan, a great deal depends on the size of the lot, and on the location and outlook. People not only want houses neat and comfortable, but they want them to look well, to fit the ground, and to be in keeping with other houses in the neighborhood. It requires very nice judgment to proportion a house properly to the lot, to the pocketbook, and to the needs of the family. A great deal of subsequent comfort and happiness depends on the manner in which it is done.

There are some very nice features about the house design shown in the accompanying cuts. In the first place, the design is that of a small house, 23 feet wide by 33 feet long, exclusive of porches; and it can be built for about $1,500, under favorable circumstances. Such a price for a comfortable seven-room house is attractive to commence with; then we have a comfortable, good-looking porch eight feet wide, reaching clear across the front, with a front entrance to the house at one end of the porch, leaving the other end free for chairs. We have a neat little front hall with room for a hatrack at the side of the door entering the dining room. There is a china closet off the dining room, with a little window to light it. This is a great convenience, one that any housekeeper would appreciate. Besides this, the pantry is very conveniently arranged, and the pantry is a good size and shape; it also has a small window for light and ventilation. A pantry arranged like this may be kept cold in the winter, to save several dollars' worth of ice each year.



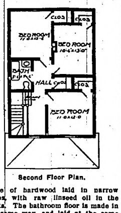


First Floor Plan.

The kitchen is very conveniently arranged; it is not large, but is in keeping with the size of the house. There is an advantage in a small kitchen, in that it saves steps. A small kitchen may be made much more convenient than a large one when there are only one or two women to work in it at the same time.

The kitchen should have suitable furniture. I thought at one time that a kitchen should be fitted with plenty of built-in cupboards, but in recent years the manufacture of special kitchen furniture has rather interfered with my cupboard preferences. A kitchen cabinet may be arranged so conveniently that it has advantages over anything of the kind a carpenter can build as part of the house. A cabinet rightly made, with good, tight bottom, back and sides, is dust-proof and it is mouse-proof—two things that are hard to secure in a built-in cupboard. A carpenter may be ever so careful with his work; but materials, unless thoroughly kiln-dried, are sure to shrink in time, and leave openings big enough to let in a whole lot of dust, and the mice are certain to find a way into such cupboards. Moreover, a portable kitchen cabinet can easily be cleaned inside, and it can be moved out from the wall at intervals, and the space thoroughly cleaned under it and behind it. A kitchen should be the cleanest place in the house. Health depends to a great extent on the kitchen.

A kitchen floor is another very important feature. In this house it is made of hardwood laid in narrow strips, with raw linseed oil in the joints. The bathroom floor is made in the same way, and laid at the same time. Floors put in like this will last for many years, and they are always satisfactory.



Second Floor Plan.

Upstairs we have three bedrooms, with a clothes closet for each one, and an extra closet in the hallway for linen. Every housekeeper needs a linen closet upstairs for bedding, and one downstairs for table linen and towels. Few small houses and not very large houses have the conveniences in this respect that should be deemed necessary. Some folks don't have much linen, and they need very little cupboard room to keep it in; but that is because they don't understand the real satisfaction that comes from the possession of nice table and house linen.

Linen is something a woman should be continually buying, not in large, expensive lots, but, when opportunity offers to get a tablecloth or two or three really good towels at a bargain, that is the time to buy, because these articles are always needed, and it costs less to have a supply on hand than to buy in emergency. Unfortunately, too many American women have fallen into the habit of providing in a sort of hand-to-mouth way. They depend on wash day to supply clean linen for the week, instead of having a variety to draw from. It costs no more in the end to have plenty than to feel that you are short all the time; in fact, it costs less, because you can buy to better advantage, and the wear and tear is less when you have a liberal supply.

Loyalty Is Rewarded.

Professor Dyche, state fish and game warden, has appointed Big Bill Brown deputy fish and game warden for Cherokee county. Big Bill will be remembered as the man who wrote a strong letter to Tom Botkin, assistant secretary of state, some months ago indorsing Professor Dyche's story about black bass quitting their native element to catch and swallow jaybirds. Big Bill went the professor one better and not only stated that black bass do catch and swallow jaybirds, but submitted some pretty strong testimony to show that they also prey upon ducks and geese. Big Bill received his reward for his loyalty to the professor, and his commission was written without any frills, naming him simply as Big Bill Brown.—Kansas City Journal.

Air Mile.

The "air mile" is a unit of measurement that has come into use with the advancement of aviation. We had the land mile and the sea mile, which is approximately one-seventh longer than the land mile of America. The nautical mile is often incorrectly called a knot, but a knot is a measure of both distance and time. It is correct to say that a vessel makes ten knots, but to say that she makes ten knots an hour is tautology. The air mile is measured differently from the land mile and the sea mile. It is a land mile minus the retardation of an adverse wind or plus the acceleration of a favoring wind. Thus an aviator could cover many air miles while hovering over a given point on the earth's surface.—Browning's Magazine.

COOKING DRIED FRUIT

FIRELESS METHOD MAKES IT AS GOOD AS PRESERVES.

Dried and Canned Vegetables May Be Treated in the Same Way With the Most Satisfactory Results.

Very few women really know how to get the best out of dried fruit and vegetables. They have become accustomed to thinking that these articles of food are at best unpalatable. No greater mistake could be made. The truth is that they are not usually cooked long enough or slow enough to bring out the flavor.

Fresh fruit just now is so expensive that most families cannot afford to have much of it. Dried and evaporated fruits may be obtained reasonably at all seasons.

The fireless method is the best way to cook them. You need not buy a fireless cooker for the purpose unless you wish to. Make one yourself. Simply get a small dry goods box, or large pail, or any receptacle that can be made airtight. Line with asbestos paper, and then stuff tightly all around the top, bottom and sides with layers of newspapers to the depth of three or four inches. What you must remember is that it must be absolutely airtight Another thing to remember is that your receptacle must be nearly full. If you cook a small quantity you must have a small receptacle, as the fruit is not as likely to cool off before thoroughly done as it would if placed in a half-filled pail.

Wash your fruit thoroughly first, and to one pound of same add one-half pound of sugar; put water enough in to cover by about one inch. Boil seven minutes over a flame, and then as quickly as possible place in your fireless cooker and allow to remain in there about eight hours. Place a cushion on top of the cooker and weigh that down with something that is heavy.

When taken out one will find the fruit will rival the best preserves in appearance and flavor, in no respect suggesting that usually served, or the insipid canned product. Each shriveled piece will swell to its original size, unbroken, distended with a juicy, aromatic liquor, and charged with the flavors which characterize fruit in its prime state. Tapioca and sago are delicious with these fruit juices, in making tempting desserts.

Dried vegetables, such as lima beans, peas, etc., should be treated in the same way and given about the same time to cook. Canned vegetables which have been bought in the stores are also much improved by this additional process.

These fireless cookers are also excellent for doing home canning of vegetables and fruits. By canning them in this way the house is kept cool, fuel is saved and the housewife is free from the fear of water boiling away. Clean and prepare the same as for any canning process. Dip the jars in boiling water, fill with vegetables or fruit, pour in cold water until it overflows the jar, dip the caps in boiling water, place them on the jars, but do not seal tightly; allow for expansion. Put a perforated rest in the bottom of your kettle, place the prepared jars on the rest, fill the kettle with cold water up to the necks of the jars. Place the cover on the kettle, put on the stove and boil 15 minutes. At the end of that time place at once into the cooker and cover tightly. Allow the jars to remain in the cooker from two to three hours, then remove and tighten the caps

Ghost Apples.

Large perfect apples are cored and baked until soft, but not long enough to burst the skins. These are cooled and served singly to each person, together with a marshmallow, three cubes of sugar and a liquor glass of brandy. The marshmallows are pushed down into the bottom of the cavities left by the removal of the cores and the remaining space filled with the cubes of sugar Upon these the brandy is poured and then lighted It burns with a ghostly blue flame until the alcohol is consumed and the sugar melted The apples are then eaten with cream.

Random Notes.

If, after washing a chamois, there seem to be harsh places rub them steadily but gently through the hands and soon they will quite disappear.

When making aprons, especially those to be used in doing housework do not forget a large pocket. It will save many a step in dusting and picking up.

Watery custard is caused by cooking in an oven that is too hot. Set the custard in a pan of hot water and see that the water does not boil during the baking.

Boiled Dressing.

Four eggs well beaten, half teaspoon dry mustard, one teaspoon salt half teaspoon pepper, one tablespoon sugar, two tablespoons melted butter one cup rich milk, half cup vinegar, cook in a double boiler and beat with an egg beater continually until thick enough. It will keep a long time if kept in a cool place. Add a little whipped cream when you wish to use it.

Nut Muffins.

Mix and sift one and a half cups of bread flour with three-fourths teaspoon salt one tablespoon sugar and three teaspoons baking powder Beat one egg until light, add three-fourths cup of milk and stir it into the flour mixture. Beat well, add a half cup broken walnuts, then stir in three tablespoons melted butter. Fill buttered muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in hot oven from 15 to 20 minutes.

Drop Cookies.

One cup of sugar, half cup of butter, three eggs, not beaten; add the eggs one at a time; one teaspoon of vanilla, one cup of walnuts, one cup of raisins, chopped together; one teaspoon of cinnamon, a pinch of cloves and allspice, one teaspoon of soda dissolved in hot water, and enough flour to make stiff batter.

Came Easy.

Representative James T. Lloyd of Missouri was discussing the president's belief that the extra session of congress would not try to revise the whole tariff law.

"He had about as much to go on," said Lloyd, "as the man who approached a banker with a request to lend him money on a note. He wanted five hundred dollars.

"'Can you get an indorser?' asked the banker.

"'Sure,' replied the prospective borrower, mentioning the indorser's name.

"'But has he got any money?'

"'Lots of it,' answered the other. 'He wins it at poker.'"—The Sunday Magazine.

Since Teacher Did Not Know.

It was in the primary class of a graded school in a western city and the day was the 22d of February.

"Now, who can tell me whose birthday this is?" asked the teacher.

A little girl arose timidly.

"Well, Margaret, you may tell us," said the teacher.

"Mine," was the unexpected reply. —Everybody's Magazine.

Senses of Taste and Smell Were Also Greatly Impaired.

"I was afflicted with catarrh," writes Eugene Forbes, Lebanon, Kansas. "I took several different medicines, giving each a fair trial, but grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I was about to give up in despair, but concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After taking three bottles of this medicine I was cured, and have not had any return of the disease."

Hood's Sarsaparilla effects radical and permanent cures of catarrh.

The farmer in this vicinity who did not "make a stake" this year has no one but himself to blame. He cannot lay it to the trusts, nor the railroads, nor the tariff.

Lack of cars in which to ship grain is choking the elevators in western Canada, and many are closing. Winnipeg receipts would be 2,000 cars daily if cars were available. Besides, 27 per cent of the grain in the Saskatchewan territory is unthreshed, and it is estimated that fully 20 per cent will lie out in the shocks all winter

An event believed to be without precedent in the history of Freemasonry was furnished at a special communication of the Masonic order at Palmyra, Ill., recently, when the degree of Master Mason was conferred on seven brothers. The brothers are Albert, Morris, Robert, Charles, James, Edward, and William Ross, all farmers living near Palmyra.

There is one delightful thing about farming, which is not true of some other industries, and that is that each farmer is really benefited by the success of his neighbors. In a progressive neighborhood, where good stock is kept and where farming is generally profitable, roads and schools are better, the price of farm land is higher; and, owing to the fact that a great quantity of farm products are offered for sale, markets are better; so boost your neighbors, and by so doing help yourself.—University Farm News.

Rural School Notes

Pres. W. A. Shoemaker of the state normal school at St. Cloud wishes to say to those people who would be liable to come to said normal school at St. Cloud at the beginning of the winter term on Dec. 5, that only those will be admitted who have previously been in the institution, or whose applications have already been accepted. This precaution is taken owing to press of numbers, and because he very much dislikes to send any one home who comes to them expecting to get in.

This certainly speaks well for the for the prosperous condition of that excellent school.

While in St. Paul the other week we were informed by Mr. Oesander, of the department of public instruction, that all our rural state aid applications were granted; furthermore, that these schools would this year receive in full of aid for the last two years, and for this year also something is coming in the way of surprise for these schools this year, thanks to our last legislature.

Our schools are all at work and doing well. The schools may have a vacation for Thanksgiving. The superintendent would like one, too.

Aeroplane to South Pole

Dr. Douglas Mawson, who is headed toward the south pole, has taken with him an aeroplane capable of carrying two passengers 180 miles without making a descent. Scientists say that the aeroplane will be useless to the voyageur, because of the tremendous tempests which are prevalent in the polar regions. Far better for practical uses would be a supply of golden grain belt beers, the wonderful food tonic and fatigue reliever. Taken properly they insure rest and a good digestion. If not yet, right away try them. Order of Alex Thompson, Crookston, or of your dealer.

How He Found Sleep.

By SALLIE MENDEEM.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

The way I got out of the burglar line was this: I had mighty good nerve and wasn't afraid of any one. I seemed to know what kind of a crib to crack and how to do it without waking anybody up and getting away between midnight and dawn, when the cops are most drowsy. While I was doing a job I thought of nothing except my work and was both cool and watchful. I wasn't one of those blokes who scare people to death or who are ready if necessary to add murder to robbery. The truth is I never liked the prospect of facing either charge.

As I was saying, while engaged at my work, however dangerous, I was steady as a monument, but when danger had passed and I had nothing to do but think I went downhill very fast. What bothered me most was that I couldn't sleep nights—that is, when comfortably stowed away in bed. I once took a nap in a gentleman's parlor and was only wakened by the sun coming up and shining in my eyes. I just got out in time to save myself. But when lying on a soft mattress with warm covers and no chance of being disturbed, sleep wouldn't come to me. I lay awake thinking of the time when I would hear prison doors clang behind me. The thought was dreadful. I'm afraid I was too fine grained for the business.

Month after month my hours of sleep grew less till I feared insanity. One night I woke up at midnight after having slept two hours and knew there would be no more slumber for me till the next time I went to bed. I was so desperate that I got up with the intention of going into some house where I had no right and there snatch another couple of hours' sleep. I had a crib in view, a small house with not much in it. But I was looking for sleep, not plunder. I went there, took out a pane of glass, entered and went upstairs to find a place to settle down. I stood in a dark hall looking into a room where a night lamp was burning. In the room a woman was in bed with a child, both asleep. The child was sleeping on the front of the bed, very near the edge. He was a boy and, I think, about five years old.

On a narrow lower bed, close beside the other, slept another child, a girl of about three. She was sleeping in the center of her bed on her side and had her chubby fist up against her fat cheek. It was hot summer weather, and none of them except the woman had any covers whatever.

What interested me was that the boy's head was hanging over the side of his bed and so much of his body, too, that it looked to me as if he was about to fall. He was restless, and I knew he would be over very soon. Somehow I wanted to see him fall, though I kept in the dark so that he wouldn't see me if he woke up. The next kick he made sent him over. He fell a couple of feet, but didn't wake up. He landed partly on the little girl, but she didn't wake up either. I expected she would, as she moaned once or twice in her sleep and turned over, but finally she slept as peacefully as before.

It was such a delightful picture to one suffering from insomnia that I kept on watching the children. The boy continued his kicking and crowded the girl, pushing her with every move to the front edge of her bed. It must have been half an hour that he kept this up, when there was a thump, and the girl lay on the floor. But she seemed to be as comfortable there as on her bed. At any rate, she showed not the least sign of waking.

Meanwhile I heard the muttering of distant thunder, and while I was looking at them all there came one terrific crash loud enough to wake the dead. The mother turned over, but neither of the children moved. Then followed one crash after another, and I expected that at last the mother would wake up and take a look at her children. But she slept on. She must have been very tired or had lost a lot of sleep, or she couldn't have slept through those terrible bolts. Never had I heard such thunder before.

The only effect the storm had on any of them was to increase the restlessness of the boy. He rolled and tumbled in his sleep like a ship tossed by the waves, sometimes lying for a few minutes close against his mother's bed, then rolling over to the outer edge of his own. I was sure he'd in time tumble out of this bed, as he had out of the other, and I was bound to see him do it. Sure enough, before I expected it he gave a lurch and landed plumb on top of his sister.

Neither of them awoke.

I reckon women know in their sleep what's going on with their children, for, now that the storm was over and everything was still as the tomb, the mother sat up in bed, glanced at her children, got up and put them in their proper places. Then she went back to bed herself and was asleep in a moment.

"Well," I said to myself, "if that's what a clear conscience will furnish I'm going to have a clear conscience." I went back to my room resolved never to enter any man's house again but my own, at least not for plunder. I went to bed and slept like a top for twenty-four hours.

I kept my resolution, found honorable employment and prospered. But I didn't forget the family that converted me. The mother was a widow, and, having a hard time to get on, I made her acquaintance and married her.

But none of my family know that I had been a burglar or how I came to know them.

Stones, Bones And Bugs.

[Copyright, 1905, by American Press Association.]

When the —— university scientific expedition was made up it was decided to unite professional work with pleasure. Some of the professors took their wives, some their daughters, and among the bachelors and young ladies there one or two incipient love affairs. For instance, Miss Nellie Marchand, whose father occupied the chair of the French language and literature, had been attracted to young Professor Stewart, curator of the university museum. Professor Stewart was so intent upon stones, bones and bugs that he had no eye for the charms of the young lady, who, by the bye, was very pretty.

Having reached a far western spot rich in geological and other specimens, the party settled for the summer in camp, making forays in parties, in couples or individually. When they left the east the Indians on a not far distant reservation were as peaceful as a litter of kittens. Before the university party had been in camp a fortnight the red men had broken their limits and were ready to tomahawk any white man, woman or child they met. One morning a cowboy rode into the camp and announced the fact to the startled intellectuals. What added to the terror occasioned by the news was that there were several small groups at the time out looking for specimens.

Among those who were out and did not come in was the curator. Miss Nellie Marchand took note of this fact before any one else. Although she was in agony at his danger, she said nothing, but started out in the direction she had seen the professor go an hour before to warn him. She walked a mile, regardless of her own danger, in her effort to warn the man she loved, when, coming to a rise in the ground, she saw a sight that paralyzed her. Barely 200 yards from her was Professor Stewart cracking a stone with a hammer, and not a hundred yards from the professor were a dozen Indians on ponies dashing toward him with blood in their eyes.

The first thing Miss Marchand did was to faint. This was blind luck, for, falling, she was concealed from view.

Meanwhile the red men swooped down on the professor, who on hearing a clatter looked up to behold immediate redhot death. However, since he was one white man against their dozen they were not in a hurry. Torture or murder might wait. What they were first absorbed in was their captive's possessions. They knew enough of civilization to appreciate the value of his watch, hammer, loose change and penknife. They plunged their hands in his other pockets and took out stones. Every receptacle was filled with them—stones, stones, nothing but stones. But in his inside vest pocket were some decayed bones. The Indians looked at one another in wonder.

A tiny box lay near. Suddenly noticing it, they made a rush for it. Here at last must be something they could exchange for fire water, for powder, lead, blankets. Opening it, their wonder was tenfold. It was full of bugs.

Suddenly an explanation came to the leader. He tapped his forehead with his finger. The others saw his meaning and assented. The professor was an imbecile.

One of the redeeming features of the North American Indian has always been kindness for the feebleminded. Any injury to such persons they consider sure to be visited upon them. They closed the bug box and handed it to their captive. They picked up the stones they had scattered about and placed them again in the professor's pockets. They restored his watch and other useful articles. Then, their march for a definite purpose having been interrupted, they mounted their ponies and rode hurriedly away. Professor Stewart turned his face straight toward the camp and began to triangulate in that direction.

Miss Marchand recovered consciousness, crawled forward and, looking over the crest, saw the Indians rifling what she supposed to be the curator's dead body. She fainted again. When the professor came that way with his stones and bones and his box of bugs he saw a sight that astonished him—the body of Miss Marchand. Perhaps it was an exuberance of feeling at his escape; perhaps it was the girl's condition. At any rate, it struck him that there was something in her dearer than stones, bones and bugs. Kneeling beside her, he pressed his warm lips against her cold ones.

Now, it happened that after Miss Marchand started out to warn Professor Stewart not only she, but the [illegible], was missed. Every one in camp started out in a different direction to hunt for them. Mrs. Marchand and Professor Mackinnon happened to meet near the very spot where Professor Stewart found Miss Nellie and at the moment he kissed her.

Under the warmth of the curator's kiss the young lady revived, gave a little shriek of delight at seeing him safe, then caught sight of her mother approaching. She rose, blushing. Professor Stewart, elated at his escape, shouted:

"Hurrah! I'm crazy."

"I should think so," said Mrs. Marchand severely.

This recalled the professor to himself, and while the four were hurrying to camp he explained what had occasioned his apparently idiotic remark.

Professor Stewart says it was Miss Marchand's brave act in going to look for him that settled matters between them.

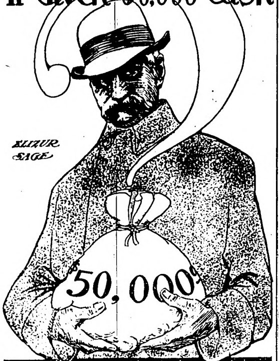
What Would You Do If Given $50,000 Cash



WHAT TO DO WITH $50,000.

Five years ago Russell Sage left his nephew, Elizur Sage, of Rensselaer, Ind., $50,000 in cash.

What did he do with it?

He did not squander it.

He says the schemers didn't get it.

The town says the schemers got a part of it, anyhow.

Sage put most of it into land. The land increased in value, and probably he still is worth $50,000, or perhaps a little more.

He had no desire to travel or spend.

He finds that money—even gift money—is a burden.

He was happier before he had wealth.

He is not happy, according to his own confession.

What would you do with $50,000?

WHAT would you do with $50,000?

It isn't that any one has a right to ask, presupposing the $50,000 to be your own, but supposing that some beneficent spirit, seeing your need and extreme worthiness, were to come like the good fairies of our somnolescent dreams and deposit such a sum to your credit in an accommodating bank! What would you do with it?

To tell this story one must go back. A little more than five years ago there lived on a rented farm north of the quaint little town of Rensselaer, Ind., a poor sort of soil tiller well past middle life. What he was able to glean each year, past rent and depreciation, kept him and his flock alive. That was all. He had never saved nor had anything. The horizon of his ambition lay close on his shoulders. No star glinted in the future, no regrets stalked the dun past. As he says himself:

"I was happy and careless then. Nothing worried me. When I got done with a hard day's work I slept. That was all. It was good in a way."

But the poor farm renter had an enormously rich relative—so rich, in fact, that the world drew a deeper and more envious breath at the symbolical sound of his name. A hard, cold man was this relative, sitting disconsolately by the great heaps of his heartless gold, harsh, cynical, introspective but never responsive, imbittered of success—that hardest of all drugs to drink in sanity. The poor renter had seen this Midas only once or twice, and his experiences with him had been anything but encouraging.

But one night death turned over the last shekel, put gold on the eyes and lips of the rich man, and asked him what he could buy with it of the worms. The will left $50,000 to the poor renter.

This is not a fairy tale. Everything about it is fact—hard, callous, and, for that matter, uncompromising fact. The rich man was Russell Sage and the poor renter was Elizur Sage, Rensselaer, Ind., his nephew. Russell Sage has been dead five years and Elizur Sage has been affluent ever since. Whether he expected anything of his rich relative one may judge from this little story:

Some years before, Elizur Sage was living on a little farm in Illinois. There fire wiped out his house and crippled him sorely. In his need, being too poor to have any standing with bankers and lenders of money, he appealed by letter to his multimillionaire relative for aid. The sum he asked was ridiculously small. Many a poorer man than Russell Sage has spent greater amounts for an evening's divertisement. But the hard eyed old financier didn't do business on the charitable plan.

Transaction Typical of Sage.

One may recall that he let his wife yearn for years after velvet carpets. But he did finally tell his relative he might have what money he needed under certain conditions. In the end Elizur Sage asked only $50, which was sent him, and in return he gave Russell Sage a mortgage on his place to guarantee this enormous sum.

The newspapers got hold of the story at the time, and as a result a New York museum proprietor offered Elizur Sage $200 a week to appear with his son in the museum as the man who had succeeded in borrowing $50 of Russell Sage. The nephew never appeared and the experience has made him a bit chary of newspapers and museums. That they told only what was true of his rich relative has not softened the sting.

But in the end Elizur Sage got his $50,000—all his own, to do with as he pleased—and there was no Russell Sage alive to ask a mortgage. There is more tragedy in this than may crop out of white paper and black ink. There is here the ruin of youth, the wrecking of hopes and enjoyments. In the end there is prosperity when the age for such things is past, when the ability to enjoy is dead. Elizur Sage was 58 years old when the legacy came.

"I might have acted different if I had been younger," he said, "but I wasn't no young man any more, and I guess havin' a little money didn't do much like makin' me crazy."

Neither did it make him happy. In all the things Elizur Sage says of his gift gold there is no trace of any genuine enjoyment. He is more secure than he was, but that is all. He isn't sure that his money has made him enjoy life more.

Sage did not squander his money.

A bit of native shrewdness is responsible for the fact that the sharpers haven't it all.

Sage invested at least a large part of his legacy in land.

He still has the land, incumbered or otherwise, and it has appreciated.

Wealth Fails to Bring Happiness.

He is neither happy nor satisfied.

"I went into the war at 13," he said, in beginning his story, "and I was in the service until I was 16, in the first Chicago Board of Trade regiment. Captain Sexton, my commander, was afterwards postmaster in Chicago. On leaving the service I went back to my father, who was in Will county, Illinois, in a little town. He was a carpenter and I learned this trade from him. He also owned a farm. At 29, in 1869, I went to farming on his place and stayed there till 1872 or 1873, when my father died and the estate was divided. Then I ran a little grocery and meat market for about five years and then came to Indiana and rented a farm. Then for a year I was back on a farm in Illinois again, and in 1890 I came back here to Indiana. I've been here ever since."

Sage was more than willing to say that previous to the coming of the $50,000 he had been absolutely poor.

"No. I had nothing in those days but a living. I was happy and careless then," he said. "Nothing worried me. When I got done with a hard day's work I slept. That was all there was to it. It was good in a way—no cares and nothing. I guess I was just about as well off. As long as anybody has his health I guess he's about as happy as he can be made."

"What happened when you got the money?" was asked.

"Well, the first thing, it put me into a peck o' trouble. Friends I never had before came in. They sprung up thick and fast. Them that didn't know me before the money came were anxious to be my friends then. Letters and requests for money began to come in by packs. Borrowers came to me without any security and thought I ought to lend 'em just because my money had been given me. Every kind of scheme was offered me where I could double my money in a month or a year.

"I didn't feel quite as contented as I had before, but I guess that's just natural. Before I didn't have any fear of being robbed or cheated. But when I got my money I went right to the bank with it and left it there. I didn't bite on their schemes. Whenever they hunted me I got leary of 'em. No sirree, they didn't get me on any get-rich-quick stuff."

Mr. Sage said it as if proud of the fact.

"But I knew that land was the safest place to put money," he said, "so I bought land. That's the place to put it so you can't lose it. It was a wise thing. My land has increased in value so much that I could sell out now and clean up $36,000. I invested nearly all my money in land."

"And what do you think of the general idea of giving large sums of money to people in that way?"

"Well, I think it must be a bad thing. People don't know what a dollar is much unless they earn it themselves. I guess it would have been like that with me if it had come earlier. Money ought to come kind of slow. It would 'a' been a bad thing for me if it had come 25 years earlier, but I was 58 when it did drop in. I'd had a little more experience then; I'd got all over these here wild notions and didn't have no foolish ideas like runnin' around. After 45 or 50 a man don't give much for these get-rich quick schemes."

Mr. Sage told something of his land investments. He possesses, by his own statement, two farms in Indiana and one in Ohio. Those in the Hoosier state are both near Rensselaer, one three or four miles from town and the other much further. The nearer farm contains 180 acres, the other 1?? acres, and that in Ohio 160 acres.

Farms Seem Good Investment.

Both the Indiana farms are fine rich prairie land worth not less than $150 an acre. When they were bought five years ago they probably brought about half that sum. What the Ohio property may bring cannot be said. On the nearer one of the Indiana farms the Sage heir has built a big, nice-looking country home with an unfinished appearance. It has its own gas lighting and water plants, and probably represents a cash investment of $5,000 to $6,000. There are, besides, stables, sheds, coops, sheep sheds, and other minor buildings representing perhaps another $1,500.

The second farm, further removed, is not so much improved. There is little value there aside from the actual land. The home place is, so Rensselaer knows and says, on the market at $175 an acre, with the usual reservation that a bid of less will be carefully considered.

In explaining this Rensselaer gossips do not say that Sage is hard up or that he has spent his money, but they say he has never made an impression on Rensselaer. The little town's society folk have refused to recognize the man who got rich by another's will, so the Sages are unhappy and wish to move to Ohio to begin over, as it were, and establish themselves socially as well as financially. Perhaps that is why Elizur Sage says he was happier before he got the legacy.—New York World.

Value of Good Teeth.

The principal of a school in Cleveland, Ohio, has reported marked improvement in the children who are under observation to prove that there is a relation between the teeth and the mind, and that having poor teeth not only makes for sickness of the body, but affects the mind as well. Of nearly forty children taking the test, it was found that only two showed absolutely no improvement.

SAYINGS OF THE FLUSTERED

People Will Make Most Absurd Remarks When Suddenly Hailed as Somebody Else.

The other day a pretty young matron, swathed in a veil, entered a car, already nearly full of passengers, where she expected to join her husband, and possibly to find her sister, also. The car was dim, and she had not yet put up her veil. She dropped into the seat beside a familiar looking figure, and entertained her neighbors by exclaiming, as she did so:

"Oh, here you are, dear!"

"No, ma'am, I ain't; I'm somebody else," declared her startled seatmate, turning.

"Do excuse me!" cried the lady hastily. "Of course I can see now you're just a man, but I thought for a moment you were my husband."

"Is be a lady, ma'am? Because if he ain't, that's likely to be him beckonin' across the aisle, and if he is, that's her flourishin' a handkerchief three seats down. Seems as if one of 'em must be the person you're lookin' for."

"Oh, thank you! They both are."

A familiar case of fluster occurred at a waiting station, where a tall young lady, wearing a raincoat of undistinctive cut and color and a heavy veil, and bearing as it chanced, the commonest of feminine names and surnames, and therefore the combination most likely to make trouble, was greeted by a strange young man, who suddenly laid a hand on her arm, exclaiming:

"Why, Mary Smith! You darling girl!"

Greatly startled, the girl accosted, not quite sure whether she were the victim of an error or an impertinence, endeavored by disclaiming the epithet while acknowledging the name, to put the effusive youth in his proper place; but her flurried nerves betrayed her tongue. To her horror, she heard herself announce, in tones of chilling dignity, "I am certainly a darling girl, sir, but I am not, Mary Smith."

Hastily endeavoring to correct this statement, she only succeeded in turning it round.

"I am not Mary Smith," she stated, icily, "but I am certainly a darling girl."

Before she could entangle herself further the young man remarked politely: "Both facts are quite apparent, madam, and I beg your pardon. I mistook you for my cousin, Mary Smith, who is another."

"But the facts are not apparent!" she cried, desperately. "I am Mary Smith, and I was trying to say so, only I was so flustered I kept saying something else!"

"That is what I supposed," he admitted, and he allowed himself a laugh in which she could not help joining.—Youth's Companion.

Get Your Present Ready.

"I see the young lady next door has a beau."

"She assures me that it is purely a platonic affection."

"In that case you had better look over something cheap in clocks, or something of that kind."

HEATER FOR AN AUTOMOBILE

Series of Pipes, Arranged Like a Griddle, Keeps Car Warm by Distributing Exhaust.

By installing the heating apparatus invented by an Ohio man a motorist may now keep his car as warm in winter as it is cool in summer. A series of pipes, like a griddle, is positioned under the body of the car, preferably horizontally. These form a radiator which reaches to every corner of the seating portion of the vehicle and distributes the heat thoroughly. This radiator is connected with the exhaust pipe of the engine and the exhaust of heated air that would otherwise pass out the back wasted is put to good use keeping the occupants of the car cozily warm in the colder days of automobiling. Any motorist knows how hot his muffler grows from the accumulation of exhaust that is held in that receptacle for a while to prevent too noisy an escape. He can easily understand, then, how nicely that same amount of heat would keep the temperature up in his car.

INVALID'S CHAIR IS USEFUL

Designed by New York Man With View of Carrying It Up and Down Stairs—Lighter Than Others.

Most invalids' chairs are of a cumbersome type and when the occupant is to be transported up and down stairs he and the chair must be carried separately. A New York man has designed a chair which is not only much lighter than the average, but has appliances to assist in moving it up and down stairs. The front legs of this chair are equipped with castors and the short back legs are mounted on wheels. The back rises into two curved handles and a pair of supplemental handles are pivoted to the rear legs. Ordinarily these supplemental handles are fastened in a vertical position, but when the invalid is to be taken from one floor to another they are let down in a horizontal position and held firmly there by catches on the front legs of the chair. This provides supporting means at both back and front and greatly facilitates the transportation of the chair.

University Aviation.

Aviation as a science has been recognized by one of the most dignified educational bodies of Europe, the university of Paris, and an aerotechnical institute has been established and is now just beginning work under its direction. This was made possible by an endowment of $100,000 by Henry Deutsch, and an annual income of $3,000.

The new institute is on the plateau of St. Cyr, near Versailles, and on the edge of the maneuver field of the military school. It consists of a large group of buildings and laboratories, with a track for launching gliders, and all the apparatus that has so far been invented for the study of meteorology, air currents, air resistance and the many problems connected with flight which are now so imperfectly understood.

New Flying Machine.

A Scotch inventor is building a flying machine weighing about six tons, designed to carry 20 or 30 passengers. It will cost about $25,000. In shape it resembles a bird and embodies the rotary theory of flight. Each wing will be a large gyroscope, revolving horizontally, like inverted basins. It is claimed that the rotary wings will enable the machine to travel in any kind of weather and by its own power raise itself vertically from the ground. Aviators and experts, however, express considerable doubt as to the success of the machine, and question whether one weighing so much can lift itself from the ground or prove a decided success in other ways.

WHY SUN CHANGES IN SIZE

Varied Opinions Are Due to Fact That There Is Nothing With Which to Compare It.

Ask ten people how large the sun looks to them when it is in midheaven, and you will get ten different opinions of its size, which range from a silver dollar to a cart wheel. The varied opinions are due to the fact that there is nothing with which to compare it when looked at by itself. Before any accurate estimate of its size can be made, we must have some known object with which to compare it.

Thus, when the sun is on the horizon and appears to be close to houses, trees and hills, it looks large. To some people it seems as large as a house or tree. Moreover, there are more persons who will agree that it appears to be a certain fixed size under this condition that will agree when it is viewed at the zenith. The diversity of opinion in the latter case results from the inability of the eye to "size up" an isolated object.

This has been proved by Prof. E. C. Landis, by projecting a narrow beam of light on a perfectly black, nonreflecting screen so placed that the observer could see nothing but the beam of light, and had no way of judging his distance from the screen. The observations of several persons under these conditions revealed the fact that there was no certainty about the length of the beam, the apparent length being estimated all the way from a few inches to several feet.

This being the case when the sun is in midheaven, how can its size be reduced to some uniform standard?

The most logical answer is found by representing it as a circle located at a fixed distance from the eye.

PIANO PLAYER IS PNEUMATIC

One Object of Invention Is to Provide Device Which Will Be Strong and Durable in Its Action.

In referring to an invention recently patented by William G. MacArthur of New York, the Scientific American says:

This invention relates to an improved piano-player, an accompanying illustration of which shows it in a vertical section through a piano with the attachment thereon. An object of the invention is to provide a device which will be inexpensive to manufacture, strong, durable and both quick and positive in its action. A further object is the provision of a piano playing attachment in which the pneumatic portion of operating mechanism is attached directly to the keys, whereby a great saving in space and more positive and sensitive movement is obtained.

Curious Luminous Lamps.

In France, by the cultivation of luminous marine microbes in a liquid medium contained in little glass vessels, there have been produced some of the most curious lamps imaginable. If a few of these living lamps are arranged about a bust in a dark room, the bust is made plainly visible and photographs may be taken of it.

Organs of Sense in Animals.

The organs of sense in the lower animals are situated at times in very unexpected places. There are creatures which have eyes on their backs, ears in their legs, and that sing through their sides. The power of scent in the dog and of sight in the eagle is much more acute than ours.

FATE AND THE FLETCHERS

Intervention That Made It Certain Hour for Senator's Death Had Not Struck.

Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida sought his berth one night on a sleeping car on the way south from Washington. Pulling back the curtains of a lower nine, he saw that his bed was already occupied.

"Hi, there!" called the senator, shaking the stranger by the shoulder.

The sleeper awoke and protested angrily.

"My name's Fletcher," explained the statesman, "and this is my berth."

"You've got nothing on me," answered the other. "My name's Fletcher, and this is my berth."

"My full name is Duncan U. Fletcher," the senator elaborated.

"So's mine," agreed the intruder.

"Ah, I see," said the senator, politely. "There must have been a mistake in reserving the same berth for two men of the same name. I'll go into the next sleeping car."

The stranger, by this time, was fully awake, and proceeded to apologize, and to offer to give up the berth. This the senator would not do, but went into the car ahead, and found a place to sleep.

An hour later the train was wrecked. The car in which the stranger occupied the lower nine fell through a trestle, and that Fletcher was killed. The senator's car was not damaged at all.—Popular Magazine.

MRS. SELBY AND PRIZE BABY

"I have always used Cuticura Soap and no other for my baby and he has never had a sore of any kind. He does not even chafe as most babies do. I feel sure that it is all owing to Cuticura Soap, for he is fine and healthy, and when five months old, won a prize in a baby contest. It makes my heart ache to go into so many homes and see a sweet-faced baby with the whole top of its head a solid mass of scurf, caused by poor soap. I always recommend Cuticura, and nine times out of ten the next time I see the mother she says: 'Oh! I am so glad you told me of Cuticura.'" (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Redondo Beach, California, Jan. 15, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 20 L, Boston.

The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity

Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.

Now's the Time

—not a year from now, when land will be higher. The profits secured from the abundant crops of Wheat, Oats and Barley, as well as cattle raising, are causing a steady advance in price. Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 50 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year.

Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop.

Free Homesteads of 160 acres and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Fine climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates; wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

Caring for Consumptives.

There are now four special methods by which consumptive workingmen in the United States are being cared for. In such cities as Albany, Elmira and Binghamton, N. Y., the unions support a separate pavilion or hospital. In cities like Hartford, New Britain and South Manchester, Conn., the workmen contribute towards the maintenance of a fund for the care of consumptives. The employers also contribute to these funds. There are also two national sanatoria for the treatment of tuberculosis owned and operated by labor unions; one by the International Typographical union, and the other by the Printing Pressmen and Assistants' union. In Massachusetts, Illinois and elsewhere large corporations and manufacturers have agreed voluntarily to care for all their consumptive employes for a limited length of time.

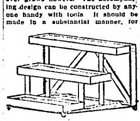
PLANT STAND FOR A WINDOW

One That Can Be Moved Easily Is Always in Demand—Can Be Constructed by Handy Person.

A plant stand that can be moved easily is always in demand by whoever grows flowers. The accompanying design can be constructed by anyone handy with tools. It should be made in a substantial manner, for when weighted down with pots it will be subject to considerable strain when moved, and a flimsy framework would soon come apart and the stand collapse, plants and all.



A Homemade Plant Stand.

Of course, such a stand can be made of any size to fit the window, writes Sylvanus Van Aken in the Orange-Judd Farmer. When one desires to make the room more attractive for a party it may be wheeled away and placed against the wall, the shelves facing the room. It will thus provide a bank of plants and flowers. Its portability is also a great advantage on cold nights, since it saves the labor of moving pots one by one, as is necessary where stationary plants or tables without casters are used.

In summer, when plants go out of doors, it may be set against the side of the house in a sheltered place, and it will be as useful as indoors.

The design illustrated herewith is two feet high, two feet from front to back, and three feet long at the back. The shelves are each eight inches wide and three inches deep. The top one is three feet long, the middle two and one-half feet long and the bottom two feet long. These shelves should be covered with a couple of inches of sand, in which the pots are to be plunged. If this sand is kept moist it will prevent unusual drying of the soil in the pots. The whole framework should be mounted on casters, preferably of iron, and braces should be placed at the back and across the bottom, as shown in the drawing.

CAUSE OF CHESTNUT BLIGHT

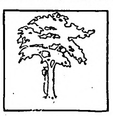
Withering of Trees Is Result of Boring by Insect Between Outer and Inner Bark.

Thomas Davy Candy of Langhorne, near Philadelphia, declares that he has discovered the cause of the blight which is withering chestnut trees in the middle and south Atlantic states. A boring beetle, one-sixteenth of an inch long, black in color, which lays its eggs between the outer and the inner barks, is the primary cause, he says. Grubs are hatched from the eggs, and these penetrate the soft inner bark, following its course around the tree trunk. Above the patch of the borer occurs the blighted appearance. Myriads of the tiny worms were found upon a single tree upon Mr. Candy's land, and the total result of their depredations was so extensive that the tree, he says, appears to have been scorched by fire. The blight has become so serious in Pennsylvania that the legislature appropriated $275,000 to a commission appointed by the governor to investigate the cause of the disease and to devise ways for exterminating it.

METHOD OF COLORING WOOD

Substantial Change in Color of Tissues Effected by Injection of Matter Into Trees.

Staining wood after it has been sawed, planed and converted into woodwork or furniture is a most ordinary procedure, but the staining of the wood while the tree it composes is alive and growing is a departure from old methods. The illustration shows a device by which coloring matter is injected into the tissues of the tree in such manner that it will be distributed by the natural circulation of the sap, thus effecting a substantial change in the color of the tissues with which it comes in contact.



Coloring Growing Wood.

Where Young Trees Thrive.

Trees bear best if every place in the orchard is occupied. Therefore, put out new trees whenever the old ones die. When thus setting out a young tree in an old orchard always spade up the ground for a distance of six or seven feet all around it. The general reason why the young tree nearly always dies in an old orchard is that it is choked out by grass and weeds.

North Hillside for Apples.

Apple trees bear better if the orchard occupies a north hillside. This is true because the winter freeze comes out of the ground later, so that the bloom does not come out until danger of frost is past. All fruits that the frost will injure do better on high ground, because the frost is less severe there.

FOR KILLING PLUM CURCULIO

Jarring Method Can Be Advantageously Practiced—All Ladybugs Should Be Liberated.

"The plum curculio winters in the adult stage, emerging in the spring just as the fruit buds begin to swell," says Prof. J. G. Sanders, head of the economic entomology department of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin. "Immediately, it begins to feed on the young foliage and fruit buds and should be treated with a strong spray of lead arsenate, as this is the only stage at which an arsenical poison is effective in controlling the pest.

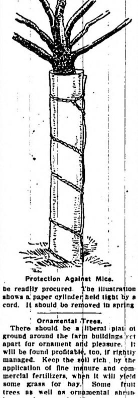
"The curculio is distinguished from the plum gouger in that it never penetrates the fruit stone. The female curculio deposits her eggs in crescent shaped cuts, which she makes on the surface of the fruit. Seven to ten days later, the larvae emerge and about two weeks after this they leave the fruit, crawl into the ground, where they spin a cocoon and pupate. In this stage of the life cycle the insect can be killed by intensive cultivation of the orchard.

"Where labor is cheap the jarring method of control is advantageously practiced," continued Prof. Sanders. "This system involves the use of a canvas, held about waist high under the tree, while the tree is jarred with a padded pole, the curculios falling off upon the canvas where they can be sorted out and destroyed. Any ladybugs which are snared by this method should be liberated, as they are beneficial parasites, which destroy injurious fruit insects."

TO PROTECT AGAINST MICE

Paper Cylinder as Shown in Illustration Will Prove Effective—Should Be Removed in Spring.

Various methods are adopted to protect young trees from being marked by rabbits or mice. Wire screens are expensive, but are also most effective. Wood veneer fastened around is a good protection if it can be readily procured. The illustration shows a paper cylinder held tight by a cord. It should be removed in spring



Protection Against Mice.

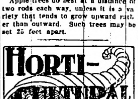
Ornamental Trees.

There should be a liberal plat of ground around the farm buildings set apart for ornament and pleasure. It will be found profitable, too, if rightly managed. Keep the soil rich by the application of fine manure and commercial fertilizers, when it will yield some grass for hay. Some fruit trees as well as ornamental shrubbery and trees should find a congenial soil here. Seats and a swing will be found to be a great pleasure here. The planting out of trees and shrubbery may be done to advantage this month.

Distance for Apples.

Apple trees do best at a distance of two rods each way, unless it is a variety that tends to grow upward rather than outward. Such trees may be set 25 feet apart.

HORTI-CULTURAL NOTES



An orchard neglected for one year virtually puts it back three years.

The size of an apple can be influenced to quite a large degree by picking.

Keep the orchard clear of all dead brush, it being a harbor for injurious insects.

The cellar used for storing fruit must be kept cooler than the vegetable cellar.

The ideal time for picking apples is a matter that must be settled to a large degree by the individual.

The coldest weather does not kill the insects. Therefore spraying is the safest method of killing them.

Pears and apples keep better if picked a little green. Some pears rot from the core outward if allowed to ripen on the tree.

The first advantage of fall planting is that it induces the grower to get his nursery stock earlier than if planting in the spring.

Any kind of fruit tree will die when planted in ground that is all the time saturated with water. The tile ditch is a necessity in such places.

Trees set out in the fall do better when the winter is moderate, as the ground is drier and the trees make a greater growth the next season.

If your trees have been affected with leaf blight during the summer, spray them with bordeaux mixture after the crop has been gathered.

SANITARY WAY OF SWEEPING

Various Methods of Keeping Down the Dust When the Vacuum Cleaner Is Unavailable.

Recently there has been developed a great improvement in housekeeping appliances—the vacuum cleaner. It is not yet perfect, but it contains great promise. This innovation practically "eats the dirt," sucking it into its great tube of a throat, and depositing it in an air-tight receptacle, which may be emptied and cleaned out of doors. If the cleaner is mechanically well constructed and susceptible of easy manipulation, it is a valuable household invention.

Whenever these more effective methods of removing dirt are, for any reason, temporarily impossible, always remember that moisture makes dust not only less harmful, but more manageable. The old-fashioned custom of sprinkling wet tea leaves over the carpet before sweeping was not done for hygienic reasons, but to brighten the colors. It was, however, unintentionally sanitary. Newspapers torn or cut into bits, and thoroughly wet, answer the same purpose and are more easily obtained in the quantity desired. In cases of illness existing in the room to be cleaned, an excellent practice is to saturate these bits of paper with a solution of Platt's chlorides, Electrozone, or a 20 per cent. carbolic solution. Dusting may be accomplished in a sanitary manner by using an oily cloth, or, for some purposes, one moistened with water is better.

Oil is becoming more and more one of the weapons of the sanitarian. By its use the roads in some towns are kept almost free from the dust nuisance, and stagnant and mosquito breeding pools are prevented from contaminating the atmosphere.—Woman's Home Companion.

TO MAKE CLARIFIED BUTTER

Method of Purifying It Which Makes It as Good as Finest Florence Oil.

The following are some of Dr. Kitchener's butter recipes

Clarified Butter.—Put the butter in a nice clean stewpan, over a very clear slow fire, watch it and when it melts carefully skim off the buttermilk, etc., which will swim on the top. Let it stand a minute or two for the impurities to sink to the bottom, then pour the clear butter through a sieve into a clean basin, leaving the sediment at the bottom of the stewpan. Butter thus purified will be as sweet as marrow—a very useful covering for potted meats, etc., and for frying fish, equal to the finest Florence oil.

Burnt Butter.—Put two ounces of fresh butter into a small frying pan. When it becomes a dark brown color add to it a tablespoonful and a half of good vinegar and a little pepper and salt.

Oiled Butter.—Put two ounces of fresh butter into a saucepan, set it at a distance from a fire so that it may melt gradually till it comes to an oil and pour it quietly from the dregs. This will supply the place of olive oil and by some it is preferred either for salads or frying.

Cold Catsup.

Ingredients required: One peck of good tomatoes, firm and ripe. Peel them cold without scalding. Chop fine in chopping bowl and strain off all the juice. This is imperative, for if juice is not all strained off the chopped tomatoes the catsup will not keep. Add to the tomatoes one teacupful of chopped onions, one teacupful chopped celery, one teacupful sugar, one-quarter of a teacupful salt, one teacupful mustard seed, one teaspoonful ground cloves, one teaspoonful black pepper, one teaspoonful cinnamon, four red peppers chopped fine. Mix all ingredients together in large stone jar, then take three pints of pure cider vinegar and mix thoroughly, then bottle. This catsup will keep for three years if care is taken to have the tomatoes free from juice, and pure cider vinegar.

Stuffed Onions.

Take large white, silver skinned onions, or medium sized Spanish onions, and boil gently for an hour in slightly salted water. Then remove the hearts, making room for a large tablespoonful of the stuffing. Make the stuffing of minced cooked calf's liver, a little minced ham or bacon to flavor. To a pound of the liver allow one-third of a cup of gravy or cream; half-cup fine dry bread crumbs; one egg; pepper and salt and some of the onion taken from the center. Mix well and place in the onion cases. Brush over with softened butter and sprinkle lightly, all over, with bread crumbs moistened with butter. Bake a nice brown in a moderately hot oven.

Ingenious Laundry Bag.

Nothing is more annoying than the usual drawstring laundry bag, which always gapes at the wrong moment and refuses to open when it is full. One clever woman has solved the difficulty in a new way. She procured a plain wooden coat hanger, such as can be bought anywhere for five cents, and sewed a chintz bag over it, sewing the bag tight to one side of the hanger and leaving the other side loose, with a slit down the middle about half the way. The top of the bag and the slit are bound with tape, which fastens the loose side around the metal hook of the hanger. Thus the bag is easily opened when needed and keeps properly closed when inconspicuousness is desired.

Pickled Figs.

For every pound of pulled figs allow three-fourths pound sugar and one cupful of water to each pound of sugar; boil five minutes and skim. Drop in figs and let simmer until fork will penetrate them, being careful that they are not too soft. Put in jars with a few cloves, bits of cinnamon, and very little mace. Cover well with sirup. Do not close jars for three mornings. Each day pour off sirup without removing figs; reheat to boiling point and pour over figs. On the third morning measure sirup and allow one cupful of vinegar to three cupfuls of sirup. Boil and pour over figs; seal while hot.

Longevity Personified.

Senator Benjamin F. Tillman relates an amusing anecdote about a colored man named Jeff, who has been with a neighboring South Carolina family since before the war.

"One day," said Mr. Tillman, "his mistress was rather surprised when old Jeff asked to have a few days off to go, as he put it, 'up to de old state of Bosting,' to see his aunt.

"'Why, Jeff,' said the lady, 'your aunt must be pretty old, isn't she?'

"'Yes'm,' he replied, 'yes'm; mah aunt must be pretty ole now—she's 'bout ah hundred an' five years ole now.'

"'One hundred and five years!' exclaimed his mistress, 'what on earth is she doing up there in Boston?'

"'Deed, I's dunno what's she's doin', ma'am,' rejoined old Jeff, in all seriousness, 'she's up dere livin' wid her gran'mother.'"

Youth and Age.

"The difference between youth and age was never so well put," said Rev. C. W. Penlow, in an address at an Ocean Grove beach meeting, "as by a playwright who wrote:

"'Youth, which is forgiven everything, forgives itself nothing. Age, which forgives itself everything, is forgiven nothing.'"

JUST BEFORE THE TROUBLE

How Could the Listener Know What His Friend Was Trying to Say?

If any man ever admired his wife, that man was Howler. And when the Fitzboodles asked Mrs. Howler to get up and sing, "There Is a Garden in My Face," the husband glowed with pride.

No matter that she had a face like a hippopotamus and a voice like an elephant, he sat beaming as she sang, and could not refrain from bending over to his neighbor and whispering: "Don't you think my wife's got a fine voice?"

"What?" said his neighbor, who was a little deaf.

"Don't you think my wife has got a fine voice?" repeated Howler.

"What?"

"Don't you think my wife's got a fine voice?" roared Howler.

"Sorry!" returned the neighbor, shaking his head. "Can't hear a word you say. That awful woman over there is making such a frightful row singing."

Death Bed Jest.

Among what may be called deathbed jests, that of the Rev. James Guthrie of Stirling, one of the Covenanter martyrs, deserves a high place. Lord Guthries recalls the story in "From a Northern Window." Mr. Guthries was executed at the Cross in the High street, Edinburgh. The night before he asked for cheese for supper. His friends wondered, for the physicians had forbidden him to eat cheese. But he said, with a smile, "I am now beyond the hazard of all earthly diseases."—Uncle Remus' Magazine.

POSTUM
Brazilian Coffee Grower

We Get a Slap

The big coffee trust, made up of Brazilian growers and American importers, has been trying various tactics to boost the price of coffee and get more money from the people.

Always the man who is trying to dig extra money out of the public pocket, on a combination, hates the man who blocks the game.

Now comes a plaintive bleat from the "exasperated" ones.

The Journal of Commerce lately said: "A stirring circular has just been issued to the coffee trade." The article further says:

"The coffee world is discussing what is to be the future of coffee as a result of the campaign of miseducation carried on by the cereal coffee people. We have before us a letter from one of the largest roasters in the South asking what can be done to counteract the work of the enemies of coffee.

"The matter should have been taken up by the Brazilian Gov't when they were completing their beautiful valorization scheme."

Then the article proceeds to denounce Postum and works into a fine frenzy, because we have published facts regarding the effect of coffee on some people.

The harrowing tale goes on.

"Where few years ago everybody drank coffee, several cups a day, now we find in every walk in life people who imagine they cannot drink it. (The underscoring is ours.) Burly blacksmiths, carpenters, laborers and athletes have discontinued or cut down the use of coffee; as there is not a person who reads this and will not be able to find the same conditions existing among his own circle of acquaintances, is it not well for the Brazilians to sit up and take notice?"

Isn't it curious these "burly" strong men should pick out coffee to "imagine" about? Why not "imagine" that regular doses of whiskey are harmful, or daily slugs of morphine?

If "imagination" makes the caffeine in coffee clog the liver, depress the heart, and steadily tear down the nervous system, bringing on one or more of the dozens of types of diseases which follow broken-down nervous systems, many people don't know it.

But it remained for the man who has coffee, morphine or whiskey to sell, to have the supreme nerve to say: "You only imagine your disorders. Keep on buying from me."

Let us continue to quote from his article.

"Notwithstanding the enormous increase in population during the past three years, coffee shows an appalling decrease in consumption."

* * * * *

Then follows a tiresome lot of statistics which wind up by showing a decrease of consumption in two years of, in round figures, two hundred million pounds.

Here we see the cause for the attacks on us and the Brazilian sneers at Americans who prefer to use a healthful, home-made breakfast drink and incidentally keep the money in America, rather than send the millions to Brazil and pay for an article that chemists class among the drugs and not among the foods.

Will the reader please remember, we never announce that coffee "hurts all people."

Some persons seem to have excess vitality enough to use coffee, tobacco and whiskey for years and apparently be none the worse, but the number is small, and when a sensible man or woman finds an article acts harmfully they exercise some degree of intelligence by dropping it.

We quote again from the article:

"These figures are paralyzing but correct, being taken from Leech's statistics, recognized as the most reliable."

* * * * * * *

This is one of the highest compliments ever paid to the level-headed, common sense of Americans who cut off about two hundred million pounds of coffee when they found by actual experiment (in the majority of cases) that the subtle drug caffeine, in coffee, worked discomfort and varying forms of disease.

Some people haven't the character to stop a habit when they know it is killing them, but it is easy to shift from coffee to Postum, for, when made according to directions, it comes to table a cup of beverage, seal brown color, which turns to rich golden brown when cream is added, and the taste is very like the milder grades of Old Gov't Java.

Postum is a veritable food-drink and highly nourishing, containing all the parts of wheat carefully prepared to which is added about ten per cent of New Orleans molasses, and that is absolutely all that Postum is made of.

Thousands of visitors to the pure food factories see the ingredients and how prepared. Every nook and corner is open for every visitor to carefully inspect. Crowds come daily and seem to enjoy it.

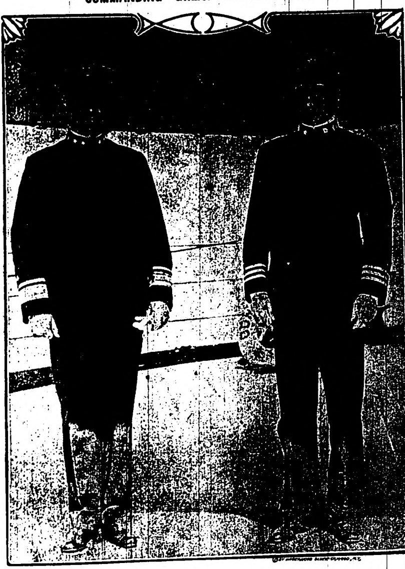
COMMANDING GREAT ATLANTIC FLEET



OUR photograph shows Rear Admiral Hugh Osterhaus (left), and Capt. William R. Shoemaker, chief of staff, on the flagship Connecticut in New York harbor just previous to the review, by Secretary of the Navy Meyer, of the Atlantic squadron. Over nine miles of the Hudson river stretched the vast Armada, in which were 102 war vessels with a total tonnage of 577,285.

GRAND CANYON GOLD LURES

Men Seek Riches Washed Into Bed of Colorado River for Centuries—Dredges Being Installed.

Denver, Colo.—Endeavors at last are being made to compel the Grand canyon of the Colorado to give up the gold which has been washed into its bed for centuries. Several concerns are preparing to conduct operations on a large scale to overcome obstacles to get these riches.

It has long been known that there was much gold in the bed of the Colorado canyon. Explorers who have been in various parts of the great abyss have reported deposits of gravel and black sand that apparently ran to a great depth and that promised values, although well distributed in the sand and gravel. Attempts have been made to interest capital in plans to get out this wealth, but heretofore there has been no success, because propositions easier to get at and involving smaller expenditures of money and risk have attracted most of the capital available.

In recent years, however, several syndicates have been formed to get out the gold. One, backed by eastern capital, has been at work for some time at Lee's ferry. This is a desolate place, far from any railway, but it has offered the best opportunity for such work, being at the point where the river runs out of the sand hills after cutting through them for hundreds of miles and running for a few miles about at a level before dipping into the marble canyon. Dredges have been installed here after being hauled far over the desert. Black sand impregnated with gold and platinum and gravel having small nuggets of gold in it have been found here, and the enterprise promises to be highly profitable. This sand and gravel runs to a depth of from thirty to sixty feet before bedrock is touched, and the dredges can take it out in great quantities.

Above this point, in Utah, where the cliffs are not high, similar operations have been put under way. Here it is said that the conditions are similar to those found at Lee's ferry, except that there are evidences of even richer values. Parties have gone out into the wild regions between these two points to explore for places where the river can be reached. Reports have been received that wherever the prospects can be made conditions are found favorable. Nature, however, has provided huge battlements to defend these riches, and there is doubt whether many of the deposits can be exploited profitably.

"Bell Hop" for 52 Years.

San Diego, Cal.—Lester Ladd, 52 years a bellboy, celebrated his 68th birthday anniversary here. His last job in a hotel was at the U. S. Grant, which he left but a few weeks ago. He is now running the elevator in the Union building. He was born in Hudson street, New York, when that thoroughfare was one of the fashionable residence streets of the metropolis. He became a bellboy at 16 and since then has worked at the Buckingham, St. Louis; the Palmer house, Chicago; the Morton house, New York; the Piedmont, Atlanta; the De Soto, Savannah, and the Tampa Bay hotel at Tampa.

Horse Bus Is Gone.

London.—When Andrew Gibson, for 37 years the driver of an omnibus in London, throws down his reins some night near the end of the present month, the last horse-drawn bus will have finished its final trip through the streets of the world's metropolis.

Gibson shakes his gray head sadly over the prospect and declares that the London of the motorbus and taxicab is not as happy as the London of the days when people were content to move slower. At the hey-day of Gibson's career the two omnibus companies of London owned 31,000 horses.

MORE CURIOUS THAN WOMEN

Observations Tend to Prove Assertion That Inquisitiveness Is Really Masculine Trait.

London.—Once more man is being convicted of what is supposed to be almost exclusively a feminine failing.

Men, it is now suggested, are much more inquisitive and anxious to poke their fingers into other people's pies than are women.

A well-known lady novelist, whose experience of social conditions is exceptionally large, made this interesting statement:

"One has only to go to the theater or a garden party to notice the insatiable curosity of the modern man," she said.

"In theaters it is the men who discuss the appearance of other people, asking innumerable questions and standing up, glasses in hand, between the acts to glean more information

"It seems to me that a man's curiosity grows with his age. The elderly gossip, who is always fishing for scandals, is to be found everywhere nowadays.

"Women, on the other hand, especially elderly women, are not really curious concerning their surroundings. Girls, of course, are prying and inquisitive; but they do not count.

"It is high time that the fallacy about women being more curious than men were exploded."

Recently a newspaper man visited the west end and made several "observation tests."

Crowds of men and women passing Charing Cross on their way to the theaters were first observed. The number of people who "looked around"—who turned their heads to watch passersby—within a space of five minutes was roughly, as follows:

Out of 100 people 20 men looked around and ten women looked around.

A visit to a teashop on the Strand revealed groups of young men gossiping together and discussing other customers.

A station official on the Southeast & Chatham railway said that a test of the curiosity of the sexes could be obtained by watching those people who read the labels of other people's luggage.

There were piles of luggage destined for the continent in Victoria station, and the numbers of men who sauntered by, turning their heads at all angles to catch a glimpse of the hotel labels and the names of the owners, was remarkable.

HOBO WITH DESIRE TO WORK

Chicago Judge Sees $700 Cash, Cashier's Check for $350 and Book Showing $500 Deposit.

Chicago.—Chicago police the other day rounded up a curiosity—a hobo with a bank roll and an alleged desire for work.

Judge Maxwell in the Desplaines street court saw the roll, but had to take the bo's word for it that he was fond of work.

Joseph N. Norman, who declares his original home was at Piedmont, W. Va., and says his moniker while he is traveling is "West Virginia Slim," was arrested while seated in his "side door Pullman" enjoying a smoke and studying the terminal facilities of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad as his train pulled in from the south.

The first thing discovered on his person when taken to the Des Plaines street station was a roll of bills amounting to $700, a cashier's check for $350 and a passbook showing a deposit of $500 in a West Virginia bank. In addition "Slim" was well supplied with small change.

"Great Scott! Is this Rockefeller or Morgan you've brought in?" asked Judge Maxwell, as he watched "Slim" nonchalently hand over his funds.

"Quit yer kiddin', jedge," replied "Slim." "I ain't no millionaire. I'm just a ordinary bo. But you see there's one difference; I like to work and—"

"What's that?" gasped the judge.

"Sure. I go to work every winter and chop wood and save my money by 'hittin' a rattler' instead of paying fare. I'm on my way to Wisconsin. I kin pay my fine, all right."

"No, I won't fine you," declared the judge approvingly. "You're too thrifty. Be on your way, but don't steal any more rides."

"That's some jedge," declared "Slim" as he pocketed his wealth and strolled out of court.

If you wish me to weep, you yourself must feel grief.

LAUGHS AT FAT "COP;" FINED

German's Mirth Soon Changed in Court on "Scandal" Charge—Sentenced to Prison for Week.

Berlin.—Berlin law certainly seems far-reaching. Because he laughed, an iron worked the other day was sent to prison for a week. Going along the street, he saw a merrymaker being chased by a particularly stout policeman and the sight tickled him. He was promptly haled before the court for scandal. Another man attempted to get into a moving train and fractured his leg. After six months in the hospital he was discharged cured, when the state railway department at once prosecuted him for breaking their regulations. The law and leg breaker was fined 5s. Stepping into an omnibus, a man trod on the foot of a lady, who was so annoyed that she said he walked like a hen. She was fined $5 for using this term of speech.

CAPTAIN PICKERING

Hustling Leader of Minnesota Eleven.

CORNELL CREW STARTS WORK

Practice Started by 1915 Team for Next Season's Events—Candidates Number Over 100.

The 1915 crew practice has started at Cornell, under the supervision of Coach John J. Hoyle, assisted by Coxswains H. J. Kimball, '11, and C. F. Merz, '12, and other former crew men who will spend their spare afternoons at the crew room for the next few weeks.

Charles E. Courtney has not been seen much at the crew room, preferring to spend his time at the boat house supervising the work of several varsity candidates who are working out on the water this fall. It is probable that he will not take charge of the freshmen until Coach Hoyle makes up several combinations to send down to the inlet within a few weeks. About twenty additional freshmen have entered, bringing the total number of 1915 candidates above the 100 mark.

Women Crews Will Race.

A varsity intercollegiate boat race between women crews from the University of California and Stanford in the latest innovation in college athletic activities, and if the present plans of the California women do not miscarry the Pacific coast college public will witness the spectacle of two women's crews struggling for victory over a regulation racing course equipped with a regulation shell.

Griffith After Lincoln Team.

Clark Griffith, manager of the Cincinnati National league team, is said here to be a possible purchaser of the Lincoln franchise in the Western league.

Donald C. Despain, manager of the franchise, said he had fixed a price, and while there were several prospective purchasers, no deal had been concluded.

Picking Winners a Novelty.

The "expert" who finally did pick a winner is rubbing it in. One can sympathize with him for gloating. He's picked so many losers a winner is a novelty.

Brooklyn Signs Dahlen Again.

President Ebbetts of the Brooklyn baseball club announced the other day that William F. Dahlen has signed a contract to manage the Brooklyn team next year.

TO TRY FOR OLYMPIC GAMES

American Athletes Expected to Sweep Board at Stockholm—Small Army to Make Trip.

That America will send abroad an athletic team that will sweep the boards at the Olympic games at Stockholm next summer is the prediction of all followers of sport. According to the plans of the American Olympic committee the athletes who will carry the stars and stripes in the battles for world honors will be the greatest aggregation of champions ever gathered together.

That a small army will make the trip is evident from the enthusiasm displayed in all parts of the country since the call for $50,000 was made by the Olympic committee. In this city several thousand dollars have been subscribed already and in Chicago, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Boston, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Portland, Ore., plans are under way to add thousands to help defray the expenses of the team.

It is the intention of the American committee to have every section of the country represented—north, south, east and west.

AMHERST TO GET NEW FIELD

Memorial to "Old Doc Hitchcock" Planned at Cost of $10,000—To Have Concrete Pergola.

Amherst's memorial to "Old Doc Hitchcock," of the class of 1849, who was a pioneer in physical education among colleges, is to be a $50,000 athletic field, contributed by undergraduates and alumni. No intercollegiate contests will be held on the field, but there will be forty acres divided into soccer, baseball, la crosse and football practice grounds, tennis and handball courts, a quarter-mile cinder path and pits for trap shooting and perhaps a baseball cage.

A large tract between the Central Vermont and Boston & Maine railroad tracks has been selected and will be graded in three terraces. Surmounting the whole is to be a concrete pergola, from which a view of the entire field can be had. In winter the second terrace is to be flooded, making an artificial skating pond and toboggan slide.

New Golf Champion.

Harold H. Hilton, now the holder of the amateur golf championships of Great Britain and the United States, began playing the game as soon as he could toddle. He was six years old when he held his first driver and took twenty shots on one hole. Even then he felt himself held by the game. Walking one shot hole was almost enough for him. Now he plays thirty-six a day without being worried or fatigued. By the time Hilton was ten he played a fair game, good enough to beat that of President Taft now. Before Hilton was sixteen he began winning tournaments. He knew then that each shot counts, studied the lie of the ball and the club to use.

He now is forty-two years old, and recently in England was only one stroke behind Harry Varden in the contest for the championship of the world, which also is open to amateurs.

Brilliant Quarter Returns.

Jerry Warner, quarter-back of the Missouri valley championship Nebraska football eleven, and unanimous choice for valley quarter last fall, has come back to the fold and Cornhusker prospects for this season have gone up.

Yale Freshmen Crippled.

The athletic prospects of the freshman class at Yale practically were wrecked by the action of Director Chittenden of the scientific school in probationing all members of the class because of misconduct.

"This is a drama of the Nutmeg state."

"Ah, my boy, then it should have a [illegible] cast."

CHANGES IN FOOTBALL

New System of Coaching Gives Many Players Chance.

Old Machine Gives Place to Squad Capable of Experimental Shifts in Course of Game—Eleven Is Made More Plastic.

Football coaching has undergone as radical a change in the last few years as has the game itself, and nothing exemplifies this so much as the methods in vogue in the middle west. There is less change in the east, for eastern elevens are so hedged about with their traditions and "coaching systems" that reform is hard to accomplish with the big teams of the district, and as the smaller schools, as a general rule, follow the example of the larger the change is less apparent than in the district known to western followers of the game as the conference district.

The conference district does not mean the conference itself, but the territory influenced by that body, which may be summed up as the states of Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri and Nebraska. Schools of the Missouri valley conference follow the example set by the older and more powerful "big eight," while most of the minor schools in that territory follow the larger.

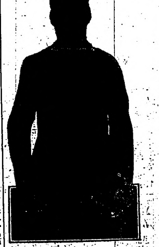
In no school is the change in coaching more apparent than in an institution no longer membered among the conference. The change in Michigan's coaching has been thorough and the work of Yost there in the last few years has been about as different from that used previous to 1905 as night is from day.

That the change is for the better is shown by the increase in strength of the Wolverine teams toward the close of the season and the bringing out of stars. Even in the palmiest days of Michigan's "steam roller" Yost never was able to get more than one man on an All-American football eleven in any one year. Last season Yost had two men, Benbrook and Wells, neither of whom would have had much better than an outside chance of making the all star team under the old system of coaching.

In the years when beef and brawn constituted the greatest qualifications for a player the Michigan eleven often was formed after the first or second game of the season and there was little chance for a man who had not secured a place up to that time, to get into any of the later games unless one of the "regulars" was benched by injury. Everything was concentrated upon eleven men and the whole work was bringing these men to working as a unit. Little account was taken of substitutes and, as a consequence, the team obliged to put in fresh men at any stage of the game labored under a disadvantage rather than an advantage.

From the start of the season the cry was "score, score" and Yost earned the appellation of "Hurry Up" in those days by his ability to keep his men running up and down the field against opponents, often piling up scores of a hundred or more points against his early season opponents. Indeed, the cry for big scores was such that a Michigan team which failed to score more than fifty points against its early season opponents was counted a failure. This was not confined to Michigan by any means, for all schools in the conference at that time were score mad, but Yost seemed to possess the faculty of getting higher scores against his opponents than did any of his rival mentors in the big nine.

CAPTAIN BUSER



Leader of Wisconsin Football Team.

Trick Plays the Thing.

Up-to-date tricks on the gridiron, instead of the old-style tactics, will win games in the opinion of A. A. Stagg, coach of the University of Chicago.

After he had analyzed the scores the other day he made the prediction that old-style tactics would not be likely to land any team on top. He attributed the good scores of some of the eastern teams to the presence of first-class stars and the caliber of the beaten teams, but declared that old-fashioned football would be relegated to the discard later in the season when the championship contenders get together.

Youngest Athlete.

The youngest registered athlete in the United States is Richard Baxter, son of Hugh H. Baxter, the ex-champion pole vaulter and millionaire. Richard was born a few days ago and an A. A. U. registration card was issued for him before he was twenty-four hours old. His proposer was Captain Matthew Halpin of the New York A. C., and his name was seconded by Secretary Robert G. Kanehall of the same club.

Washington.

Settlers on the government irrigation projects, who find they have taken more land than they are able to meet the various charges on, may relinquish part of it and have the payments already made credited against the charges of the retained part, according to a decision by Secretary of the Interior Fisher.

Secretary of the Interior Fisher is of the opinion that much of the $100,000,000 which it is estimated is lost annually in American mining and metallurgical industries can be saved, wherefore in his estimates for the next fiscal year, submitted to the treasury department, he asks for $100,000 for mineral waste investigations, to be expended under the direction of the bureau of mines.

The government will not appeal from the decision of the United States circuit court at New York, which approved the plan of dissolution proposed by the American Tobacco company. While the government may ask the supreme court to review the decision at any time within a year, it was learned that Attorney General Wickersham was not planning to do so at this time and probably will not.

The next move looking to the voluntary disintegration of the International Harvester company rests with that corporation. The negotiations between the department of justice and the compaany have been temporarely suspended, pending action by officials of the so-called harvester trust upon the department's objections to the plan of dissolutions submitted by the representatives of the company.

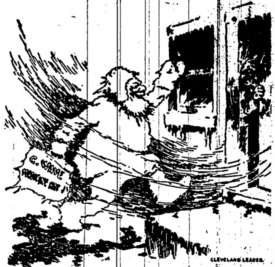
"THOUGHT I'D DROP IN FOR A DAY OR SO"



CLEVELAND LEADER.

W. J. BRYAN ON DISABLED VESSEL

HAMBURG-AMERICAN LINER GOES ON ROCKS NEAR SAN SALVADOR.

BOAT IN NO IMMEDIATE DANGER

Nebraskan With Wife and Grandchild on Way to Visit Daughter Mrs. Ruth Owen.

New York, Nov. 23.—According to wireless messages received here, the Hamburg-American liner Prinz Joachim, on which William J. Bryan is one of the passengers, went ashore on the rocks of Samana island, near Santo Domingo. Mrs. Bryan and their 6-year-old grandson, John Bryan, are with Mr. Bryan.

Bryan was on his way to visit his daughter, Mrs. Ruth Leavitt Owen, in Kingston. He expected to spend the winter in Panama, after visiting in Kingston.

Samana island is one of the small outlaying islands of the Bahamas, located just southeast of San Salvador, where Columbus landed. It is also known as Atwood's key, and is an uninhabitable rock about a mile wide and eight miles long. The vessel went ashore at 3 a. m.

According to marine men, the Prinz Joachim must have been twenty-five miles or more off her course. The vicinity always is avoided by sailors as being particularly dangerous.

Wireless at first reported the passengers in no immediate danger. Later reports received here by wireless however, declare that the vessel is in a sinking condition and that immediate aid is needed. It is believed, however, all the passengers can be landed in the lifeboats in safety, unless aid arrives before the vessel breaks up. Numerous vessels attracted by the wireless calls of the Prinz Joachim are hurrying to her aid. Among the vessels that have reported themselves on the way are the Colon of the Panama Railroad & Steamship line.

The Prinz Joachim left New York with seventy-five cabin passengers for Fortune island, Kingston and Colon. The place where she went ashore is thirty miles from Fortune island.

The vessel is a modern boat of 4,750 tons, belonging to the so-called Prinzen class, used by the Atlas line of the Hamburg-American in its South American and West Indian service. It develops a speed of fourteen knots and generally carries a large number of tourists.

A wireless declared the passengers were calm and that all preparations had been completed by the crew to take them off the steamer as soon as one of the rescuing steamers arrived.

SEVERAL HURT DURING FIRE.

Marshal's Buggy Runs Down Children in Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, Nov. 23.—Two children were fatally injured and a number of men seriously hurt when a fire, which for spectacular rescues, eclipsed any occurring in this city, destroyed the plant of the J. PREPARING TO SHELL NANKING

CHINESE INSURGENTS AWAIT ARRIVAL OF WARSHIPS.

Attempt Made to Assassinate Yuan Shi Kai, China's "Strong Man."

Nanking, Nov. 23.—The revolutionary forces are making rapid preparations for the bombardment of Nanking. These will be completed with the arrival of ten warships on the way to this place and an attack will be made on the city by land and sea.

The rebels are holding their own on the banks of the Han river; sharp fighting and bombarding are daily occurrences. The revolutionary forces are now awaiting the fall of Nanking, which will permit the fleet to come to their assistance. In such event, the imperialist forces certainly will not be able to hold "Station Kilometer Ten," which can be covered easily from the river.

A small body of General Chang's imperial scouts tore [illegible] the railway four miles to the south of Nanking. Prior to this the railway had been considered neutral territory. Within the city walls, 11,000 men hold a strongly fortified position. They are supplied with arms, but they are poorly provisioned.

The former Chinese minister to Japan, Tsao, a warm personal friend of Chang's, has been endeavoring to induce him to surrender, but Chang is obdurate. Tsao who is the guest of President Bowen of Nanking university has not yet given up hope of winning over the Manchu general. The latter has stopped killing those who have cut off their queues and has issued a decree assuring the Chinese and others within the city that they are safe. He also has guaranteed protection to the Red Cross.

Plot to Kill Yuan Shi Kai.

Pekin.—An attempt was made to assassinate the premier, Yuan Shi Kai. There have been various rumors that the premier's life was threatened. He has been going about escorted by a guard.

Yuan, however, is now practically dictator. The indications are that he has decided to embark on a vigorous campaign against the rebels in Pekin and Tien Tsin, renewing the censorship and ferreting out the agitators. It is evident that he is acting without regard to the national assembly. The sessions of the assembly hereafter will probably be few.

The government's greatest problem is that of finances. How long the officers will remain loyal without their salaries cannot be foretold, but the troops will follow the officers. Up to the present the salaries have been paid, but for further payments the government will have to depend on foreign loans.

DULUTH MAN LOST HIS RANGE STOCKS

STEEL INQUIRY COMMITTEE HEARS MERRITT'S STORY OF $1,000,000 DEAL.

JOHN D. PLAYS CONFIDENCE GAME

Blames Preacher Emissary for His Downfall—Declares He Was Not Schooled in Ways of "Money Trust."

Washington, Nov. 22.—Alfred Merritt of Duluth, first president of the Duluth, Misabe & Northern Railroad, who styled himself a "lumber jack" unacquainted with the methods of the "money trust," told the house steel trust investigating committee that through loans of less than $1,000,000 from John D. Rockefeller he had lost his holdings in the Mesaba iron mines and the railroad properties now owned by the United States Steel corporation and estimated to be worth today as high as $700,000,000.

Merritt and his brother, Leonidas Merritt, who will testify, were among the original mine owners in the Lake Superior region, and part owners and builders of the Duluth, Misabe & Northern railroad. The elder Merritt declared that he was induced through F. D. Gates, Mr. Rockefeller's secretary, "in charge of his charitable work," to put up all his holdings as collateral for loans from Mr. Rockefeller in 1892 and 1893. One loan was for $142,000. Others were for various sums.

Gates, he said, was a Baptist preacher, in whom he had confidence, and who assured him that by placing a call loan he would not be pressed and that he would be taken care of.

Rockefeller Forecloses.

The witness related how, two months after he had put up his collateral with Mr. Rockefeller, during the panic of 1893, Rockefeller called the loan, giving him 24 hours to raise $420,000; that being unable to raise the money, he and his brother lost their property.

He admitted that Mr. Rockefeller offered him an opportunity to buy his property back within a year, but declared that the oil king told financiers "to keep hands off" and that he was unable to raise money anywhere.

Dispute as to the nature of the transaction arose when D. A. Reid, counsel for the United States Steel corporation, stated that the Merritts had made actual sales of their stock holdings to Rockefeller in order to raise money, and that they never had taken advantage of the opportunity to repurchase within a year.

Another brother, Mr. Reid declared, had redeemed his stock and secured his pro-rata share at $208 per share when it was taken over at the time of the organization of the United States Steel corporation.

The Merritts were first parties to a transaction with Mr. Rockefeller and others in determination of the Lake Superior Consolidated Iron mines. In this the mines of the region and the Duluth, Mesaba & Northern were consolidated. Out of this, a suit by the Merritts against Mr. Rockefeller developed on the ground that misrepresentations of mining properties were turned in by the Rockefeller interests. Subsequently, Rockefeller paid the Merritts $525,000 in settlement for this.

C. H. Martz, engineer of the railroad, testified that he was forced by Mr. Rockefeller to sell his stock in the road because he was an employee and that he had been ordered to pad the cost of the road in a report to the Minnesota railroad and warehouse commission in order to justify ore rates charged.

BANKERS CHEER ALDRICH.

Father of Monetary Reform Plan Invites Criticism of Measure.

New Orleans, Nov. 22.—Any wise amendments that may be suggested to the national monetary commission's plan for the reform of the country's system will be accepted by the commission. So former United States Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, chairman of the committee, told delegates to the convention of the American Bankers' association here.

Mr. Aldrich was cheered for five minutes when he arose to speak. The bankers gave him a rising vote of thanks for his active interest in the plan when he finished. His address was the chief feature of the day's proceedings.

He expressed confidence in the early passage of the remedial legislation.

TOBACCO INTERESTS TO APPEAL

Washington, Nov. 23.—Independent tobacco interests will appeal to congress if necessary to have the circuit court's decree of dissolution of the tobacco trust reviewed by the supreme court. This was asserted by Felix H. Levy, their attorney, who appeared before the interstate commerce committee of the senate to give his views on the trust question.

PACKERS GET ANOTHER DELAY

APPEAL FROM DECISION AND GET POSTPONEMENT TO MONDAY.

Meanwhile, Stay Order Will Be Sought from United States Supreme Court.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Further delay in the criminal trial of the indicted Chicago packers—this time until next Monday—was granted defendants' counsel by Judge George A. Carpenter by the United States district court. As a result the fight to save the packers from facing a jury probably will shift from Chicago to Washington, where efforts will be made to obtain a stay order from a justice of the United States supreme court.

Counsel for the packers effected the delay granted by Judge Carpenter by first appearing before Judge C. C. Kohlsaat in the United States circuit court, where the entering of an order quashing the packers' habeas corpus writ had been marking time since Saturday. When delay was granted Saturday by Judge Kohlsaat it was agreed that formal entering of this order should take place today. The defendants' lawyers, however, caused some surprise by appearing in Judge Kohlsaat's court at noon with counsel for the government and asking for immediate entry in the order. At the same time the order granting an appeal from Judge Kohlsaat's decision, handed down Saturday, was entered.

Levy Meyer of counsel for the defendants after delay had been granted by Judge Carpenter, said that the application for a stay order from the supreme court would be made before Chief Justice White at Washington at once.

SUFFRAGETTES ARE WORSTED.

Two Hundred and Twenty of Them in Jail in London.

London, Nov. 22.—The suffragettes fared badly at the hands of the police. They had threatened to force their way into the house of commons and make a protest on the floor against Prime Minister Asquith's refusal to pledge the government to a bill giving equal suffrage to both sexes. They failed to reach the entrance to parliament.

Repulsed by the police, who made upwards of 220 arrests, the suffragettes resorted to a campaign of window smashing. Driven from Parliament square by the police, 1,800 of whom are on duty, the women, accompanied by sympathizers and gangs of rowdies, proceeded through Whitehall armed with bags of stones concealed under their coats. They broke windows in public offices, Liberal headquarters and the National Liberal club. They even extended their operations to the Strand, where windows of the postoffice bank and other private concerns suffered from the onslaught.

BEEF PRICES LIKELY TO SOAR

Montana Range Cattle Attain Record High Mark in Chicago.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—An unprecedented high price paid here for range cattle has called attention to a condition which stockmen say has been growing more and more disturbing for some time. They say it threatens to make a low price of meat an impossibility for the future unless met by activity among corn belt stockmen.

F. M. Heinrich, of Lodge Grass, Mont., was paid $7.90 per hundred pounds for 20 head of cattle that had never eaten other than the grass of the open range, a price never before stained on the Chicago cattle market for range stock. The previous high price was $7.60, paid in October, 1908, to another Montana stock raiser.

TO MOVE COTTON CROP.

Fifty Millions of New York Money Is Available.

New York, Nov. 22.—New York bankers who have been conferring here for the last few days with representatives of the governors' conference and the Southern Cotton congress announced that they had raised a fund of $50,000,000 to be placed immediately in the cotton belt states for the purpose of handling the cotton crop of 1911 and enabling growers to participate in any rise in the market.

Persons Injured in Milwaukee Start $50,000 Action Against Wrights.

Milwaukee, Nov. 22.—Two suits for $25,000 each were started against the Wright brothers as a result of the aeroplane accident at the Milwaukee state fair September 16, 1910, when Archey Hoxsey fell into the crowd in his Wright biplane, injuring eight persons. One action was brought by Mrs. John Lynch of Delavan, Wis., and the other by Mrs. John Bowers of Cornell, Wis.

DULUTH SEES DISCRIMINATION

EVIDENCE SHOWS TWIN CITIES ARE FAVORED.

Charges Compared and a Mass of Testomony Put Before Commission.

Duluth, Nov. 23.—Duluth, as far as the grain and flour trade is concerned, is almost shut out of South Dakota and southern Minnesota by a rate structure that is obviously discriminately against Duluth and preferential to the Twin Cities, Chicago, Milwaukee and even Winona, and La Crosse, was the claim made by the introduction of testimony on the part of the Duluth board of trade in the hearing of the action brought by that body for a readjustment of the rates on grain in southern North Dakota, South Dakota and southen Minnesota.

The hearing was taken up before Commissioner E. E. Clark of the interstate commerce commission. Summed up, the claims of the board of trade are:

That in general, grain rates to primary centers are equal or nearly so for equal distances.

That rates on grain from the territory under consideration are higher to Duluth than the rates to other primary centers from points of equal distance.

That the Great Northern, which is the short line, does not make rates in South Dakota, but that the rates to Duluth are based on combinations, which are higher than they would be based on the short line mileage.

That in nearly every case the differential in favor of Minneapolis over Duluth is much greater than the differential in favor of Duluth over Chicago, though the difference is much greater, Chicago over Duluth, than Duluth over Minneapolis.

That in many cases the rates to Duluth are higher than to Chicago for a much longer haul.

About 50 attorneys, rate experts, railroad and steamship line officials and interested individuals were gathered in the courtroom during the hearing. G. Rohyall, traffic commissioner for the Duluth Commercial club, was called to the stand. The mass of detail work done in preparation of the case was disclosed by his testimony which consisted largely of the presentation and explanation of exhibits. Nineteen tables and about ten maps, setting forth in minute detail the rates complained of with comparisons between rates to Minneapolis, Chicago and Milwaukee from identical or equidistant points with the rates to Duluth, were introduced.

Chicago Live Stock.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—Cattle—Receipts, estimated at 20,000; market steady to shade lower; beeves, $4.80@9; Texas steers, $4@5.70; western steers, $4.40@7.30; stockers and feeders, $2.90@5.65; cows and heifers, $1.80@5.80; calves, $5.50@8.25.

Chicago Grain Market.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—An unexpectedly low estimate on the total wheat crop of the world turned the market today in an upward direction. The figures had the backing of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome and fixed the aggregate at 3,037,733,000 bushels.

Earlier in the session prices were inclined to be easy on account of favorable harvest conditions in the Argentine. The outlook in Australia, however, was less auspicious and there was talk about farmers' holdings in the United States being comparatively light. The opening was ⅛c lower to ⅛c up. May started at $1.00¼@1.00⅜, the same change from last night as the market taken altogether. A rise to $1.00¾ followed.

There was a reaction later, especially in December. It developed that the figures from Rome meant the principal producing countries, not that of the entire world. The close, however, was firm with May ⅜@½c net higher at $1.00⅝@1.01.

The fact that country offerings were not especially heavy tended to make corn firm. Poor grading of arrivals here had a similar effect. May opened unchanged to a shade higher at 64⅝@64¾c to 64⅞c and rose to 65c.

Shorts covered as a result of predicted rain or snow. The close was firm at 65⅛@65¼c for May, a net gain of ⅜c.

Because cash houses were buying oats the market for that cereal exhibited a little strength. Trade, though, was not large. May started the same as last night to ⅛c up at 49⅞@50c, and ascended to 50@50⅛c.

Hog products showed firmness, owing to the run at Western cities being less than a week ago. On the other hand packers were sellers. First transactions were unchanged to 5c higher with May delivery $16.65@16.65 for pork, $9.40 for lard and $8.67½ for ribs.

The Pan-American Thanksgiving Mass

DON P. EZEQUIEL ROJAS MINISTER OF VENEZUELA
SENOR DON JOAQUIN BERNARDO CALVO OF COSTA RICA
THE APOSTOLIC DELEGATE LEAVING ST. PATRICK'S AT WASHINGTON AFTER THANKSGIVING MASS
DR BELISARIO PORRAS MINISTER OF PANAMA

THE past few years has witnessed an important addition to the fixed annual ceremonial functions at the capital of the nation. This new event on Uncle Sam's calendar of spectacles is known as the Pan-American Thanksgiving Mass and it bids fair to ere long take rank in significance and popular interest with the president's annual New Year's reception at the White House and other similar fixtures. Even at the outset this event vies with any of the other gatherings as a spectacle. The presence of high church dignitaries in their most gorgeous robes of state and the participation of the diplomats from all the Latin-American countries in their court dress, with uniforms adorned in many instances with jeweled decorations, contributes to a panorama of pomp and glitter.

It is rather difficult to trace the exact origin and development of the idea for this unique new international Thanksgiving service, but Mgr. William T. Russell pastor of St. Patrick's church at Washington, is generally given credit for the evolution of the plan in its present form. St. Patrick's has always been one of the "court churches" at the American seat of government and is well known by reputation to almost all newspaper readers as the scene of many memorial and commemorative services in honor of deceased foreign rulers whose American representatives have been affiliated with this church.

However, many influences long at work have combined to make this service what it is. It has been more readily practicable, of course, from the circumstance that practically all of the diplomats stationed in the United States in the service of the various republics of Central and South America are of one religious faith—the Roman Catholic. Moreover, the highest dignitaries of the Catholic church in this country, while respecting the American sentiment for a strict separation of church and state, are, naturally, disposed to encourage close social and religious relations with the aliens temporarily resident in the United States as the accredited agents of governments which by official action or in effect recognize the Catholic as the state church.

This new Thanksgiving service has yet another significance as one of several distinctly important factors which have lately made their appearance, all looking to the cementing of closer social, trade and political relations between the various independent nations of this continent. In this respect it may be said to be making common cause with the periodical Pan-American congresses, the extension of the activities of the Pan-American bureau at Washington, our own government's specialization on the subject as expressed in the new division of Latin-American affairs at the state department, and finally, the latest project of all—that for the organization of a Pan-American society of the United States with headquarters in New York and branches in all the large cities, the projected new organization being one which will hold relationship to Latin America similar to that which the Pilgrims' society has with Great Britain and the Japan society has with reference to the Flowery Kingdom.

The Pan-American Thanksgiving service depends, it is needless to say, for significance, upon the occasion and the personnel of the cosmopolitan congregation that occupies the reserved seats in the church rather than on the service itself as of course there are no innovations in the latter. The routine is that of the solemn high mass and save for the fact that the church is decorated with flags and festoons of bunting showing the intertwined colors of the Pan-American nations, and that there is a special sermon of thanks for the continuation of amicable relations among the republics of the New World, there is little in the program or appointments to bear witness of the meaning of the gathering. That the church, however, desired to invest this special service with all the solemnity that may be infused is indicated by the fact that the conduct of the service is largely in the hands of Cardinal Gibbons, the head of the Roman Catholic church in America, and Archbishop Falconio, the apostolic delegate to the United States—that is the pope's personal representative in this country.

While the Thanksgiving mass is intended specially for Uncle Sam's official guests from south of the Rio Grande, attendance is by no means restricted to the Latin-American envoys, their secretaries and attaches and the ladies of the households. As on all such occasions, the president of the United States and his wife are invited to be present as are likewise the secretary and assistant secretaries of state, the officials of the Pan-American union and others having to do with official intercourse between the nations of the three Americas. Other diplomats would always be made welcome, too, and in this connection it may be noted that just now there is not a little speculation on the part of people who watch such things as to what will be the future attitude of those in charge of the Thanksgiving mass with reference to the representatives of two European countries.

Spain and Portugal might be said to have an almost paternal interest in the Central and South American countries—the relationship is closer and more cordial in many respects than that between the United States and England. Upward of a score of the republics, though they have long since thrown off the yoke of Spain politically, still speak her language and are essentially Spanish in sentiment and sympathies. Similarly Brazil with her Portuguese-speaking people is yet closely allied to Portugal in ideas and ideals. Under the circumstances therefore, it would appear natural to always invite the Spanish and Portugese envoys and the members of their staffs to be present at any Pan-American festival of good feeling. But in view of the recent attitude of Spain toward the Catholic church and the policy of Portugal in the same line since the establishment of the new republic, it is something of a question to just what extent the Catholic powers that be on this side of the Atlantic will go in giving formal and official recognition to the officials of these two powers.

Two ambassadors—the envoys from Mexico and Brazil—with their respective staffs, head the procession of invited foreign guests at the Thanksgiving service, for, be it known, the ambassadors being the personal representatives of rulers are of higher rank and take precedence over ministers who are merely the representatives of governments. The present envoys from Mexico and Brazil are both newcomers at our capital, although Mr. de Gama of Brazil was years attached in a subordinate capacity to the embassy of which he is now the head. His right-hand man, Mr. R. Lima e Silva, counselor of the embassy, is, moreover, a particularly well-known figure in Washington diplomatic circles, having seen a long interval of continuous service at the city on the Potomac.

A personage of invariable interest to spectators at the annual Thanksgiving mass is Senor Calvo, the minister of Costa Rica, who ranks all of the other ministers at Washington in seniority of service, having been continually on duty at his country's "branch office" here since early in the year 1899. Senor Calvo has a large family, most of the members of which accompany him on such occasions, and not the least interesting circumstance in connection with this household from Central America is that all the members are musicians and in cooperation they present a full orchestra, even to a harpist, one of the daughters being an accomplished performer on this fascinating instrument.

Another Pan-American envoy who has been a resident of this country long enough to have formed an extensive circle of acquaintances is Senor Ignacio Calderon, who has been stationed at Washington for upward of eight years. He recently married for the second time, taking as his bride an American woman. Senor Herrarte, the minister of Guatemala, and Senor Mejia, the minister of Salvador, have each been acting as accredited agents at Uncle Sam's seat of government for upward of half a decade, and other prominent Pan-Americans who are conspicuous at the Thanksgiving mass include Senor Rojas of Venezuela and Senor Joubert of the Dominican republic.

A comparative newcomer who has aroused much interest by his own personality, as well as because of the country he represents, is Senor Belisario Porras, the minister of Panama—a republic for which Uncle Sam is supposed to, in a way, stand sponsor just as he does for Cuba. Senor Porras is a great admirer of the American people and of American institutions. Before coming to Washington he had proven himself a capable statesman by his participation in the Hague conference of 1907 and his part in the last Pan-American congress, held at Buenos Aires. Yet another distinguished participant in the mass who has been a member of Uncle Sam's "official foreign colony" for little more than a year is Senor Arizaga of Ecuador.

Sample of Animal Instinct.

"When I was a barefoot lad," said Mr. Dustin Stax, "I had to spend a good deal of time minding the stock on father's farm. I'll never forget the day when father told me to take a rope and hold a couple of bull calves."

"What did they do?"

"They scorched my hands with the rope and turned around and stepped on me."

"Unruly disposition?"

"No. Wonderful instinct. They recognized me at a glance as a small stockholder."—Washington Star.

Forced Himself to Smile

Professor Took Exercises for Face and in Consequence Thereof Became an Optimist.

A professor in one of the eastern colleges once told of a nervous breakdown that he had experienced some time before.

"How did you get over it?" I asked, according to a writer in the San Francisco Bulletin.

He smiled. "I went to several of the nerve specialists," he said, "and I didn't succeed in getting any help. Then by chance I heard of a woman, not a physician, who had studied nervous diseases for years and had been very successful in treating them. Some friends persuaded me to go and see her.

"She began by making me learn to smile. You see I had got down to such depths that I couldn't smile. It seemed as if I had lost all power over the muscles of my face. They had become set. They not only expressed the depression that I felt but they actually added to it.

"I obeyed instructions. I went home and for half an hour I stood before the mirror and I practiced smiling. At first I had a hard time twisting my mouth into a smile. In spite of myself, the muscles would sag. Then I saw that the muscles were actually fighting against me. I kept on trying, and at the end of half an hour I succeeded in making a pretty good imitation of a smile. That exercise I continued several days till I had overcome the rigidity of those facial muscles and learned to control them. After a time I found I could smile almost at will. When I began to be depressed I would smile. At the same time I would resist the depressing thoughts. The combination of the resisting and the smiling would save me from falling into depression."

Some Nerve!

Not very many people in New York know Ransford D. Bucknam, the Michigan boy rear admiral of the Turkish navy, but those who do say he is without fear.

Lewis Nixon was telling a number of Bucknam's early exploits, which had translated the runaway kid who sought the berth of cabin boy on a schooner on Lake Erie into the head of the Turkish navy. "The last time Bucknam was in New York," said Nixon, "he was out a bit late. Perhaps it was three o'clock in the morning when he marched down Twenty-eighth street to his hotel. No police were in sight. A large highway person, gun in hand, stepped out of a dark corner. 'Hands up!' he roared.

"Bucknam came to a dead stop, and asked the robber to repeat his request. The ruffian bawled a bullying command at him. 'Stick them hands up or I'll blow your head off!' he howled. 'Nonsense,' said Bucknam. 'You don't know who I am. Here is my card.' And he walked on, whistling."

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Plan 100-Story Building for Gotham

NEW YORK.—At the recent meeting of the National association of Building Owners and Managers in Cleveland, O., the statement was made that skyscrapers over 30 stories in height are monuments of uselessness. To show the absurdity of the statement George T. Mortimer, vice-president of the United States Realty and Improvement company, of New York, stated that there are now in his office plans for a 100-story building. He claims that from an engineering standpoint the plans are practical and there is no reason why the building could not be constructed.

A few years ago, when it was believed the building code would be amended to prevent the erection of buildings highed than 20 stories, the Equitable Life Insurance company filed plans for a 60-story building, but that was little more than a dream of the late Paul Morton, then president of the company.

When the Metropolitan tower was built two years ago it was thought the limit in height had been reached. That structure of 49 stories, towers 700 feet above the ground. But at the present time a 55-story building is in course of construction which, when completetd, will be 750 feet high. So it will be seen that the 100-story building, like the 100-foot boat, is really not a dream but actually in sight as a practical realization.

According to Mr. Mortimer, the erection of a 100-story building will not offer any more serious engineering problems than are to be found in putting up one of 45 or 50 stories. The foundations will not have to be any deeper, for the solid rock below the surface of Manhattan would support a 500-story building if it were possible to build one.

The building, of course, will be of steel construction, more than 40,000 tons being required, not to mention 22,500,000 common brick, 2,700,000 face brick, 60,000 cubic feet of Indiana limestone, 6,000 cubic feet of granite and 9,000 tons of ornamental terra cotta. The outer materials are in equally stupendous quantities. For instance, 1,350,000 square feet of partition tile will be needed, 2,400,000 feet of pine boards for floor covering, 6,900 windows, 18,000 square feet of glass and 840,000 pounds of window weights. Ninety elevators will be housed in it.

Aged Churchman Charged With Arson

NEWARK, N. J.—Ellis Appleby, of Old Bridge, N. J., 60 years old, deacon in the Baptist church, wealthy and well known, was recently arrested on a charge of arson. Action comes after an inquiry of six years, in which the whole county of Middlesex has been terrorized by incendiary fires. During the reign of terror murder followed arson. The specific accusation is made by an insurance company in the case of the burning of the home of Mrs. Jessie Brown on August 31. In six years the residents of Old Bridge have been strangely murdered and more than a dozen fires occurred.

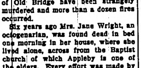
Six years ago Mrs. Jane Wright, an octogenarian, was found dead in bed one morning in her house, where she lived alone, across from the Baptist church of which Appleby is one of the elders. Every effort was made by the authorities to find the murderer, but the case baffled the cleverest detectives. One of those who threatened to bring the murderer to justice was George Whiteman Jr., son of the keeper of the Rooster Inn, two miles from Old Bridge. A few days later young Whiteman and his father were murdered in the inn, both being shot.

A few weeks later a laborer who was thought to have some knowledge of the crime was found murdered in the road on the outskirts of Old Bridge. The murder of the laborer was followed by the finding of the body, in a deserted part of the town, of Thomas Collins, a prominent citizen of Old Bridge, who had made the statement that he would spend every cent he possessed to bring the murderer to justice.

In the meantime the insurance companies, the county board of freeholders and the townspeople had detectives working. So baffling was the series of crimes that two well-known detective agencies gave up the work. It was a private detective, employed by an insurance company, that finally placed the blame at the door of the Baptist church elder. The Appleby family is one of the best known in New Jersey.

Then several attempts were made to burn the home of W. R. Rivers. Another resident of Old Bridge, who was finally forced to leave town because of the number of times his place of business was destroyed by fire, was Charles Hodopp, a butcher. After his third store had been destroyed by fire he moved to Newark.

Cowboy Shopper Is One Real Spender



THESE 'ERE EASTERN GUYS DON'T KNOW WHAT A REAL LIVE DANDY LOOKS LIKE

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—When the fop of the Bar-Circle-X and the Bar Y ranches comes up to the city to buy his winter wardrobe, about the same time his more effete brother, the fop of the towns, goes to St. Louis, Chicago or New York to lay in his winter wardrobe, so there is little chance of them meeting and comparing notes. With his supercilious air, the effete one might look in scorn upon his sun-tanned confrere, while the bronco-bustin' dude of the southwest undoubtedly would break into a guffaw if he saw the other in a Prince Albert coat and top hat. So perhaps it is well that each makes his annual eastern migration about the same time of the year. For the difference between them, at bottom, is very small, after all.

When the one comes back with his new fall suit and his fuzzy hat and his spats and gloves and all the rest of it he probably will think he has been something of a spender. He probably would be surprised to know that the other would look upon him as a cheap sport, a piker, a T-wad, who didn't know how to turn good money loose when he had it. For your cowboy dude is the original turner-loose of money when it comes to buying adornments. He will spend $40 for a pair of boots, $10 for a pair of gloves, $20 for a hat and $75 for a saddle without turning a hair.

Through all the lonesome days and nights when he is "out on the range" he is thinking of the trip he will take to Kansas City the first time he gets a chance. And when finally he does drift into town, he goes right over to Blank's and buys his outfit before he starts to take in the town, sample the brands of wet goods or hunt up a poker game.

And when he gets back on his native heath in full regalia, his lusty voice, as he drives his calico pony at a "short lope," roaring out with some such rollicking refrain as:

O, bury me not on the lone pe-rairie.
Where the wild coyote howls o'er me—
But lay me to sleep in the little churchyard,
In a grave that's six by three.

Who can say that he is less a fop than the city chap in full dress who stares haughtily out of his clubroom window and whistles "Alexander's Ragtime Band?"

Pretty Girl Thief Gets $600 by Ruse

YES - I'M THE NEW INSPECTOR AND YOU ARE TO GIVE ME THE CASH FROM NOW ON —

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—What the police declare to be one of the boldest and most carefully planned robberies perpetrated here in recent years was committed by a beautiful 21-year-old girl, who, impersonating an inspector in the John Wanamaker store, collected $600 in cash from five cashiers. That the girl did not succeed in getting away with several thousand dollars was due to the young woman cashier in the suit and cloak department, who refused to turn over the day's proceeds to the "inspector." The only clew to the girl's identity that the store detectives have found is the signature she used in signing receipts for the money she collected. On each of the five receipts turned over to the cashiers she signed in a bold, firm hand the initials "M. R. C."

That the robbery was carefully planned is evidenced by the fact that the girl preceded the regular inspector, who daily collects the cash, by but a few minutes. So close was her calculation that while she was getting cash from one cashier the regular inspector was collecting from a cash register only a few feet away. She told the cashier that the regular inspector had been discharged and she would in future make daily collections.

Without a word the cashier turned over about $50 in bills of small denominations, which the collector put in a small tin box—a duplicate of the one carried by the regular inspector. The same performance was repeated at one of the counters on the main floor.

Emboldened by her success, the girl made her way to the suit and cloak department, but the cashier there became suspicious and refused to turn over the day's cash, which amounted to more than $4,000. The girl did not remonstrate, but saying she would take along the schedule of the day's business went to another counter on the same floor and was successful in making collections.

Why Daily?

CARE IN MEASURING

SUCCESS OF MANY COOKS DUE TO ACCURACY.

Very Difficult to Measure Foods With the Eyes, and It Can Only Be Done After Long Experience.

Much of the success attained by good cooks can readily be traced to their accurate measuring. Many housekeepers will say without thinking: "I never measure anything." You may not actually have a measuring cup and measure materials as girls are taught to do in the cooking schools. You have become so accustomed to cooking and making certain dishes that you always know the amount to use; in other words, you measure with your eyes. This is very difficult to do and can only be done after long experience. Try and keep a couple of measuring cups, either glass or tin, in your home. They do not cost very much and will save you a great deal of trouble in teaching your girls to cook.

Directions for Measuring.

Sift or shake up lightly with a spoon all dry material (flour, baking powder, etc.) before measuring. All measures are to be taken at a level unless otherwise stated. To measure a cupful of dry material fill the cup with spoon or scoop and level off with a case knife. To measure a teaspoon or tablespoon fill full and then level off by holding a caseknife erect and passing over the top. To measure one-half spoonful divide a spoon lengthwise with a knife, crosswise for quarters. A cupful of liquid is all the cup will hold.

Handy Equivalents.

Three teaspoonfuls make one tablespoonful.

Sixteen tablespoonfuls of any dry material make one cupful.

Twelve tablespoonfuls of liquid make one cupful.

Four cupfuls make one quart.

A half pint cup is the standard.

Table of comparison between weights and measures:

Two cups of butter (packed solidly) is equal to one pound.

Two cups finely chopped meat (packed solidly) is equal to one pound.

Two cupfuls of granulated sugar, one pound.

Two and two-thirds cupfuls powdered sugar is equal to one pound.

Two and two-thirds cupfuls brown sugar is equal to one pound.

Two and two-thirds cupfuls oatmeal is equal to one pound.

Four and three-fourths cupfuls of rolled oats is equal to one pound.

Four cupfuls of flour is equal to one pound.

Nine or ten eggs is equal to one pound.

Two tablespoonfuls of butter is equal to one ounce.

Four tablespoonfuls flour is equal to one ounce.

Juice of one lemon is equal to three tablespoonfuls.—Mrs. Hazel L. Dunford, Utah Agricultural College.

Boiled Rice Custard.

To about two cupfuls of boiling salted water add three tablespoonfuls of well washed rice and let boil for about twenty-five minutes; when it is done remove from fire, add cold water and drain off.

Put a large cup of milk in double boiler, beat the yolks of two eggs, add three teaspoons of sugar, then stir these into the warm milk and add rice and stir until it thickens; remove from the fire and let stand while you beat your two whites of eggs, then one teaspoon of either lemon or vanilla to custard and just mix the whites through lightly right in your serving dish.

Apple and Chestnut Tarts.

These are served in pumpkin cases and made as follows: Blanch chestnuts, then boil them, then mash in a warm bowl. Sift together a quarter of a cupful of granulated sugar and two tablespoons of flour, add the chestnut meal and half a cupful of sweet milk; cook for five minutes in a double boiler. Beat stiff whites of two eggs and fold into the custard after removing from the fire. Half fill tart forms of puff paste with well sweetened apple sauce, flavored with nutmeg; put a dab of whipped cream on each.

Food Value of Fruit.

Here are a few facts worth considering. Baked apples are more nutritious than baked potatoes, and will produce more work. Dates, prunes, figs, apricots and raisins are dried fruits always available. Instead of looking upon them as merely supplemental food—like confectionery—we should remember that they are really among the most healthful, palatable and concentrated of vegetable foods.

Among fresh fruits, bananas, apples, figs, grapes, blackberries, strawberries and oranges have decided food value and may be used as economical sources of nourishment.

Minced Liver on Toast.

Chop fine cold liver, to make one cupful. Cook one tablespoon of chopped onions in three tablespoons butter until a pale brown, add three-fourths cup of milk, into which are stirred two tablespoons flour; add liver, season with salt and pepper, and when piping hot pour over slices of nicely browned toast. Very appetizing. Fine for breakfast or lunch, and very easy to make.

Butterscotch Pie.

Melt thoroughly together two cupfuls of light brown sugar and one large tablespoonful of butter, to this add one cupful hot water or milk and yolks of two or three eggs, four tablespoonfuls of flour and a pinch of salt. Beat the whites of the eggs with a little powdered sugar and spread over the tops.

To Whip Thin Cream.

If the cream is too thin to whip, place the dish containing it in another dish of cold water, leaving it there until it is well chilled. Then put into a pan of hot water. It will whip without difficulty.—The Housekeeper.

Canada at the Chicago Land Show

WILL MAKE A MAGNIFICENT EXHIBIT OF GRAINS AND GRASSES, VEGETABLES AND FRUIT.

A carload of grain in straw, grasses and other of the products of Western Canada arrived at Chicago the other day, and is now installed in the Coliseum, where the United States land and irrigation exposition is under way. Those who are interested in the "Back to the land movement" will find in the Canadian exhibit one of the best displays of the agricultural products of Western Canada that has ever been made. There are representative men there, who will be pleased to give the fullest information regarding the country.

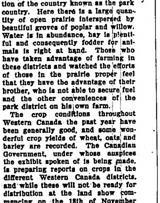
The exhibit shows what can be done on the free grant lands of that country and most of the grain was produced on the farms of former residents of the United States who have taken advantage of the homestead lands of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The vegetable exhibit will attract a great deal of attention, and some marvelous potatoes, carrots, turnips, cabbage and cauliflower are shown.

It is true that the homestead area is being rapidly taken up and the bulk of that now to be had lies north of the Saskatchewan river in a portion of the country known as the park country. Here there is a large quantity of open prairie interspersed by beautiful groves of poplar and willow. Water is in abundance, hay is plentiful and consequently fodder for animals is right at hand. Those who have taken advantage of farming in these districts and watched the efforts of those in the prairie proper feel that they have the advantage of their brother, who is not able to secure fuel and the other conveniences of the park district on his own farm.

The crop conditions throughout Western Canada the past year have been generally good, and some wonderful crop yields of wheat, oats and barley are recorded. The Canadian Government, under whose auspices the exhibit spoken of is being made, is preparing reports on crops in the different Western Canada districts, and while these will not be ready for distribution at the land show commencing on the 18th of November and closing on Dec. 8th, application made to the Canadian Government agent nearest you will bring them to you as soon as they are published.

COLLECT ON DELIVERY.



Jack Harduppe—Ah! Brought that suit, have you? Well, I can't pay you now. I'll write your employer a letter.

Errand Boy—N. G., boss. I bought three letters with that suit and they is C. O. D.

His Honor Unimpaired.

"No," said the old shoemaker, sternly, "I will not do it. Never have I sold anything by false representations, and I will not begin now."

For a moment he was silent, and the shopman who stood before him could see that the better nature of his employer was fighting strongly for the right.

"No," said the old man again, "I will not do it. It is an inferior grade of shoe, and I will never pass it off as anything better. So just mark it 'A shoe fit for a queen,' and put it in the window. A queen, you know, does not have to do much walking."

A BRAIN WORKER.

Must Have the Kind of Food That Nourishes Brain.

"I am a literary man whose nervous energy is a great part of my stock in trade, and ordinarily I have little patience with breakfast foods and the extravagant claims made of them. But I cannot withhold my acknowledgment of the debt that I owe to Grape-Nuts food.

"I discovered long ago that the very bulkiness of the ordinary diet was not calculated to give one a clear head, the power of sustained, accurate thinking. I always felt heavy and sluggish in mind as well as body after eating the ordinary meal, which diverted the blood from the brain to the digestive apparatus.

"I tried foods easy of digestion, but found them usually deficient in nutriment. I experimented with many breakfast foods and they, too, proved unsatisfactory, till I reached Grape-Nuts. And then the problem was solved.

"Grape-Nuts agreed with me perfectly from the beginning, satisfying my hunger and supplying the nutriment that so many other prepared foods lack.

"I had not been using it very long before I found that I was turning out an unusual quantity and quality of work. Continued use has demonstrated to my entire satisfaction that Grape-Nuts food contains the elements needed by the brain and nervous system of the hard working public writer." How Our Presidents Have Given Thanks

WHERE THANKSGIVING DINNER IS SERVED AT WHITE HOUSE

THE two dozen and more men who have in the course of a century and a decade served as presidents of the United States have manifested quite a variety of tastes and preferences in their observance of our great national holidays—or, rather, all the holidays save one. The one exception in the category of holidays has been Thanksgiving. One and all, our presidents have, save under the most unusual circumstances, observed the November day of prayer and thankfulness in pretty much the same way. Indeed, it is something of a marvel that men of widely differing temperaments living at different periods of our history have found it possible to conform so closely to what has now almost become a set of unwritten rules at the White House.

None of the veteran employes of the presidential mansion has even been able to advance a wholly satisfactory theory as to why our chief magistrates have followed so closely in one another's footsteps in the observance of Thanksgiving when they have allowed themselves considerable latitude with regard to other holidays, such as Fourth of July. One supposition is to the effect that the religious significance of Thanksgiving prescribes a certain form of observance. Another theory is that it is the fact that Thanksgiving is so pre-eminently a family holiday—a day for family reunions. And finally, and perhaps it is the most plausible, is the premise that precedent once firmly established at the White House is pretty likely to be rigidly adheared to.

Whereas the program of a president of the United States on the last Thursday in November does not differ much from that of many an ordinary citizen, the Thanksgiving event requires attention from him earlier than from the average individual, who, perhaps, does not give it a thought until the good wife reminds him that he had better engage a turkey, or the son and heir begins to discuss the prospects of the Thanksgiving day football contest. The forethought of the president in the matter arises from the responsibility which rests upon him for the issuance of the official Thanksgiving day proclamation which fixes the date and formally calls upon all the people of the country to assemble in the churches and give thanks for the blessings of the year.

WHERE PRESIDENT ATTENDS THANKSGIVING SERVICE

PRESIDENT TAFT — DURING HIS AFTERNOON HORSEBACK RIDE

PRESIDENT TAFT LEAVING CHURCH

As it is, there is no surety and little likelihood that a busy president will, on his own initiative, assume the role of herald of the Thanksgiving. Accordingly one of the clerks at the White House, whose duty it is to keep tab of the president's engagement and act as a human memorandum pad, reminds his chief along about the first week in November that it is time to issue the customary Thanksgiving proclamation. Or perhaps the proclamation, beautifully engrossed, comes over to the White House from the state department all ready for the president's signature. And this lets a secret out of the bag—namely, that not all of our presidents have written their own Thanksgiving proclamations. Roosevelt, who rather prides himself on his literary abilities, insisted on doing so, but most of the occupants of the White Hause have been only too glad to fall back on precedent and allow this call to be properly phrased by a man named Smith, who holds a confidential position in the state department and has been for, lo, these many years, acting as the chief executive's proxy in writing holiday proclamations and composing those ceremonial letters of congratulation or condolence which our ruler is called upon to send every now and then to sovereigns overseas.

With the proclamation out of the way the president does not need to bother any further about the preliminaries for Thanksgiving—not even as to the turkey for the feast—since kind-hearted admirers of the chief magistrate can always be depended upon to send him especially choice gobblers as gifts. Why, one prosperous farmer in Rhode Island has not missed a Thanksgiving for considerably more than a third of a century in the donation of a White House Thanksgiving bird. Apparently he does not let his own politics influence the size of the birds he sends either, for Grant and Cleveland and Roosevelt all received from this source turkeys that tipped the scales at close to 36 pounds apiece.

Thanksgiving day, when it arrives, is a morning when the president does not have to tumble out of bed at any particular hour, because the president has no office hours on Thanksgiving. To some of our presidents, such as Roosevelt, who were never tempted to oversleep, this is no special boon, but it is something of a blessing to the present occupant of the White House, who is by preference a late riser. The White House offices are open on Thanksgiving, as they are on every other day day and night in the year, and the president may stroll over to dispose of the most urgent mail and telegrams, but there is nothing obligatory about this, and there have been Thanksgivings on which the chief magistrate has not set foot in his workshop.

The one pre-eminent and invariable duty of Thanksgiving morning for the president is attendance at divine worship. Having advised other people to repair to the churches on this occasion to give thanks it would be accounted odd if he did not do likewise, no matter what the weather conditions. Very often the president has walked to church on Thanksgiving, and he is almost certain to find his route lined with spectators who avail themselves of a certainty that does not characterize a president's church-going at other times. Almost all our presidents, from Washington to Lincoln, attended Thanksgiving services in quaint little St. John's church—nicknamed the "Church of the Presidents"—which stands just across the park from the White House, but later presidents have worshipped in different edifices. President Taft goes to a Unitarian church about one-third of a mile from the presidential mansion, but Mrs. Taft and Miss Helen go to St. John's, to occupy the pew that for nearly a century has been reserved for our president's families.

Of late years the president has on some Thanksgivings attended two church services in succession, and this brings him home late for luncheon. Just here should be mentioned one of the few changes that have ever taken place in the White House program for Thanksgiving day. Years ago it was the invariable custom to serve the Thanksgiving dinner at noon, but latterly most presidents have preferred to have dinner served at 7 or 730 o'clock in the evening.

An American president is allowed some latitude as to the manner in which he spends the afternoon of Thanksgiving day. He may spend it visiting with his family or reading, but almost invariably the later afternoon is devoted to a constitutional. A long walk is an excellent appetizer for the turkey and cranberry sauce, although some of our later presidents, including both Taft and Roosevelt, have ridden horseback in the twilight of the autumn holiday.

It is pretty safe for the president of the United States to count on a house full of people on Thanksgiving. The holiday is recognized as the occasion for family reunions, and when, as in the case of Roosevelt and Taft, there are a number of children, the young people have all come home for the occasion—like as not accompanied by school friends, who account it a real treat to be entertained at the White House over a holiday. In the case of presidents who, like McKinley, have had no living children, there have usually been nieces and nephews and other relatives to make up a merry circle, and one mistress of the White House—the beloved Mrs. Hayes—made it a custom to entertain at dinner on such occasions all the employes of the presidential offices and their families. However, in justice to latter day First Ladies of the Land, it should be explained that such hospitality would be no slight chore when there are dozens of employes, to say nothing of the couple of dozen policemen who are detailed to guard the White House.

In some administrations it has been the custom to spend the evening of Thanksgiving day very quietly at the White House, but latterly, with the principal meal of the day postponed until nightfall, it has been the rule for the dinner party to adjourn to the spacious and historic East room for social festivities of one kind or another. There is always music on such occasions, the $15,000 "gold piano" being ready to hand in one corner of the big room, and when young people have been in evidence, as at every Thanksgiving celebration in the White House during the past decade, there has usually been some dancing—the old-fashioned dances, such as the Virginia reel, being the favorites on such accasions. President Taft, it may be [illegible] however, does not need the charitable consideration of "square dances." He is adept at waltzes and other "round dances," and trips the "light fantastic" with the enthusiasm of a man of half his weight.

Good Reasons For Thankfulness

There is no one so old nor so young that he cannot scare up cause for thankfulness, if merely for the pharisaical reason of not being as some one else.

When you do not see the necessity of being grateful for what you are and have, go probing for what you have escaped. From this point of view the national holiday will not seem a hollow mockery of your hard luck.

The woman who thinks herself too trouble pursued to give thanks may "take another think" and say fervently: "It is to be grateful that for me:

"The stealing of my morning paper will not ruin my temper and a belated breakfast will not put me in a grouch for the day.

"There is no waiting my time for a barber to make me a daily sight with lather while he converses at length.

"There is open enjoyment in a bit of gossip without feeling bound to pretend my sex never indulged in such a pernicious habit.

"A mirror need not mean surreptitious glances lest I be thought vain, and if I happen to be loud in my tastes I need not subdue them to somber hues or else go clad in ties, socks, and vests that are the joke of the club.

"There is no need for inventiveness to explain nights out and I can take my pleasure less wearingly than in 'whooping it up.'

"The first of the month means merely my own bills, or some one to pay them, not settling accounts for a whole family.

"A cotillion is an accustomed sensation of waiting to be asked, not a nerve racking fear of being a masculine wall flower.

"There may be a dozen strings to my bow without achieving the reputation of being a gay deceiver and running risks of getting my hand called if I pay marked attention to two fair ones at once."

A GRIM REMINDER.

"Doctor," said the desperate heavyweight, "give me something to make me weigh less."

"That sort of thing merely makes you dangerously ill."

"I don't care if it does."

"Very well. But I can't see why you should go to all that trouble merely to make labor a little lighter for your pallbearers."

New Auto Motive Power.

Automobilists in England—they call them motorists over there—are much interested in the success of an invention known as "solid petrol," or gasoline in little bricks. Its exact composition is, of course, a secret. It contains 80 per cent. of ordinary gasoline, a percentage of soapy matter, and one per cent. of a foreign substance which gives it solidity. A small block of it is said to be equal to a gallon of liquid motive power, and its inventors say that enough to propel a car 1,200 miles can be carried in a little box on the running board of the machine.

With Tact.

"How did they break the news of her sudden bereavement to his wife?"

"It was done with considerable tact and with every precaution to lighten the blow. Her lady friend selected for the task, said to her, 'I have some bad news for you, Hilda, about James, but it might have been a great deal worse. It certainly is a blessing you put off getting your summer outfit, for you will look simply stunning in widow's weeds.'"

A Puzzler.

Mrs. Gaddy—There are some distinctions in life which are very puzzling to me.

Professor Pundit—Like what, for instance?

Mrs. Gaddy—When you write everything bad and mean in a man's life in a book for everybody to read, it is biography, but when you just tell the same things to a few people on a front porch, it's gosip.

Cannot Cast the Future.

A man may presume to know much of what is passing, but he dare not predict what part of the passing show shall disappear, as a fashion does, in time. It must follow, as no man can pretend to place his finger unerringly on just that particular part, then no man can begin to tell just what man or woman living today will be revered in time to come.

Wm A. RADFORD EDITOR

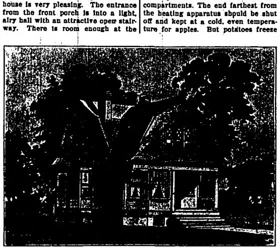
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Gambrel roofs in house construction are comparatively new. The old style was to make the top part of the roof steep. If any change in pitch was required, the lower part was built in the form of a lean-to. This manner of construction gave very little headroom, and it was faulty in other respects. Gambrel roofs were first used in barns. The idea was to make all the overhead mow room possible, but later architects discovered that very good rooms could be laid out in such ample space. It really makes the roof answer two purposes—namely, for siding as well as for roof. The gambrel roof supersedes the old mansard style—a manner of construction that is now very seldom seen.

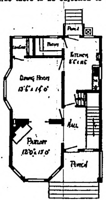
In designing houses of the smaller sizes, the question of chimneys always requires careful consideration. It is not safe to run a stovepipe very far to reach the chimney. When fires occur because of long stove pipes, it is always difficult to collect insurance, the supposition being that such pipes are unsafe, and that the person using them is to a certain extent responsible for the damage. Insurance does not always insure, and this is a case in point.

The house shown herewith in perspective and plan is not a little house. The size is 23 feet 6 inches by 34 feet; and it may be built, when conditions are favorable, for from $1,200 to $1,500, without gas, mantel, or plumbing. But these luxuries would not cost a great deal in a house of this kind.

The interior of this gambrel roof house is very pleasing. The entrance from the front porch is into a light, airy hall with an attractive open stairway. There is room enough at the back end of the hall for a hatrack; and doors open into the parlor, dining room, and kitchen, which is one of the best possible arrangements to have.



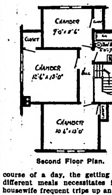
This plan gives us a large dining room with a pleasant bay window. Just the place for a couple of comfortable chairs near the stove, as the chimney is calculated for a stove in the dining room and a grate in the parlor. Because of the open doors into the hall and parlor, a good heating stove in the dining room makes the whole house comfortable. Of course there is no objection to heating this style of a house with a furnace. In fact, it can be done very easily, and with very little expense, if the pipes are put in when the building is being constructed. Generally speaking, furnaces are not used in the smaller houses as much as they should be; but this is no reason why new houses should be built without furnace flues. The furnace is economical when the amount of heat is considered. Stoves burn less coal, but you have less comfort. A furnace properly set makes a warm house all over, which is appreciated by every member of the family.



First Floor Plan.

A bathroom is of very little use in winter without some means of heating it, and a furnace flue is the best heater in a small house. Of course a kerosene stove may be used for this purpose, but nothing gives the satisfaction of a good hot pipe from the furnace. I should like to see a furnace, bathroom, and grate in every house. Certainly these modern improvements are necessities, according to our present ideas. Ten years ago they all were luxuries, but they have since become so common that houses in cities will not rent without them. They are just as desirable in towns and villages and on the farms. But for some reason they have not been adopted to the same extent. Many of the newer farm houses are equipped with just as many conveniences as city homes, but the farming communities generally have not adopted these innovations, and the inhabitants are losing by it. The best of everything is good enough for royal American citizens until they can find something better.

The cellar-way in this plan is very convenient to the kitchen. In the course of a day, the getting of the different meals necessitates for the housewife frequent trips up and down the cellar stairs. There are shelves in the cellar for holding canned fruit and many other things that the housewife requires, and the kitchen or upper rooms are too warm to keep such things in. For this reason a convenient cellar-way, with good easy steps is not only a convenience but a necessity.



Second Floor Plan.

Every cellar should be divided into compartments. The end farthest from the heating apparatus should be shut off and kept at a cold, even temperature for apples. But potatoes freeze easier than apples, and it is hardly safe to keep them in the same room. Then the good wife likes a compartment for bottles of fruit, jars of jam, jellies, pickles and such things where she can keep them clean. She likes to have this room plastered, and to have a good, hard, smooth cement floor, and a god door with a lock for it so she can shut it up and turn the key. There are things to be kept in such a room that have cost her a good deal of work to prepare, and she likes to know that the neighbor's boys are not likely to help themselves. She means to be liberal enough with the kids, but she would rather deal out doses of expensixe jams and jellies in quantities that would be good for them. These different compartments in the cellar cost but little extra at the time of building, and they are there for use for a long time to come.

Of course, there are sometimes reasons for not putting everything into a house at the time of building; and most of these conveniences may be added later, if arrangements are made when the plans are prepared. A great deal of pleasure is derived from following up these arrangements, adding a convenience here and there as time and money will allow. Getting a home in this way impresses its importance, especially upon young persons, as nothing else can. It often is a great misfortune for young folks to be given a home complete. They never appreciate its value the same as when they get it by their own efforts through economy, waiting, and hard work.

It is difficult to know just when to start in and how elaborate to prepare for the future, but it is a very good plan to go slowly. There is a great deal more comfort in a little house that is paid for, than there is in a big showy house with a big debt on it. I do not mean to discourage people from building because they cannot at once pay for their home. If everyone waited until he had money enough to pay the entire cost of a home, few homes would be attempted. Probably in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, young folks give a mortgage for half or two-thirds of the cost; then pay this off little by little, as they prosper. Persons who manage this way have a home at middle life, whereas, if they waited to pay cash down, they probably would die in a rented house.

A New Industry.

"Not yet," responded Actor Hamlett Fatt.

"Then how do you eat?"

"I'm a professional bohemian at a bohemian restaurant."

Prejudice Is a Serious Menace

Prejudice is a hard thing to overcome, but where health is at stake and the opinion of thousands of reliable people differs from yours, prejudice then becomes your menace and you ought to lay it aside. This is said in the interest of people suffering from chronic constipation, and it is worthy of their attention.

In the opinion of legions of reliable American people the most stubborn constipation imaginable can be cured by a brief use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You may not have heard of it before, but do not doubt its merits on that account, or because it has not been blatantly advertised. It has sold very successfully on word of mouth recommendation. Parents are giving it to their children today who were given it by their parents, and it has been truthfully said that more druggists use it personally in their families than any other laxative.

Letters recently received from Mr. E. M. Connelly, Genoa Jct., Wis., and Mrs. E. Bolch, Hatfield, Wis., are but a few of thousands showing the esteem in which Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is held. It is mild, gentle, non-griping—not violent, like salts or cathartics. It cures gradually and pleasantly so that in time nature again does its own work without outside aid. Constipated people owe it to themselves to use this grand bowel specific.

Anyone wishing to make a trial of this remedy before buying it in the regular way of a druggist at fifty cents or one dollar a large bottle (family size) can have a sample bottle sent to the home free of charge by simply addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

PHYSICIAN ADVISES CUTICURA REMEDIES

"Four years ago I had places break out on my wrist and on my shin which would itch and burn by spells, and scratching them would not seem to give any relief. When the trouble first began, my wrist and shin itched like poison. I would scratch those places until they would bleed before I could get any relief. Afterwards the places would scale over, and the flesh underneath would look red and feverish. Sometimes it would begin to itch until it would waken me from my sleep, and I would have to go through the scratching ordeal again.

Our physician pronounced it "dry eczema." I used an ointment which the doctor gave me, but it did no good. Then he advised me to try the Cuticura Remedies. As this trouble has been in our family for years, and is considered hereditary, I felt anxious to try to head it off. I got the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, and they seemed to be just what I needed.

"The disease was making great headway on my system until I got the Cuticura Remedies which have cleared my skin of the great pest. From the time the eczema healed four years ago, until now, I have never felt any of its pest, and I am thankful to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment which certainly cured me. I always use the Cuticura Soap for toilet, and I hope other sufferers from skin diseases will use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Irven Hutchison, Three Rivers, Mich., Mar. 16, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 17 K, Boston.

An old lady, the customer of an Irish farmer, was rather dissatisfied with the watery appearance of her morning's cream and finally she complained very bitterly to him.

"Be aisy, mum," said Pat. "You see, the weather of late has been so terrific hot that it has scorched all the grass off the pasture land, and Oi have been compelled to feed the pore bastes on water lilies!"—Ideas.
